ARMY SUBMITS OWN PLANS FOR SUPER-SPY UNIT

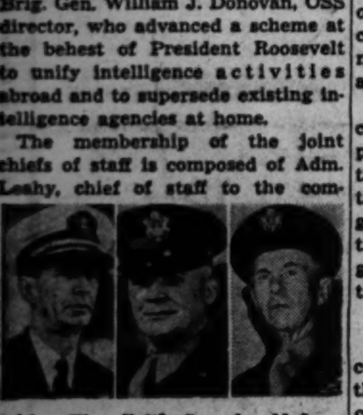
Opposes Control by Donovan Agency.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Adm. Leahy.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—A pitched battle for control of the super-intelligence agency which the New Deal is projecting to spy on the post-war world and the post-war home front has developed between the high command of the army and navy on one hand and the office of strategic services on the other, THE TRIBUNE learned exclusively today.

The joint chiefs of staff, United States, which is composed of the five star generals and admirals in Washington, have declared war on Brig. Gen. William J. Donovan, OSS director, who advanced a scheme at the behest of President Roosevelt to unify intelligence activities abroad and to supersede existing intelligence agencies at home.



Adm. King [left], Gen. Arnold [center], and Gen. Marshall.

Dispute Control.

The army and navy officers have no quarrel with the objectives of the Donovan plan, which was assailed by members of congress as a Gestapo program, but vigorously dispute its control. They are fighting for coördination of intelligence activities under tight control of the army and navy, with the state department and the White House in subordinate roles.

THE TRIBUNE obtained a copy of the letter from the generals and admirals to the President urging rejection of the plan.

Also obtained was a copy of the substitute program offered by the officers, which would give the super-spy agency an almost unlimited grant of powers subject to constant supervision by a board of four on which the army and navy would have three votes.

The Donovan plan, outlined in a memorandum to the President and an appended suggested order, was made public exclusively by THE TRIBUNE Friday morning. In the memorandum Donovan said the plan, which was pointed toward his directing all intelligence, was drawn at the suggestion of the President.

Stamped with Secrecy.

Dog Priority Is Blamed on Army Officer

BY WILLIAM MOORE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—A Chicagoan was blamed today for the Elliott Roosevelt dog scandal.

The war department reported it was President Roosevelt's daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger, who called from the White House to arrange the dog's airplane transportation. But the Chicagoan granted the dog an A priority, the army said, and commented:

"A serious mistake has been made and it cannot be justified."

The Chicagoan is Col. Ray W. Ireland, assistant chief of staff for priorities and traffic of the air transport command.

Senate Group Digs Up Story.

Ireland had been previously mentioned as the officer who granted Col. Roosevelt's dog the priority after receiving a call from Mrs. Roosevelt, but it was not until today that he was officially blamed.

[Ireland was general traffic manager of the United Air Lines at Chicago when he joined the army June 29, 1942, as a colonel. His home was at 3936 Clausen av., Western Springs.]

The army's story of why young Roosevelt's bull mastiff, Blaze, was permitted to bump three service men off an army transport plane Jan. 11 at Memphis, Tenn., while one of them was returning home to comfort his widowed mother, was made public by a senate military affairs subcommittee.

It was supplemented by Democrats of the subcommittee, who emphasized that the Roosevelt dogs—there were two on the flight across the Atlantic—had to take even greater chances than the men on the trip from Europe because no oxygen or life rafts were available to them.

Priority Tops Senators'.

Sen. Bridges [R., N. H.], a subcommittee member who obtained the investigation of the scandal, commented that members of the senate war investigating committee who toured Europe had priorities "two steps down" from the one enjoyed by Blaze.

Bridges said further that Blaze not only displaced three service men at Memphis but also took precedence over B priority freight, which the senator described as "blue streak freight, extremely necessary to the war program."

Other senators predicted the dog story will bring a torrent of criticism when the senate votes Monday on confirming President Roosevelt's promotion of Elliott to brigadier general at the age of 34.

Brought Two from Europe.

The army report said Elliott brought the 110 pound Blaze and an unnamed 20 pound female pup from Europe on a bomber last November. Elliott left the dogs at Preque Isle, Me., whence they were brought to Washington in service planes in two hops.

The White House, the army said, sent a station wagon to the Washington airport for the dogs.

On Jan. 5, the report said, Mrs. Boettiger telephoned a request to Col. Ireland that Blaze be transported to Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt [the former Faye Emerson, actress] in Hollywood, Cal. The army insisted she did not ask A priority, but said Ireland established an A priority and shipped Blaze out Jan. 9.

Service Men Put Off.

Blaze had to wait awhile at Dayton, O., but got on a plane that landed him in Memphis where he bumped the service men off. There was B priority freight waiting at Memphis, but the Roosevelt dog went thru.

The army's report was read to newspaper men by Sen. Stewart [D., Tenn.], chairman of the subcommittee, who sat beside Chairman Thomas [D., Utah] of the full committee.

Reporters then fired questions so fast that it wasn't always possible to distinguish who gave the answers. But here's the gist of what was heard:

Sen. Maybank [D., S. C.]—It was just a sort of favor to Elliott's sister, Mrs. Boettiger.

Q.—Where's Col. Ireland now—in New Guinea?

Stewart—He's been out of the country since this incident.

FLYING WEDGE ESCORTS PAIR OUT OF CHURCH

1,900 Rush to See Ace and Bride.

BY MARCIA WINN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Superior, Wis., Feb. 10. — Maj. Richard I. Bong, the nation's leading flying ace, was married tonight, but it took 50 armed militia to accomplish it.

The militia, geared with rifles, ammunition belts, ear muffs, and canteens, were Wisconsin state guards assigned to maintain order at the wedding of Miss Marjorie Ann Vattendahl, 21, and the baby faced son of Swedish immigrants, who has 40 Jap planes to his credit. Their presence at Concordia Lutheran church at first seemed a strange accouterment for a wedding, but it soon proved a wise precaution.

The wedding had been set for 7 p. m., but by noon today would-be spectators armed with box lunches began to attack the church with the tenacity and bright hope of world series fans. The "invasion" was repulsed and the doors locked, but back they came at 6 p. m. The result, outside of bruised bones and hearts, was 1,200 inside, all ticket holders, and 650 stamping frozen but determined feet on the icy streets outside.

Saved by Flying Wedge.

Bong and his bride, both abashed by it all, eventually were catapulted out of the church with a flying wedge of guardsmen carving a path to their car. From the altar they raced to a local hotel to appear on the national barn dance broadcast, but the hotel, too, was jammed.

Finally back to the church they came, back to the wedding reception with a seven foot wedding cake in the shape of an ocean going cargo boat, and back to an engulfing avaricious crowd.

All in all, there were only two comparable social events in the long history of Superior. One was the visit to this Scandinavian region of Martha and Olaf of Norway a few years back. The other was the time the Dionne quintuplets christened a ship apiece here and all at once.

Bong Wears Decorations.

The weather was cold. This apparently was why at 6:15 p. m. the bride, wearing street clothes, dashed into the side door of the church carrying her ivory satin wedding gown over her arm. Behind her came her mother, Mrs. Sigurd Vattendahl, bearing an electric iron. Behind her came the bride's three attendants, each carrying her powder blue silk jersey dress.

Young Bong already was there, wearing his dress blouse with its rows of decorations topped by the congressional medal for the first time since his return home. He usually wears a fleece lined flying jacket with a cap perched on the back of his head. Altho outwardly calm, his face impassive, he kept roaming around the church parlors.

Minister Gives a Sigh.

Every one seemed surprised at the extraordinary turmoil outside, but at 6:35 the minister, the Rev. Paul A. Boe, heaved a sigh of relief

KOISO SHUFFLES JAP CABINET TO QUIET PRODUCTION CRITICS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Japanese Premier Koiso shook up his cabinet Saturday to quiet criticism of the nation's war production and labor mobilization programs. Radio Tokyo broadcasts told of the cabinet reshuffle affecting two posts linked with the munitions ministry.

Welfare Minister Hisataka Hirose was replaced by Katsuroki Aikawa, the vice minister. Education Minister Harushige Ninomiya gave way to Count Hideo Kodama, state minister without portfolio. Chief Cabinet Secretary Takeo Tanaka was replaced by Nirose.

DE GAULLE QUITS PARIS; DOUBT HE GOT BIG 3 BID

PARIS, Feb. 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—Gen. de Gaulle left Paris last night amid rumors that he had been invited to sit in the big three conference. There was no official confirmation that he had been invited and, according to the latest reliable information, he did not expect to receive an invitation. Well informed quarter in Paris expected that President Roosevelt would visit France to see De Gaulle after conclusion of the big three meeting.

Army to Fly Oumansky's Ashes Back to Moscow

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—By personal arrangement of President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin, the ashes of Constantine Oumansky are to be flown to Moscow in a United States army plane, the state department announced today. Oumansky, Russian ambassador to Mexico, was killed Jan. 25 in a plane crash near Mexico City.

Cross Sea on Fake Army Orders

New York, Feb. 10 [Special].—The 2d service command said today that four privates who thumbed their way home from Europe on a troopship and then faked army discharge papers are being held at Fort Jay, Governor's Island, for return to their units overseas for "trial by court martial or other disposition."

Three of the men were picked up by military police and the fourth gave himself up, the army said.

Three Seized in Virginia.

Pvts. Carl H. Taylor of Ashland, O., and Bernard Tennis of Hampton, Va., were arrested in Richmond, Va., and Pvt. Francis Walker of Elmyra, N. Y., in Buffalo. The fourth, Pvt. Ralph Keller of Chestertown, Md., was reported to have given himself up to the federal bureau of investigation.

As outlined in an army statement the experience of the homesick privates appeared to be unique in the annals of American military service. They issued themselves fake orders to get aboard the troopship, it was said, and succeeded in disembarking in this country without detection.

Get Into Pentagon.

They then went to Washington, D. C., and in a manner unspecified "talked themselves" into the army's Pentagon building, one of the world's most closely guarded places, and stole four sets of discharge papers, the army said. With these papers, they "discharged" themselves.

The men are charged with being absent without leave, but when they get back to Europe they will face charges of desertion, fraud, and failure to perform assigned duties.

He's Got Drag, Perhaps Even an Air Priority

BY GAYLE WARNOCK.

On Jan. 15 Alvy J. Cosentino of 817 Bowditch av., Aurora, received a franked manila envelope from Washington, D. C., addressed to Sam J. Cosentino, inviting him to attend the fourth inauguration of President Roosevelt.

The envelope contained a pretty engraved invitation, a ticket entitling him to stand up in section B of the White House yard, autographed photographs of the President and Harry Truman, and a little white card which he was asked to return to Washington if he planned to drive his automobile.

Sam Displays Prize.

Gleefully, Sam—for this is his nickname—took his prized package to the office of the Western United Gas and Electric company, where he is an electric line foreman and where he has worked for 18 years. His co-workers were envious. Sam originally professed amazement at receiving the invitation, but later became evasive, even a bit mysteri- But because that little white card which mentioned his automobile had to be back in Washington by Jan. 15 [the day it was received], Sam ignored the whole thing.

As the news of the invitation spread the story grew. Two reputable persons swore that the card specifically stated that Cosentino would be given 250 gallons of gasoline to drive to the nation's capital if it were presented to the ration board.

Big Brother Voices Denial.

The story soon got around that Sam was president of the Italian club in Aurora, and that it was thru this connection that Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] wangled the coveted invitation. But that only served to bring a purple denial from Sam's big brother, Anthony, president of the Italian club, who didn't get an invitation.

Sensing a story that would rip the lid off the gasoline rationing program, two well meaning friends telephoned newspapers, indignantly inquiring whether the White House was giving 250 gallons of gasoline to inauguration attenders.

Cosentino increased suspicion Friday when he refused to allow a news photographer to see or make facsimilies of the invitation and the enclosures.

But yesterday the bubble burst.

Displays His Prize.

The shy, stocky Cosentino growlingly consented to show his prize, including the much discussed little white card, an innocent and carefully worded application for a parking ticket in the area reserved for inauguration guests.

How the White House expected Sam and his wife and daughter to drive to Washington, D. C., on the gasoline which his "A" ticket allows is debatable.

COURT GIVES FLAMM PRE-TRIAL RIGHT TO INTERROGATE NOBLE

New York, Feb. 10 [Special].—Donald Flamm, former owner of radio station WMCA, has been granted permission by the Appellate division of the New York Supreme court to examine Edward J. Noble, former undersecretary of commerce, before the trial of Flamm's $2,925,000 damage suit against Noble which alleges he was "coerced" into selling the station to Noble in 1941 for $850,000.

Flamm told a house committee Feb. 8, 1944, that he was forced to sell under a barrage of "duress" which was "greased from the White House down." He said he had been told that his operating license would be rescinded if he refused to sell.

The present owner of WMCA is Nathan Straus, former head of the United States housing authority. He purchased the station from Noble in 1943 for $1,255,000.

In his original suit brought in 1943, Flamm sought to rescind the sale to Noble, but Supreme Court Justice David Peck refused his plea on the ground the action had not been brought "promptly after the discovery of the fraud." In an amended complaint, Flamm sued for $2,925,000.

The case came before the Appellate division on an appeal from Supreme Court Justice Benedict D. Dineen's denial of Flamm's motion for a pre-trial examination of Noble.

A Navy Homing Pigeon Sees a Long Job Thru

Sunnyvale, Cal., Feb. 10 (AP).—A carrier pigeon was released from a navy blimp over California with a weather message to Moffett field, but before he delivered it he had traveled 4,272 miles, part of the time on board ship and in a plane. Blown to sea in a storm, the bird hitched a ride on a Honolulu bound vessel, and was then flown crated back to Alameda. The travel didn't disturb his direction sense. Launched into the air at Alameda, he flew right back to Moffett field, 30 miles away.

Yanks Circle Manila to Get Behind Japs

MANILA, Feb. 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—The 1st cavalry division, the first to enter Manila a week ago, was disclosed today to have skirted the city's eastern edge in another of its spectacular dashes to join two other divisions in the house-by-house battles with the Japanese south of the Pasig.

Starting from the suburb of New Manila, just north of Santo Tomas, the cavalry sped east, turned south and crossed the bridgeless Pasig near San Pedro Makati.

There they are a little over two miles from Pasay, at which point the 11th air borne division, coming up from the south, is at grips with enemy forces at Nichols air field.

Cross in Native Boats.

The first cavalry's encircling movement was made Friday evening while the 37th's bridgehead south of Pasig river still was under Japanese gunfire. The cavalry got across the Pasig in native boats.

Yesterday a light pontoon bridge the Yanks had put across the river collapsed under a heavy load. The bridge had been completed with little enemy interference.

The cavalrymen are moving both south and west from their crossing point against increasing enemy fire. The maneuver is designed to close a gap on Japanese contesting the 37th within an angle formed by the Pasig on the north and Manila bay on the west.

End Not in Sight.

Yesterday the cavalrymen had to throw the full weight of point blank artillery fire, heavy mortars, and flame throwers to break thru one enemy strongpoint which held them up for several hours.

The Japanese had drilled holes thru stone walls two feet thick around a church yard. Thru each aperture they sprayed 20 mm. rapid fire cannon shells at Yanks moving across open mine fields. One American officer said these mine fields were more densely planted than German mine fields he had observed in North Africa and Italy.

Front line reports said the end of the fight within Manila still was not in sight.

"Houses and public buildings have been converted by the enemy into pillboxes and fortified strong points with artillery emplacements," headquarters said.

Japs Set New Fires.

One field dispatch yesterday said: "All in and around this battle of the buildings, fires set off by Japanese demolitionists wrought new destruction. But doughboys are relentlessly closing in on an unestimated number of last stand Japs from three sides. It was slow and bloody, and ambulances were clanging in and out of Manila's seething center with dismal regularity."

Despite the slow fight within Manila, today's bulletin said the situation is improving.

"The spirit and morale of the civilian population remain at the highest," headquarters said. "There is ample food and relief agencies are active and efficient. Order is maintained."

A tough fight on the southern edge of Manila was indicated by the bulletin reporting the 11th air borne division "is clearing Nichols field." Those Yanks reached Nichols field a week ago today.

Gain Slowly on Bataan.

WITH THE 11TH CORPS ON BATAAN, P. I., Feb. 8 [Delayed]—(AP).—Heavy ground fighting, punctuated by the explosion of American fire bombs and artillery shells, continued thruout the 8th day today in northern Bataan, with the 38th division again measuring its advances in yards.

The Japanese are taking maximum advantage of the rugged terrain. The Americans made some progress today in cleaning out trenches, caves, and pillboxes, which honeycombed the hills flanking the main highway across Bataan peninsula, but along the twisting road even our tanks have found the going rough.

The field of fire for United States guns is limited along stretches to a matter of yards by bends in the road. Behind each bend enemy guns are well dug in and concealed, and the Japanese are ready to leap out of the underbrush with grenades.

WATERS RACE BEFORE U.S. 1ST AND 9TH ARMIES

Dam Nazis Blasted Seized by Troops.

WITH THE U. S. 9TH ARMY IN GERMANY, Feb. 10 (AP).—A roaring flood of swift running water, more than 1,200 feet wide, swept down the Roer river valley between the lines of the Germans and the American 1st and 9th armies today and climaxed the war's cleverest defensive measure on the part of the Germans.

The wall of water which turned the tiny stream into a torrent came from the Schwammenauel and Urft dams. The Germans opened the outlet tunnels last night as they were driven away from the control machinery. Now the tunnels cannot be closed and will continue to discharge water for several days until the dams are empty.

The tunnels are pouring an estimated 1,000,000 cubic feet of water each hour down the valley.

Seven Dams in System.

There are seven dams along the Roer's upper reaches but only two that count—the Urft and 2 miles below it the Schwammenauel. The Urft [near the confluence of the Urft river with the Roer] is a concrete structure built in 1904 and held back 45,000,000 tons of water. The Schwammenauel, a giant earth structure 800 feet thick with a concrete core, held 110,000,000 tons of water.

When the allies reached the Roer the Germans had two choices. They could wait until allied troops crossed the river and then blow up the dams sending an 18 foot wall of water sweeping down the valley which would engulf 25 German towns.

This move would have cut off allied forces on the east bank for days without supplies while the Germans counter-attacked and destroyed them. Or the Germans could manipulate the flood gates, causing a long series of small floods which would wash out allied supply lines on a smaller scale but over a longer period.

BATTLE ENDS IN DRAW

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AT U. S. 1ST ARMY HDQ., Belgium, Feb. 10.—The savage battle for the Roer river dam system ended today—in a draw.

Lt. Gen. Hodges' 1st army troops have captured both large dams, the Schwammenauel and the Urft. But before being driven off, the Germans opened the sluice gates and blew the control towers, flooding the lower river. A sudden rise of three feet turned the river current into a mill race.

By hanging onto the dams as long as they did the enemy disrupted allied plans. In delaying the blowing of the dams, which destroyed two huge sources of electric power for Cologne and the Rhineland for some time to come, the Germans held up the allies by possession of the two huge barriers and then at the last moment caused us more discomfort by loosing the waters in a more or less regulated flood.

Overflows at Juelich.

By blowing the discharge gates and control tower of Schwammenauel, the larger dam, near Hassenfeld [about 15 miles southeast of Aachen], the Germans prevented American army engineers who arrived a few hours later from stopping the flow from the 80,000 acre lake above the dam.

After the Nazis blew the gates the peak stage on the Roer was reached last night at 7:30 near Dueren but the water remained within the overflow canals and as far as could be determined Dueren was not flooded. Farther north, however, where the banks are lower, the water overflowed into Juelich and flooded the southern half of that town. The high water mark in that area was reached at 8:30 a. m. today.

Shortly before noon, opposite Dueren, army engineers reported the river level had dropped two inches and by 4 p. m. it was down a total of four inches.

Smash Water Conduit.

The huge artificial lake behind the Urft dam—the uppermost in the Roer river system—is being drained thru a conduit which leads across country to the Roer at Heimbach. Reconnaissance aircraft had reported that the Germans blew open the conduit where it emerges from the ground above the Heimbach power station sending a cascade of pent up water pouring down the forested hillside into the Roer.

With the capture of Schwammenauel—two miles below the Urft dam—today, army engineers crossed over to the south side of the dam. At the bottom of the dam they found the entrance to an inspection tunnel and went in, reporting later that there was no internal evidence that the dam had been prepared when it was built for demolition, as had been previously believed.

Both dams were defended by the usual German system of pillboxes in depth, crossing fields of machine gun fire, batteries of artillery and nebelwerfers [multiple rocket projectors], and in some places the heaviest mine fields ever encountered.

Six Days of Fighting.

It took six days of the hardest fighting to secure Hassenfelt and the near-by area which eventually gave us control of Schwammenauel dam. Each day our artillery dropped 1,000 tons of explosives on the defenders. And in the final assault last night 400 guns concentrated on a 2,500 square yard area. When our troops attacked they found 200 dead Germans and took many prisoners.

Men of the 309th infantry regiment of the 78th division seized the north end of the Schwammenauel dam, while other forces infiltrated across the bowl shaped plateau formed by the crescent of the river, thus reaching the left bank everywhere along the two miles between the Schwammenauel and Urft dams. [The Urft was seized earlier this week.] Doughboys then crossed the crown of Schwammenauel dam, drove on to the other side and gained complete control.

A sudden thaw and melting snow gives the Roer additional volume, and has resulted in a vast sea of mud everywhere in the vicinity of the stream, now occupying No Man's land between the opposing armies.

Canadians Gain Heights.

PARIS, Feb. 10 (AP).—Gen. Crerar's Canadian 1st army troops made new gains in their Kleve offensive, capturing two more towns—Heinkont, a mile and a half south of Weller, and Schottheide, a mile and a half deeper into the Reich forest. German resistance in this sector was increasing.

Other Canadian units moved onto high ground south and southwest of the medieval citadel of Kleve, which the enemy has converted into a Siegfried line bastion.

In this offensive the allies have resorted to using smoke screens. They threw one 4,000 yards in length across the banks of the Rhine during the first day of the attacks and followed it up with one twice that length the next day.

British and Canadians seized Nuetterden, two and a half miles west of Kleve.

Forces on the north fought into the Dutch village of Millingen, on the Rhine six miles northwest of Kleve. Here they were more than a mile beyond the point where the Rhine divides into the Waal and Neder Rhine.

On the south flank of the front, now more than 10 miles wide, an attempt by the Germans to form a line and halt the rolling advance was smashed.

Prisoner Toll Tops 2,500.

As the roll of prisoners topped 2,500, the Canadians and British bored deeper into the dense Reichswald in the center of the front.

Thirty miles south of Schwammenauel dam, Pruem—another key to the intricate defenses of the Rhineland — was ringed on three sides and under fire as Lt. Gen. Patton's American 3d army drove across the Pruem river and was within half a mile of the main road to Coblenz.

The 3d army crossed the Pruem river at two more points, making a total of four bridgeheads north of Pruem. The Germans threw in tanks in an effort to check the drive on the vital communications center.

One 3d army column in a total advance of a mile drove across the stream, slashed across two northern roads and reached a point a mile and three-quarters northeast of Pruem, where their guns commanded the main easy highway out of the city.

Other forces crossed two and a half miles northeast of Pruem. Heavy fighting raged at two other bridgeheads little more than five miles north of the city.

WITH THE U. S. 6TH ARMY GROUP, Feb. 10.—The American and French offensive in cleaning out the Colmar pocket destroyed six German divisions and a panzer brigade, Lt. Gen. Devers, 6th army group commander, said today. Devers estimated that the Germans in that sector lost at least 23,000 men.

"The German 19th army has been eliminated as an effective force," he asserted.

This was the third time we have smashed the 19th army—the first time it was at Montelimar in the Rhine valley last August, and the second was when we went thru the Saverne and Belfort gaps in November. But under the Hitler scheme of war and nomenclature an army division or regiment never dies and he gives replacements the same designation as that of his lost forces.

Take 17,367 Prisoners.

The general's figures, based only on preliminary counts, were 17,367 Germans taken prisoner, 2,773 enemy dead and buried, and 2,568 seriously wounded and out of action for a long time.

Devers said the enemy's upper Rhine front [the portion of the river dividing Alsace and Germany] had been cut more than half—from 175 miles down to about 85 miles and that this enabled us to free some of our units for use elsewhere.

The 36th infantry division of the 7th army today launched three attacks near the Rhine southeast of Haguenau.

The Germans were behind minefields and were resisting strongly manned pillboxes and were resisting strongly at Drusenheim, 15 miles northeast of Strasbourg.

PLAN TO EXTEND AID TO REDS IF THEY FIGHT JAPS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—A pending lend-lease agreement with Russia contains a provision permitting continued shipment of arms to the soviets after the European war ends, if Russia intends entering the war against Japan. Russian signature on the agreement is expected soon.

The clause is similar to those in all lend-lease agreements defining the power of the President to continue or terminate shipments whenever he sees fit. In this case it is being interpreted by officials as having special significance because of the Russo-Japanese situation.

President Roosevelt went to the Big Three meeting expecting some final word from Marshal Stalin as to his plans for fighting Japan. American officials have predicted privately that Stalin will enter the war in Asia.

The problem with respect to lend-lease has been to arrange for a transition period at the end of the European war to serve the United States' interests regardless of which course Russia takes. The agreement which is to be signed, probably toward the end of the month, by the United States, Britain, Russia, and Canada, covers several points in this respect.

It provides for continued lend-lease shipment of munitions and essential war materials at full scale thru the end of the European war. It provides also for the shipment of a substantial quantity of materials and equipment which will be useful in the war but predominantly useful afterward.

Under the President's flexible powers, lend-lease munitions shipments can be continued after the European war, but officials said the only excuse for such a continuation obviously would be the Russian intention to fight Japan.

The Russian lend-lease program, which may total 3½ billion dollars for the 12 months ending June 30, reflects both Russia's immediate military requirements and her long range post-war reconstruction needs.

RED ARMY FOOD IS SUPPLIED BY U.S., SAYS BRITON

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Ninety per cent of the food eaten by Russian front line troops comes from the United States, according to an Englishman who recently was repatriated to Britain after being interned by both Germans and Russians in Poland.

The Britisher, who is known by the fictitious name of Tom Graham, asserted he had been fed lend-lease United States rations during his three months' internment by the Russians near Lublin in the closing months of 1944.

Picked up by the Gestapo in Warsaw in May, 1940, after being in Poland since 1936, Graham was imprisoned 18 months in Krakow, escaping from a work party in July, 1943, to Warsaw. In July last year he crossed thru the battle lines to Russian occupied Poland, where the Reds interned him for three months in a counter-espionage camp.

Sent Home from Moscow.

After he spent another month in a concentration camp, the Reds sent him to Moscow, from which the British mission sent him home by sea with five British service men who had been held by the Russians after escaping a German prisoner of war camp.

Graham said the Poles generally were dubious about the Russian-organized Polish provisional government, since the Poles never heard of most of the officials before the Reds began plastering the countryside with their pictures and building them up as the country's leaders.

"In the opinion of the people, the Lublin government is set up merely to carry out Russian orders," Graham said.

Underground Army Disbanded.

The Polish underground army was disarmed and disbanded, with many members forced to join the Lublin army after periods in a concentration camp at Majdanek, Graham asserted. Most Poles believed, he explained, that with Russia an ally of Britain the Kremlin would permit the London Polish government to take over administration of the country. It is now apparent, however, the Reds do not want anybody to interfere with them in Poland, he added.

Altho he said he had heard of no brutal treatment or mass deportations by the Russians during the present occupation of Poland, Graham told of farmers being jailed for failure to meet the crop quotas set by the Reds. Other farmers were threatened with ouster in favor of Russian farmers if the food was not forthcoming.

Says Many Prefer Germans.

As a result of their experience with Russian occupation in the early stages of the war, when there were mass deportations of whole villages, many Poles would prefer occupation by Germans to that by the Russians, Graham declared.

The Britisher said he could not say this attitude was true of the majority of Poles, but he explained the Germans operated their occupation on "fixed methods" which the Poles learned to dodge. Russian occupation was on a much more thoro scale, which was "pretty difficult to dodge."

The Tokyo born Graham, who reached Britain a month ago, said he suffered no bodily harm at the hands of the Reds, altho he was beaten by the Gestapo, who knocked out one of his teeth. His knowledge of Polish prevented disclosure that he was English.

CRACK DOWN ON POISON LIQUOR IN FRANCE; 6 DEAD

NANCY, France, Feb. 10 (AP).—American and French authorities closed one cafe and cracked down on others today after six soldiers had died from poison liquor, three were blinded, and others became seriously ill. Louis Petitot, French police commissioner for the Nancy region, said bars had been selling for 60 cents a drink made of wood alcohol and flavoring powder. Soldiers were ordered to limit purchases in bars to beer and wine until all the poisonous stock has been found.

Local Business Man Retires Because of Lost Hearing
Edward D. Wilk, well-known sales promotional executive, was compelled to retire from an active business career because of a progressive hearing loss, and remained in retirement for some time.
Today, Mr. Wilk finds himself again an active, energetic, driving executive as of former years. Recently in a talk before a group of prominent Chicago business men, Mr. Wilk said in substance: "Through the miracle of modern science I have regained an amazing part of my life that I thought was utterly lost to me, lost to me for so long a time that I had actually forgotten how much it meant to me. You who are listening to me tonight cannot possibly imagine what a tremendous effect on one's whole well-being, on one's very personality, deafness or even a partial hearing loss can mean.
"When I realized fully that I was becoming progressively deaf, I tried everything in a frantic attempt to regain my hearing—all to no avail. People with normal hearing do not realize how easily they can offend the deafened . . . and often are unintentionally cruel, cutting short their conversation. It is then that the deafened individual usually gives up the effort to listen.
"I found myself making embarrassing or ridiculous comments because I misunderstood others, and felt that I was a killjoy in a group. I had a tendency to back out smiling, nodding, and pretending.
"A blind person makes no pretense at seeing, yet the deaf are always pretending that they hear and usually grumble at people, saying that all people mumble. Poems and music have been written about the blind, but only 'funny' stories have been told about the deaf. I felt that I had no friend to unlock the door of escape from the soundproof cell of silence. In other words, my whole life was changing; I began to lose interest in business, friends, and even my own family.
"Then, just as I thought that everything was lost, through the help of a dear friend, science came to my assistance. My eyes widened in startled, joyful amazement, then filled with tears, for the first note of a new horizon of hearing burst on my consciousness and I realized with a sweep of emotional ecstasy that I could hear again, and was the Ed Wilk of old. With this realization came a decision to aid the many millions of those who, like myself, have been on the brink of despair, that they might rehabilitate themselves as I did and again be useful to society."
Mr. Wilk has not only regained his lost hearing, but has edited a booklet which he calls HE WHO HATH EARS LET HIM HEAR. This booklet is dedicated to the hard-of-hearing and brings them inspiration and hope. It is free; it will be sent in a plain wrapper to any one addressing E. D. Wilk, Suite 1602, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.
EDWARD D. WILK after short retirement again enters business field.

REDS CAPTURE ELBING, PORT IN EAST PRUSSIA

Big Gain Reported in Silesia Drive.

LONDON, Feb. 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—Russian troops captured the East Prussian port of Elbing and drove a new Pomeranian spearhead to within 52 miles of the Baltic yesterday. Berlin announced that other powerful Russian formations had broken into the suburbs of Leignitz, big industrial city and road hub guarding the back door to Breslau, lower Silesian capital.

An order of the day signed by Premier Stalin, presumably still at the big three meeting in the Black sea area, announced the fall of Elbing, 32 miles southeast of Danzig and 55 miles southwest of besieged Koenigsberg, East Prussian capital.

Marshal Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian army toppled Elbing, a city of 71,000. His troops smashed a fanatically resisting garrison which had been bolstered by German marine units, and captured 4,300 prisoners Thursday and Friday, Moscow said.

Trap Is Tightened.

The Germans had used the guns of their last two sizable ships, the pocket battleships Admiral Scheer and Luetzow, in an effort to hold Elbing, the base for German counter-attacks which tried vainly to break the trap sprung on thousands of Nazi troops to the east.

Elbing's fall released thousands of Russians for a probable assault toward Danzig and also furnished more soviet striking power to be turned against the remnants of perhaps 200,000 men originally estimated trapped south and southwest of Koenigsberg.

In narrowing this pocket to approximately 750 square miles of East Prussia's 14,283, Gen. Cherniakhovsky's 3d White Russian army captured Preussich-Eylau, an eight-way road and rail junction 20 miles south of Koenigsberg.

25 Mile Gain in Silesia.

Marshal Konev's 1st Ukrainian army in Silesia was reported to have smashed 25 miles west of the Oder river in two days, penetrating to within 92 miles of Dresden, German Saxony stronghold 90 miles below imperilled Berlin, but Moscow's bulletin did not mention this sector.

The Russians were reported by Berlin to have driven 25 miles west of Steinau, on the Oder 32 miles northwest of Breslau, to reach Kotzenau, 92 miles from Dresden. Seventeen miles to the southeast they broke into the suburbs of Liegnitz, controlling all direct communications between Berlin, Breslau, and upper Silesia, and also reached a point five miles south of Liegnitz.

30 Mile Gap Behind Breslau.

Breslau, Germany's eighth city of 630,000, already was outflanked with the drive to Liegnitz, and Berlin said it was threatened with imminent encirclement since another soviet force now has gone over to the attack southwest of Breslau, spearing to within nine miles of the provincial capital. Judging from enemy broadcasts the German garrison now has only a 30 mile gap remaining open west of Breslau.

Enemy broadcasts also said that soviet forces attacking toward the Czechoslovak border had broken into Bielsko, Polish Silesian junction town only 17 miles from the big mining center of Cieszyn [Teschen] on the Moravian frontier, and 31 miles from Moravska Ostrava, the Pittsburgh of Czechoslovakia.

Battle in Berlin Sector.

The battle for Berlin's immediate approaches also was cloaked in security silence by Moscow, but German broadcasts indicated that the Red army had broken the last substantial Nazi resistance east of the Oder river and had crossed the stream in great strength at points 30 to 43 miles from Berlin.

A Moscow broadcast last night quoted a report from a soviet officer who had traveled 300 miles from the Vistula to the Oder river over roads feeding Marshal Zhukov's "Berlin front."

"A great force is moving on the German capital," he said. "I had to pick my way thru endless columns of troops and machines heading west. Every tank and gun was marked 'Berlin'."

Hint Final Attack.

These relaxations of censorship were considered hints that Marshal Stalin might soon announce the beginning of the final offensive against Hitler's capital.

Other dispatches from Moscow said Zhukov was regrouping his bridgehead forces and maneuvering for positions from which to launch his big push on Berlin.

In Pomerania the Russians captured more than 40 localities on a 45-mile front, almost surrounding the big communications center of Deutsch-Krone, 130 miles northeast of Berlin, and drove a spearhead to within 10 miles south of Neustettin, 45 miles from the Baltic and 90 miles southwest of Danzig.

Menaced Deutsch-Krone is 12 miles northwest of Schneidemuehl, another German stronghold which is surrounded. The soviets said fighting for the annihilation of the German garrison at Schneidemuehl and Poznan in western Poland was continuing.

Where Reds Made New Gains

BRITISH TAKE TOWN ON RAMREE ISLAND OFF COAST OF BURMA

SOUTHEAST ASIA HDQ., Kandy, Ceylon, Feb. 10 (AP).—The British campaign along Burma's west coast has taken a big jump with the capture of the town of Ramree, on the island of the same name, a bulletin announced today.

To the northwest on the mainland, a squeeze upon Japanese forces was tightened. West African troops pressing the Japanese south were but seven miles from British forces holding a road block at Kangaw.

Allied troops were forcing a crossing of the Shweli river near Myitson, 40 miles northeast of the British bridgehead on the Irrawaddy river at Thabeikkyin, 65 miles north of Mandalay.

Norse Troops Advance 6 Miles; Take North Cape

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Norwegian troops in a northward advance of approximately 60 miles have occupied North Cape, continental Europe's northernmost point, Norwegian telegraph agency dispatch from Kirkenes said today.

GERMANS FEAR OCCUPATION TO LAST UNTIL 2000

LONDON, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Germans were told in a home broadcast today that if they failed to fight to a finish they could expect armed occupation of strategic areas until the year 2000.

"Germany knows the price of continued warfare," said Hans Haertel, political commentator, "but it is preferable to be killed in battle than to commit suicide by capitulation."

"History has no example for our enemies' plans of hatred," he said. "There will be no Gereman industry, no air force, not even civil aviation. No German pilots may be trained. Submarines will disappear. All ablebodied men will be carried off to Russia, France, and other countries for forced labor.

"Germany will be occupied for 12 years and strategic points until the year 2000. No German police force will be permitted."

Complain of Air Attack.

Meanwhile the German DNB agency complained of what it called "the allied terror attack on Weimar." American heavy bombers raided the town's war plants Friday. DNB said: "The Goethe and Schiller house and the national theater were completely destroyed and the well known Herder church was largely destroyed."

The Moscow radio said in a German language broadcast that a detachment of sailors had mutinied at Bremen when ordered to leave their ship and fight alongside land forces.

Home Guards Train.

The Berlin correspondent for the Stockholm paper Svenska Dagbladet wrote that the distance from Berlin to the front was "only a short automobile trip" across a territory lined with barricades and mines among which refugees streamed.

The correspondent told of seeing volkssturm [home guard] recruits being trained alongside regular army men near the front. He quoted these men as saying, "Belin may fall, but we will fight on the other side."

German Prisoner Slain, 4 Hurt at English Camp

LONDON, Feb. 10 (AP).—A German prisoner of war was killed and four were wounded on Wednesday by guards quieting a disturbance that followed the escape of seven prisoners from a camp in northwestern England, the British war office announced today. Numerous disturbances at prisoner camps have been reported as word spread of Nazi setbacks on the Russian front.

OVERSEAS M. P.'S SON STRANGLES.

Richard Pauls, 14 months, whose father is a military policeman in France, died of strangulation yesterday in his home, 1510 Bosworth av. The mother, Catherine, said the child was playing with her brother, Valentine Dziedzic, 15, and that Richard apparently swallowed something he found on the floor.

YANKS AND BRITISH REPULSE GERMAN ATTACKS IN ITALY

ROME, Feb. 10 (AP).—German counter-attacks have been repulsed at both the eastern and western ends of the weather-bound Italian front, the allied command reported today.

United States 5th army artillery dispersed one counter-blow on the western sector in the Serchio river valley, 19 miles north of Lucca, where the Americans earlier had scored an advance. Another attack was stopped farther west near the coast at Strettoia, 18 miles southeast of the big harbor and naval base of La Spezia. On the eastern end of the front, enemy raiding parties were beaten off by the British 8th army north of Faenza and the Germans then laid down heavy shell and mortar fire on positions along the Senio river.

Wednesday night British light coastal craft sank an enemy torpedo boat off the west coast of Istrian peninsula. A large merchant ship also was torpedoed but made port at Parenzo, where it was attacked by R. A. F. Beaufighters and left sinking. Off Italy's west coast, American and British light coastal craft blew up and sank two enemy coastal vessels in the area of Genoa and the following night sank a German lighter.

BIG B-29 FLEET DROPS BOMBS ON TOKYO FOR HOUR

Flyers Get Good Results in Fine Weather.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—Super Fortresses bombed the Nakajima aircraft factory at Ota, Japan, yesterday with "good results," the 20th airforce announced early today. Three of the B-29s were lost in the target area where they encountered heavy fighter opposition. Yank gunners destroyed 20 of the Jap planes, probably destroyed 19, and damaged 27, the announcement said. The factory is about 40 miles north and west of Tokyo.

TWENTY-FIRST BOMBER COMMAND HDQ., Guam, Feb. 10 (AP).—American Super Fortresses and an earthquake hit Tokyo today within 40 minutes—the B-29 bombers in probably their largest raid in the heart of Japan.

The number of planes participating was not disclosed here or in Washington, but the force was as large and probably larger than any ever sent previously over Honshu, main island of Japan. It was the 52d B-29 mission against the enemy's home islands.

A Japanese bulletin said 90 Super Fortresses raided the Tokyo-Yokohama area. Tokyo radio said the raid started at 2:30 p. m. and continued for an hour.

Main Islands Shaken.

The Japanese capital apparently remained jittery thruout Saturday night. A second alert was sounded at 9:19 p. m. and was caused, a broadcast said, when a single B-29 penetrated the area.

The earthquake, also reported by Tokyo radio, started at 1:50 p. m. and shook Japan from Hokkaido, northern most of the main islands, south thru Honshu, on which Tokyo is situated.

The Tokyo broadcasts admitted some damage to ground installations was sustained in the bombing attack. Earthquake damage was not mentioned.

"Excellent Results."

Pilots of the returning B-29s sent word ahead by radio that they had found "rare good weather" over Tokyo and had observed "excellent results" from the bombing.

It was noted at headquarters here that returning flyers do not make a practice of reporting results while still in flight. The bombardiers apparently have been able to observe "devastating hits" with certainty, a spokesman said.

The targets were described only as industrial objectives in the Tokyo area. At least seven elements of the B-29 force radioed that Japanese fighter opposition was light. Domei news agency broadcast from Tokyo that the objectives "seemed to be aircraft factories."

The Super Fortresses were described as appearing in five formations, centering their attacks on the "northern part of the Kanto district," which embraces Tokyo and Yokohama.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Forward Area, Feb. 10 (AP).—A total of 2,472 Japanese planes were destroyed in aerial combat during United States Pacific fleet carrier operations from June 11 to Oct. 30, against 123 American aircraft lost—a ratio of 20 to 1. Vice Adm. Murray, commander of the Pacific fleet air forces, announced this today.

The operations included the first battle of the Philippines sea, the battle for Leyte gulf, air attacks on the Bonin and Volcano Islands, the invasion of Palau and the invasion of Leyte. In all these actions the carrier planes were up against Japanese land based aircraft.

A 'NIGHT MARE' WORRIES JAPS; YANKS RIDE IT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—"Night Mares" have been added to things for the Japanese high naval command to worry about. "Night Mares" is naval slang for Martin Mariner flying boats painted black for night raids on Japanese shipping. The Mariners, more heavily armed, have recently been employed in this service for which the Consolidated Catalina "Black Cats" are famous.

In their first month of night operations the first squadron of "Night Mares" damaged a large warship and sank or damaged numerous enemy transports, freighters, and small warships.

On the raid in which the large Japanese warship was damaged Ensign Robert L. Harper, Pontiac, Mich., was first pilot. He has been listed as missing in action. Ensign Clark D. Roush, Kansas City, Mo., was first pilot and Ensign Frederick G. Berchtold, 2600 W. Flournoy st., Chicago, was navigator of a "Night Mare" that attacked a cruiser task force off Luzon.

TRUCKLOADS OF FOOD DISTRIBUTED TO LINES OF MANILA CIVILIANS

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

MANILA, Feb. 8 [Delayed].—Several hundred army truck loads of food have reached Manila for its civilian population and now are being distributed among the people. Long lines of Asiatics wait patiently at each of eight distributing points maintained by the Philippine Civil Affairs Units.

Army trucks are scheduled to bring in hundreds of tons of food daily, mostly Luzon-grown rice and some canned goods, according to Col. David Hottenstein of Nashville, Tenn., civil affairs director. Distribution began yesterday and the word quickly spread.

Much of the food consists of captured canned goods. Col. Hottenstein said Rice was being harvested in Luzon fields with the aid of local labor. Much of the Luzon harvest was left intact by the Japanese.

MARS MEN TREK 45 MILES TO HIT JAPS IN BURMA

Scale 4,000 Foot Peaks, Seize 2 Towns.

CALCUTTA, India, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Mars task force, which inherited the mantle of Merrill's Marauders with ghost marches thru Burma's mountainous jungles, has hit the Japanese again after the most strenuous trek in the history o fthe war in Burma.

In a lightning pincer attack, the Marsmen stormed and captured two villages just west of the Burma road about 30 miles south of the Ledo road and 75 miles north of the enemy base at Lashio. There was only about a mile between them and the Chinese fighting down from the south, and Japanese forces were caught between them in the village of Han Sak.

Offical reports disclose that the Marsmen are made up of the 475th infantry regiment and the 124th cavalry, dismounted. The 475th includes many original Merrill Marauders. The 124th has 25 per cent of the original Texas National Guard members and replacements from almost every state.

Get Food by Air.

The saga of the 475th began Jan. 2 when it was relieved by Chinese troops after the fighting at Tonkwa. The troops pushed thru the jungles 45 miles, leaving 190 Japanese dead as against 13 Americans killed.

They received food supplies dropped from the air on Jan. 3, and that was the last until they reached Mongwi, two days later, after battling mountains 4,000 feet high. Rains made the descent to Mongwi hazardous. Sixteen mules slid off the trails into the gorges, but 12 were hoisted back.

The 124th marched out of Bhamo several days later and cut sharply southeast across the Shweli river, following mountain trails so tortuous that on one stretch the column crossed the same creek 62 times.

Link Hands on Trail.

Col. William F. Osborne, Los Angeles, Cal., veteran of Bataan, was named commander of the 124th at Mongwi, where final plans were laid for the Burma road assault. Col. Ernest F. Easterbrook was commander of the 475th.

Advance units moved out Jan. 13 on the final phase of the approach to the Burma road. The men made a 22 hour forced march at one point following phosphorescent cloth markers and linking hands along treacherous bogs, creeks, and precipices.

The outfit traveled 16 miles of the most rugged terrain in 35 hours with only a two hour rest, and reached positions Jan. 17. The battle got under way Jan. 19. Between then and Feb. 7, the tired Marsmen, short of water, fought the Japanese to a standstill, maintained positions on the Burma road, and killed large numbers of the enery.

SPAIN MUST BE REPUBLIC AGAIN, MEXICAN SAYS

LONDON, Feb. 10 [Reuters].—Vicente Lombardo Toledano of Mexico, president of the Latin-American labor confederation, told Spanish Republican exiles here tonight that the war would not be over for the 20 Latin American republics until the Spanish republic is restored.

Toledano said the war began in Spain and that the cause of Spain was the one for which the allies were fighting now, the cause of liberty.

"This war has a profound political meaning," Toledano said. "When it is won, the workers must wage an equally hard fight to win the peace. I do not believe that their struggle will bring about the same type of regime everywhere, but I believe that it must result everywhere in a better political and social system, giving fuller scope to the creative power of the masses."

MacArthur Greets Bataan Friend

LET MacARTHUR BEAT NIPS, ARMY JOURNAL URGES

Warns of Attempts to Side-Track Him.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—The authoritative altho unofficial Army and Navy Journal today warned editorially that the American people should guard against any effort to sidetrack Gen. MacArthur from command of the American forces that will invade Japan.

The future of the American general, who has advanced consistently with lowest losses altho neglected and under supplied, has been a matter of speculation ever since he dramatically fulfilled his promise to return to the Philippines.

MacArthur himself took cognizance of the speculation that he will be "thru" after liberation of the Philippines in a statement at Manila leaving his future up to his commander in chief, President Roosevelt.

Wants to Invade Japan.

The President had not been kindly disposed toward MacArthur from the time of Pearl Harbor because, as he confided to intimates, he feared that the general might oppose him in the 1944 Presidential race. Not until it was clear that MacArthur had no political ambitions did Mr. Roosevelt confer with the hero of the Pacific conflict.

In his Manila statement MacArthur made it clear that he desires to go on to Tokyo. There has been no word from the White House on the statement. The President is attending the Big Three conference in southern Russia and may clarify MacArthur's future on his return.

In the meantime it was considered significant that the White House has not sent a message of congratulations to MacArthur on the taking of Manila, altho one was sent to President Osmena of the commonwealth. The failure to send a message to MacArthur was the more noticeable because Presidential messages were sent to Eisenhower on landings in Africa, Italy, and France.

Should Be No Question.

"The American people should be on their guard to prevent General of the Army MacArthur from being sidetracked from the command of the armies that will invade Japan," the Journal said.

"In view of the superb leadership he has furnished, the significant results obtained by purely American forces, and the low number of casualties sustained, it would seem that there should be no question about his continued leadership. However, reports are current that the plans for the invasion, which have been approved, contemplate his retention for the clean-up job in the Philippines, and the assignment of another officer to command the invading expedition."

The publication states that no one realizes more than MacArthur the value of the navy's contribution to his successes. MacArthur's coöperation with Adm. Nimitz had been close and highly effective and should be continued in the final stages of the Pacific war, it added.

RAPE PORTRAYAL IN CAPITAL PLAY DELETED BY U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—Portrayal of the ravishment of a young woman on the stage in the nation's capital was halted today by the United States government.

Deletion of the scene from the play "Dark of the Moon" was brought about by Edward M. Curran, United States attorney for the District of Columbia, who sent Lt. Joseph Shimon, his investigator, to carry out his orders. The play is current at the capital's only legitimate theater, the National, which is frequented by government families from the White House down.

Since "Dark of the Moon" opened last Monday protests have been made in the press against the scene which depicts a young wife being overcome by a village strong boy in a church. The principals are screened by the villagers, who have encouraged the boy and stand in a circle watching. The audience hears only the low moans of his victim.

The play, by Howard Richardson and William Berney, won Stanford university's Maxwell Anderson award. It is ostensibly the dramatization of a Smoky mountains legend.

WPB RECEDES, ALLOWS PAPER TO BUILD PLANT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—Reversing two previous denials, the war production board today approved the application of the River News, a weekly newspaper at Rio Vista, Cal., to construct a $14,000 building to replace one damaged by fire.

The decision was announced by the construction reconsideration committee of the WPB, which said it based the reversal upon "further submission of facts by its San Francisco regional office."

The case was heard earlier this week in Washington, where the committee opened its doors for a public hearing after seven California congressmen protested WPB's decision in the case.

The decision will permit Charles W. Flodin, publisher, to continue existence of the newspaper. It will allow him to erect a one story building to replace rented quarters which were damaged by fire and condemned by city authorities as beyond repair.

BILIBID INTERNEE FINDS WIFE AND CHILD AT TOMAS

Imprisoned for 3 Years 9 Blocks Apart.

BY DONALD STARR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lt. W. J. Hinkle [top] and Rupert Foley.

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 10.—Copies of the Overseas edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, printed at Lingayen bay, were shown the prisoners and internees from Chicagoland rescued from Bilibid prison today. For all, it was the first American newspaper they had seen since the outbreak of the war, and their delight was evident in brightened faces.

Raymond D. Flatland, civilian engineer who helped the army install guns at Bataan and on Corregidor, said: "Dick Tracy! Can you beat it? What are you fellows going to do about bringing us up to date on Chicago news and The Tribune comics?"

Finds Wife and Child.

Flatland, who lived in Bloomer, Wis., before the war, was taken prisoner at Corregidor. When he was removed to Santo Tomas, he found his wife and 11 year old daughter, whom he had not seen since his capture. Altho they were interned only nine blocks from him, he had not been allowed to see them since coming to Manila.

Several residents of Chicagoland were among the prisoners of war at Bilibid. Among them was Robert C. Elfstrom of Racine, Wis., who was an electrician's mate first class when he was captured at Corregidor.

Rupert Foley of Gary, Ind., a civilian internee, was removed with several hundred other Americans from Baguio camp to Bilibid on Dec. 28, replacing a large shipment of prisoners of war who were sent to Japan. Foley said that in the 14 hour trip by truck down the highway from Baguio to Manila, the road was filled with ragged Jap troops moving northward. It was an army tied together with string, and included not more than three weapons as large as anti-tank guns.

Word of Maywood Men.

Pvt. Robert Watson of Wood River, Neb., had word of the Maywood tank battalion. Fellow prisoners working on the Manila pier told Watson two of the Maywood group were put aboard a ship bound for Japan.

Pvt. Watson had been a close friend of the two men and had been taken prisoner with them when Corregidor fell. British prisoners who survived the sinking of a ship on which they were en route to Japan and now are lodged here said they had met and talked in Singapore with survivors of the United States cruiser Houston, which was sunk in the battle of the Java sea in February, 1942.

Lt. Walter J. Hinkle of Chicago, who was captured on Mindanao, where he was leading Philippine scouts, has managed to keep a diary since the day he was taken prisoner. He has written approximately 250,000 words.

CHILD BORN IN CAMP.

Rupert Foley, 34, who formerly lived at 411 W. 8th av., Gary, and worked as a metallurgist in the Gary works of the Carnegie-Illinois steel corporation, is the son of Mrs. Jennie Foley, 505 Fillmore st., Gary. He went to the Philippines five years ago as a foreman for the Big Wedge Mining company at Atok, north of Baguio. He married an American girl, Miss Betty Halsema of New Brendon, O., who was a teacher in the Philippines. Their son, Michael, 2, was born in the concentration camp.

First Lt. Walter J. Hinkle, 27, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Hinkle, 8158 S. Green st. He was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1940, and was inducted in October of that year. He left for the Philippines in April, 1941. His wounded right foot was amputated in a prison camp by an American surgeon.

EGGS, ORANGES BRING INTERNEES BACK TO HEALTH

SANTO TOMAS, Manila, Feb. 10 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Guy Denis of Salem, Va., theater surgeon of the Southwest Pacific area, said here today that the health outlook for more than 3,700 liberated civilian internees is fine and that plans were rapidly taking form to handle the sick and wounded.

The general said beri-beri, the curse of the camp during more than three years of imprisonment, "can be cured with proper diet of essential foods. Eggs, orange juice, and vegetables will build these people back to normal in a short time and the ill effects of the disease will completely vanish."

Some Go by Ship.

Altho plans have been made to transport a majority of the liberated Americans, Britons, and other allied nationals to rear areas by plane, Gen. Denis said in many cases high altitudes would be dangerous. He was checking to determine how many could be flown out with no ill effects.

The general said, "My fear is that prolonged flying might bring about paralysis of the heart in beri-beri cases, and I have ordered my doctors to schedule those people for ocean transport.

"The army has the shipping. It is being made ready now, together with hospital facilities. There are ample clothes to accommodate a majority of the internees. As soon as possible these people will be returned to the United States."

Hundred Army Nurses Arrive.

Gen. Denis pointed out that the Santo Tomas water supply and sewage system might be disrupted during the fighting now raging in Manila, and that the army had considered every possible eventuality and was prepared to meet any situation.

One hundred army nurses, flown in from the United States and rear areas of the Southwest Pacific, went to work relieving internee nurses, including 65 army nurses captured at Corregidor, who had been working in the camp hospitals.

Wilmette Voters Defeat Bond Issue for Park

Wilmette voters, by a margin of 116, yesterday defeated a proposal to issue $150,000 bonds for the purchase of approximately five acres of land adjacent to the Logan school as a new park site. The vote was: 653 against; 537 for.

15 Millionth Guest Given Watch at Service Center

Frank Edward Hale, Negro, hospital apprentice 1st class, yesterday became the 15 millionth person to attend the Chicago service men's centers. A resident of Birmingham, Ala., he is stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Training station. Mrs. Edward J. Kelly presented to Hale a waterproof, shockproof wristwatch, the gift of the Credit Jewelers association of Chicago. The award was made in service center No. 3, 50 E. 49th st.

USO SHOW CHIEF DENIES 'INFERIOR TALENT' CHARGE

Replies to Reports of G.I. Criticism in Belgium.

New York, Feb. 10 [Special].—Lawrence Phillips, executive vice president of U. S. O.-Camp Shows, Inc., issued a statement tonight in which he replied to criticisms to U. S. O. shows in Belgium by American soldiers, as reported by John Thompson, Chicago Tribune war correspondent with the American 1st army.

Thompson reported that the 1st army special service officers have staged three different shows using Belgian entertainers because the G. I.s think the USO is not providing sufficient and satisfactory entertainment for troops.

Says Reports Differ.

Phillips said Thompson's information "is very different from information supplied the USO by the special services division, Maj. Gen. Stephen G. Henry, assistant chief of staff of the army, and many soldiers at the front who express their opinions directly to us or indirectly thru their mothers and fathers here."

Phillips said that if the G. I.s are walking out on the USO shows, as Thompson reported, he [Phillips] does not understand why headquarters of the European theater of operations has asked for 20 additional overseas entertainment units, consisting of 118 entertainers, in March, or why five camp shows have been transferred from England to the continent to increase entertainment there.

Denies "Inferior Talent."

Phillips disputed the reported G. I. charge that the USO has been shipping over "inferior talent." He said:

BISHOP URGES ODT RULE ON CHURCH TRAVEL

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10 (AP).—Bishop Fred P. Corson, head of the Methodist church in the Philadelphia area, today called for a clear statement of policy by the office of defense transportation concerning church conferences.

"Church corporations should not be placed in the same category for ODT consideration as bartenders' conferences and pleasure conventions," Bishop Corson said.

Rep. Rich [D., Pa.] yesterday said the ODT's Scranton, Pa., office had prohibited a meeting of the Wyoming conference of the Methodist church scheduled for April 11 in Scranton.

ODT headquarters in Washington said it had not received an application for permission to hold the conference.

Mighty Mite Lines Up Beside Huge Army Bomber

PATTERSON SEEN F. D. R. CHOICE AS OUR REICH RULER

May Get U. S. Post on Control Commission.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt's final selection of an American member for the allied mission to control post-war Germany probably will come shortly after the "big three" conference.

Competent quarters today said that among the names so far mentioned were those of Undersecretary of War Patterson, army war production chief, and Assistant Secretary of War McCloy.

Patterson Roosevelt's Choice.

The Army and Navy Journal, unofficial service publication, said that Mr. Roosevelt before his departure for the Black sea meeting decided upon Patterson, but reported that Secretary Stimson protested against losing his chief aid.

Officials were inclined to doubt that the President already had made his decision, saying that whether such a commission actually is created is a matter to evolve from the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin meeting. Furthermore, it was said, the President would prefer to get from Churchill and Stalin some idea of their appointees before making up his mind about his own man.

Other Possible Candidates.

In the event that Patterson should be chosen, there was speculation that McCloy might become undersecretary. McCloy himself, however, has experience in tasks similar to that to be encountered by a control commission in Germany. His work has been concerned directly with policies affecting conquered countries.

In addition to Patterson and McCloy, names of several prominent persons outside the war department have been mentioned for membership on the control mission. Leon Henderson, long in the administration and presumably slated for a post in the economic setup for the control mission, is one of them. Also mentioned has been Robert Murphy, political advisor for Gen. Eisenhower, who holds the rank of ambassador.

YUGOSLAVS PERMIT 3 ALLIED WRITERS TO GO TO BELGRADE

ROME, Italy, Feb. 10 (AP). — Two Canadian war correspondents and a correspondent of the French official press agency have been permitted to go to Belgrade, Yugoslavia, from Italy, and other correspondents from this theater are expected to go there soon.

Authorization for the correspondents to go to Belgrade followed more than two months of negotiations between allied headquarters public relations officers and Marshal Tito's headquarters. The Yugoslavs have shown marked reluctance to admit allied correspondents since November, when a group was flown to Belgrade and some of them later filed from Rome stories that the Yugoslav censors had trimmed.

Despite announcement that the United States department of state was supporting attempts to open other Balkan countries to American and British correspondents, public relations officers here said it still was impossible to send reporters from here to Romania or Bugaria.

U. S. FORTS BOMB U-BOAT HARBOR AND FUEL DEPOT

LONDON, Feb. 11 [Sunday]—(AP).—Allied night raiders aroused western Germany early today, the Nazi radio reported, after a series of day long attacks by front line bombers and fighters which flew 1,500 sorties yesterday against reich villages along the Rhine.

A force of 150 American heavy bombers and 130 fighters smashed U-boat pens at Ijmuiden, Holland, and exploded a gasoline dump at Duelmen, southwest of Muenster, Germany, yesterday. Two Flying Fortresses were reported lost and 16 continent based craft were missing, but a dozen fortified German villages were ripped apart by dive bombers and strafers.

The United States 9th air force flew almost 900 sorties and the R. A. F. 2d tactical air force made 600 trips over the front lines, the pilots concentrating on transport feeding into German positions and hitting 420 pieces of rail equipment and 147 vehicles.

NEW GUNSIGHTS HELP TO ROUT AXIS AIRMEN

Dayton, O., Feb. 10 (AP).—Development of new gunnery sighting devices is making aerial fire power accuracy easier for the United States to achieve, Maj. Gen. K. B. Wolfe, chief of engineering and procurement of the air technical service command at Wright field, near here, reported today.

One of the newest devices designed specifically for hand held guns is proving a boon to waist gunners on bombers and is in production on a large scale, Wolfe said.

Rule Out Human Error.

Sights adapted for fighters and turret installations, the origin of which is British, are in production for both the A. A. F. and the United States navy.

Altho details were not disclosed, Wolfe declared: "I can say these new types of devices will take practically all chance for human error out of aiming aircraft guns. The gunner merely lines up the target in his sights and trips the firing mechanism."

Factors entering into development of this near perfect sight would include weather, height of plane, wind force against plane, direction of rotation of propellers, and barrel expansion.

Because a bullet fired from a machine gun does not have its direction stabilized within the first 86 to 100 feet after its clears the barrel, propeller rotation tends to "throw" the missile off its true path and must be allowed for as in the case of other factors.

Developed by Private Firm.

Even with all allowances provided for in the final aiming formula, the sight would be worthless if the gunner fired a steady burst from his gun. This is because the barrel, enlarged from the heat of protracted firing, would cease to ject the projectile on a course established as true by the precision instruments involved in the sighting apparatus.

Developed by a private company the sights were tested extensively at Selfridge field, Mich. Approved by the army air forces, they have given aerial gunners in the A. A. F. a sight which has been highly instrumental in the tremendous air victories recorded against fighter planes.

MYSTERY GIRL OF G. I. PHOTO IS IDENTIFIED

Miss Marie Greene.

Memo to Sgt. Willard C. Kane of an American tank destroyer battalion "somewhere in Germany: Your "mystery girl," whose picture you found "over there," and whom you want to name the "pin-up girl" of your outfit, was identified yesterday by the young woman herself as well as by two readers of THE TRIBUNE.

She is Miss Marie Greene, about 22, of 4630 Beacon st., a waitress on the 6 p. m. shift in the restaurant and cocktail lounge at 1105 Granville av. She told THE TRIBUNE that she is flattered to be considered the battalion's pin-up, but that she wonders what her friend, Tech. Sgt. Albert Miller, to whom she gave the picture, will think of the nomination.

She had a letter recently from the sergeant, whose sister, Mrs. Eleanor Beck, lives in Deerfield, telling her that he had to leave her photograph behind because, under battle conditions, he was not allowed to carry a lot of personal belongings.

70 Freed Yanks, Britons Set to Go Home, Say Poles

GETS INTO ARMY AFTER 2 YEARS AT WAR FRONTS

After serving with the army field service in the Mediterranean theater for two years, first as ambulance driver and later as a lieutenant in charge of transportation and supplies, Warren A. Kraft of Detroit, Mich., yesterday was at the recruit reception center at Fort Sheridan—a private in the army.

Kraft tried to join the army in 1942, but was rejected because of impaired vision in one eye. He then joined the army field service, a civilian auxiliary, and was sent to the Mediterranean area, where he participated in a half dozen campaigns.

Last April Lt. Kraft resigned his field service commission and returned to Detroit. Last Monday he was successful in his attempt to join the army.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The first week of the provisional consultative assembly's new session closed today with the Communists thruout giving a perfect performance in their new role of "government party."

Carrying out the program recently announced by Maurice Thorez, its leader, the Communist party has dropped its rowdy manners and is trailing along on any road the government chooses to take. This strange exhibition of teamwork, however, is viewed with more astonishment than conviction. Moderates remember that when Thorez promised his followers "would make no demands of a Socialist or Communist nature," he added, "for the present."

The Communists seem to have dynamited pending negotiations with the Socialists for revival of the Front Populaire. During the week's debates the two parties split on every controversial issue before the assembly, with the Reds supporting the government, and the Socialists, together with the big resistance groups, in the opposition.

Reds Oppose Own Measures.

The split was first manifested at the outset of the session. Jules Moch, in the name of the Socialist party, put forward the resistance demands, including a tax on wealth, blocking of large fortunes, seizure of illegal profits, exchange of bank notes, and other measures formerly advocated by the Communists.

Rene Pleven, conservative finance minister, expressed doubts as to the wisdom of Moch's plan. The Communist delegates then went to some pains to show their indifference to the Socialist proposals.

An even more conspicuous demonstration of the new Red attitude came during yesterday's sitting, when Francois de Menthon, minister of justice, indicated that the case of the 100 deputies who voted for Marshal Petain in 1940 and now demand rehabilitation would be submitted shortly to official examination. Any attempt to whitewash these deputies is bitterly opposed by the Socialists and by nearly all resistance groups. But the Communists, who until recently took the lead in demanding ostracism and punishment for all who had any truck with Vichy, supported the government on the question.

Favor Gag on Fascists.

The Communists and Socialists saw eye to eye on only one thing. This was the minister of justice's maneuver to gag the Fascist opposition in the forthcoming elections. Both voted in favor of a resolution permitting the civic courts to suspend temporarily the rights of members of "anti-national" groups to vote or to be eligible for public office.

The whole political situation is expected to be clarified next week when Gen. de Gaulle addresses the assembly on domestic policy. During this speech the chief of government probably will take up the ticklish problem of nationalization of the country's big industries and public services.

Meanwhile, the Communists and Socialists, together with the Federation Generale du Travail, which has 4,000,000 members, and the Movement of National Liberation, whose membership numbers a half million, as well as Front National and other left wing and resistance groups, will stage a demonstration tomorrow to celebrate "the victory of the republic over fascism."

SCHOOL CHOICE UP TO VETERANS, EDUCATOR SAYS

Dr. Lynn T. White Jr.

Veterans seeking college educations under the G. I. bill of rights are likely to find the rehabilitation advisers recommending vocational schools to the detriment of the liberal arts colleges, President Carey Croneis of Beloit college said yesterday at the third annual Alumnae college. This is sponsored by the Chicago College club and the Woman's College Board of Chicago at 30 N. Michigan av.

He said a substantial percentage of veterans going to college should be educated to become "imaginative leaders." The rehabilitation service, he said, has only an advisory duty—the veteran may insist on his choice of school.

Dr. Lynn T. White Jr., president of Mills college, Oakland, Cal., said American colleges would make a great contribution to the world by training foreign students and sending them home "carrying new skills and attitudes."

Dr. Fay-Cooper Cole, chairman of the department of anthropology of the University of Chicago, said training in tolerance should be started in the home and carried on in college.

2 CITY RESERVE MILITIA UNITS FIRST IN STATE

Two Chicago units of the Illinois reserve militia took first place for January in the drill attendance contests sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, it was disclosed yesterday.

Figures compiled by Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, state adjutant general, showed the 8th infantry, 3715 Giles av., placed first among seven regiments with an average of 71.1 per cent. Company A, 1st infantry, with headquarters in the Northwest armory at Kedzie and North avs., had the highest attendance among 79 rifle companies with an average of 91.5 per cent.

Company G of the 8th regiment, winner of the 1944 contest, will receive the trophy presented by THE TRIBUNE tonight at 6:30 in the Giles av. armory as part of a Lincoln day celebration. The public is invited to the presentation, a review, and an open house which starts at 3 p. m. Company G is commanded by Capt. John P. Meadows, an employe of the Chicago quartermaster depot. The first sergeant is Robert O. Woods, an employe of the Illinois Bell Telephone company.

TWYMAN NAMED 3D JUDGE IN TRIBUNE'S PRIZE ESSAY TEST

Robert W. Twyman.

Robert W. Twyman, teacher of history at St. Ignatius High school and Gary [Ind.] Junior college and holder of a degree of master of arts in American history from the University of Chicago, has been named a member of the adjudication committee of three which will choose the winning papers in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S "Citizens of Tomorrow" American history essay contest for high school students.

The other members are Dr. William W. Sweet of the University of Chicago and Harold Korey of the Senn High school staff.

The contest is open to all high school pupils living in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Iowa. Prizes are one war bond of $500 maturity value, one of $100, and five of $50.

Essays must be typewritten—on only one side of the paper—and double spaced. No name may appear on them, but a sealed envelope must be attached containing the name, age, and address of the writer and the name and location of the high school he attends. Entries must be addressed to Philip Maxwell, Principal of the Air, "Citizens of Tomorrow," CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago 11, Ill., and must reach Tribune Tower by 6 p. m. March 1. The decision of the judges will be final.

RUTHVEN WARNS OF SKILL LOST BY PEACE DRAFT

Midwest Educators Tell Views on Plan.

(This is another article in a series on compulsory military training in peace time, expressing arguments for and against the plan and reviewing official action.)

BY HARRY M'CLAIN.

That the United States has lost an entire generation of specialists by permitting boys to go directly from high school into the military service is the expressed opinion of Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan. Germany and Russia, Ruthven asserted, found they had to withdraw qualified youths from service and return them to the laboratories to find new weapons and improve old ones.

Early in 1944 Ruthven directed his advisory board on university policies to make a thoro study on compulsory military training in peace time. The report of the Michigan faculty group does not advocate universal training; it suggests only how such a plan could be effectuated if congress enacts such a law.

Schools Must Be Utilized.

"If compulsory national training is to be instituted after the war," said Ruthven," the nation's schools must be utilized, for they best can perform two services of national importance: First, they are the best source of specialists to operate and improve modern weapons; second, the products of the schools and colleges are needed to inculcate in the minds of a citizen army an understanding of the requirements, aims, and principles of democratic living.

"I am opposed to a year of military training between high school and college because so many boys will not go on to college. These boys should not be denied education.

"I favor higher education for those who are qualified. They would not be a privileged group, but in the end would give more to the nation than if they spent a year in camp."

Would Train Both Sexes.

Under the proposal of the Michigan advisory board, all youths would give a year of service when it would least disrupt their lives. None would be exempt and alternates would be provided for those physically or mentally unfit. It is desirable, said the report, that women as well as men be trained to perform their full part in a national emergency.

Views of other midwest educators are set forth briefly:

Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago.—The only justification for universal military training is military necessity. If the nation must have a large army and navy, conscription and universal training are the only democratic way.

If we have to have universal military training, we should make sure that it is really universal and that no privileges, deferments, or exemptions are accorded.

Would Link Systems.

Virgil M. Hancher, president of the University of Iowa—Opposes any break between high school and college. Favors integration of any military training program with education.

In any compulsory military program, greater use of colleges and universities should be made. This war has proved the need for thousands of specialists — doctors, dentists, chemists, physicists, and engineers—and the colleges are the place to train them.

Dr. Howard L. Bevis, president of Ohio State university—Hopes that a better kind of peace will make such a decisive break in American tradition unnecessary. He feels that a decision now may be premature.

We ought to be sure that the urge for military training is not another manifestation of the philosophy of keeping a certain number of millions of man hours out of the labor market.

Dr. Leonard W. Mayo of Western Reserve university, president of the Child Welfare League of America—Fears parents, teachers, and citizens may come to assume, gradually and unconsciously, that a military training program relieves them of the duties they should perform in behalf of youth. A year of service could not take the place of, or make up for, the role of the school, the home, and other community institutions.

[Another article in this series will appear soon.]

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 10. — London's streets were bare of taxis today when 250 to 300 of them were engaged to carry race fans to the steeplechase at Windsor, 20 miles away.

Fares varied from $4 a person to $40 a cab for the round trip. The vehicles waited five hours at the track to bring customers back.

Battles OSS for Control of Agency.

and cabinet members. They were stamped with secrecy injunctions, altho they are concerned with post-war plans and do not come under security restrictions imposed on war activities.

The military leaders expressed themselves in favor of the unification of intelligence activities proposed by Donovan but against the grant to his agency of power to supersede operation of existing intelligence agencies without responsibility to the heads of such agencies. Existing intelligence agencies include the army, navy, diplomatic service, FBI, secret service, internal revenue agents, and the world-wide radio monitoring system of the federal communications commission.

The generals would create a national intelligence authority composed of the secretaries of state, war, and navy and a representative of the joint chiefs of staff. This authority would create a central intelligence agency to be headed by a director. Under this arrangement the army and navy would have three votes to one against the state department in naming a director.

President in Passive Role.

The draft provides that the President shall appoint or remove the director at the recommendation of the national intelligence authority, which would put the chief executive in a passive role and leave the hiring and firing up to the authority. It is provided that the director shall be responsible to the board and not to the President, as was contemplated under the Donovan plan.

The director would be advised by a board consisting of the heads of the principal military and civilian intelligence agencies.

The draft states that the agency shall have no police or law enforcement functions. Neither the President nor congress, however, could give the unit such functions abroad, and for such functions at home the unit could operate thru existing police agencies. The generals and admirals proposed an independent budget for the superintelligence agency.

Letter to F. D. R.

The joint chiefs of staff letter to the President follows:

APPENDIX DRAFT.

"The memorandum of the director of strategic services, dated 18 November 1944, on the establishment of a central intelligence service was referred to the joint chiefs of staff for comment and recommendation. The matter has received careful study and consideration.

"The joint chiefs of staff recognize, as does the director of strategic services, the desirability of [a] further coördination of intelligence activities related to the national security; [b] the unification of such activities of common concern as can be more efficiently conducted by a common agency, and [c] the synthesis of departmental intelligence on the strategic and national policy level.

"They consider that these three functions may well be more effectively carried on in a common intelligence agency, provided that suitable conditions of responsibility to the departments primarily concerned with national security are maintained. They believe, however, that the specific proposal to these ends made by the director of strategic services in the appendix to the subject memorandum is open to objections.

Submit Substitute.

"Notably, the language used would appear to grant to the proposed agency power to control the operations of department intelligence agencies without responsibility to the heads of the departments concerned, thus violating the integrity of the chain of command. Consequently, the joint chiefs of staff cannot recommend the adoption of the draft directive of the director of strategic services.

"The joint chiefs of staff append hereto [annex] an alternative draft which, they believe, retains the merits of the director's proposals while obviating the objections thereto. They recommend early issuance of the appended draft directive."

ANNEX DRAFT.

Directive regarding the coördination of intelligence activities.

"In order to provide for the development and coördination of intelligence activities related to the national security:

"1. A national intelligence authority composed of the secretaries of state, war, and the navy, and a representative of the joint chiefs of staff, is hereby established and charged with responsibility for such over-all intelligence planning and development, and such inspection and coördination of all federal intelligence activities, as to assure the most effective accomplishment of the intelligence mission related to the national security.

Authority Controls Director.

"2. To assist it in that task the national intelligence authority shall establish a central intelligence agency headed by a director who shall be appointed or removed by the President on the recommendation of the national intelligence authority. The director shall be responsible to the national intelligence authority and shall sit as a nonvoting member thereof.

"3. The director shall be advised by a board consisting of the heads of the principal military and civilian intelligence agencies having functions related to the national security, as determined by the national intelligence authority.

"4. Subject to the direction and control of the national intelligence authority, the central intelligence agency shall:

"[a] Accomplish the synthesis of departmental intelligence relating to the national security and the appropriate dissemination within the government of the resulting strategic and national policy intelligence.

Coördinate Agencies.

"[b] Plan for the coördination of the activities of all intelligence agencies of the government having functions related to the national security, and recommend to the national intelligence authority the establishment of such over-all policies and objectives as will assure the most effective accomplishment of the national intelligence mission.

"[c] Perform, for the benefit of departmental intelligence agencies, such services of common concern as the national intelligence authority determines can be more efficiently accomplished by a common agency, including the direct procurement of intelligence.

"[d] Perform such other functions and duties related to intelligence as the national intelligence authority may from time to time direct.

"5. The central intelligence agency shall have no police or law enforcement functions.

Existing Agencies Continue.

"6. Subject to coördination by the national intelligence authority, the existing intelligence agencies of the government shall continue to collect, evaluate, synthesize, and disseminate departmental operating intelligence, herein defined as that intelligence required by the several departments and independent agencies for the performance of their proper functions. Such departmental operating intelligence as designated by the national intelligence authority shall be freely available to the central intelligence agency for synthesis. As approved by the national intelligence authority, the operations of the departmental intelligence agencies shall be open to inspection by the central intelligence agency in connection with its planning function.

"7. The national intelligence authority shall have an independent budget upon which the central intelligence agency shall be dependent for budgetary support. The national intelligence authority budget shall also be available for other intelligence activities as the national intelligence authority may direct. Within the limits of the funds made available to him the director may employ necessary personnel and make provision for necessary supplies, facilities and services. With the approval of the national intelligence authority, he may call upon departments and independent agencies to furnish such specialists as may be required for supervisory and functional positions in the central intelligence agency, including the assignment of military and naval personnel."

Altho these documents and those submitted to the White House by Gen. Donovan were made available to THE TRIBUNE, they were never officially in possession of this newspaper. They were copied by its representative on paper belonging to THE TRIBUNE.

TEXT OF REPORT ON ROOSEVELT DOG'S SKY RIDE

Trip Held Unauthorized; a 'Serious Mistake.'

Col. Ray W. Ireland.
Mrs. Anna Boettiger.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—The senate military subcommittee which investigated the A priority airplane trip of Col. Elliott Roosevelt's dog Blaze today issued this report:

"At the request of the subcommittee appointed by the chairman to inquire into the incident of transporting Col. Roosevelt's dog on military aircraft, Maj. Gen. H. L. George submitted the following statement, delay having been occasioned in its release due to the need for securing information overseas:

"'On or about Nov. 13, 1944, Col. Roosevelt departed from a European air field in a B-17 bomber, under his command, for the United States by way of Iceland. He arrived at Presque Isle army air field, Presque Isle, Me., on Nov. 14, 1944, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Two Dogs Taken in Plane.

"'Col. Roosevelt made the flight under orders from the 8th air force and pursuant to war department authority. In addition to Col. Roosevelt, the personnel on the bomber included four officers and five enlisted men. Other than personal baggage, no cargo was carried. The dog Blaze, weighing between 110 and 115 pounds, and a female pup, weighing 20 pounds, were transported in this bomber.

"'On arrival at the Presque Isle army air field, both dogs were declared by Col. Roosevelt upon United States customs form No. 6063, which is the baggage declaration and entry form.

"'As the bomber was proceeding directly to New York and would arrive there in the late evening of Nov. 14, it was suggested, due to the absence of any facilities for the dogs on arrival in New York, that they be kept at Presque Isle until they could be conveniently transported to Washington. The dogs were taken to the Search and Rescue kennels at the air base where, after tests and inspection, a health certificate was issued by the station veterinarian and given to the customs officials.

Dogs Flown to New York.

"'On Nov. 23, 1944, a B-25 type airplane, on an operational flight, and carrying military personnel, was scheduled to be flown from Presque Isle army air field to La Guardia field, N. Y., with an intermediate stop at Grenier field, Manchester, N. H. Both dogs were placed on the airplane, which arrived at La Guardia at about 4:30 in the afternoon of Nov. 23, 1944.

"'Later that afternoon, a marine corps pilot en route to Washington, with a stop at Newark, N. J., informed operations at La Guardia that he had room for any service men waiting for a ride to Washington. The marine pilot was informed that there were two service men who were waiting for transportation to Washington, and was asked if he had adequate room to also take along the two dogs. He stated that he had plenty of room and would be glad to take the dogs along. He was informed that the dogs belonged to Col. Roosevelt and were to be delivered to the White House, which sent a station wagon to the airport and picked up the dogs.

Anna Asks Dogs Be Sent.

"'It should be pointed out that there is no provision in army air force regulations or those of the 8th air force which prohibit the carrying of pets in an operational type aircraft, such as the B-17 bomber which transported these dogs from Europe to the United States.

"'On Jan. 5, 1945, Col. Ray W. Ireland, assistant chief of staff for priorities and traffic, headquarters air transport command, received a telephone request from Mrs. John Boettiger at the White House that Col. Roosevelt's dog Blaze be transported from Washington to Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt in Hollywood, Cal. No mention of priority was made in the conversation. Col. Ireland, however, established an A priority for the dog and on Jan. 9, 1945, the dog was shipped on a military cargo aircraft which left Washington about noon.

"'The flight on which the dog was carried was a scheduled cargo flight and terminated at Dayton, O. The flight west from Dayton to which the dog was transferred, originated at Newark, N. J., and carried, in addition to cargo, three passengers—two navy enlisted men and one army technical sergeant, all of whom were on emergency leaves, traveling on C priorities.

Passengers Put Off.

"'At Memphis, Tenn., approximately 3,700 pounds of cargo and the three passengers were off-loaded to take on B priority cargo. A backlog of B priority freight existed at Memphis and this would have displaced the three passengers even if the dog had not been on board, but the dog did unquestionably displace an equivalent amount in weight of B priority freight.

"'The Dayton flight terminated at Dallas, Tex., where the dog was transferred to another routine scheduled military cargo flight which proceeded to Mines Field, Los Angeles, Cal., and from there the dog was delivered to Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt.

"The fundamental basis for the establishment of any priority, whether for passengers or cargo, is that the mission of the passenger or the need for the cargo is of such urgency that transportation by air is necessary and also necessary to the prosecution of the war. Therefore, establishing an A priority for the dog was unauthorized under regulations relating to air priorities. A serious mistake was made and it cannot be justified.

"'In answer to a question from Sen. Stewart [D., Tenn.] regarding references in the press to three army air forces officers at Patterson field [Dayton] bound for Pyote, Tex., on D priorities, who stated that they might have been carried on the flight out of Dayton except for the Roosevelt dog, Gen. George stated: "Investigation discloses that the officers concerned would not have traveled even if the dog had not been carried, as there were both C and D priority passengers ahead of them'."

Red Story on Pope Denied; Russian Church Hits Vatican

'False' Reports

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 10 (AP).—Osservatore Romano, Vatican City newspaper, today described as a "false and calumnious attack" a recent article in the soviet army publication Red Star. The newspaper quoted Red Star as saying Pope Pius XII. was preparing a peace message contrary to the allied program for post-war reorganization of Europe.

The newspaper also denied an article in the publication The Protestant which, as broadcast by Moscow radio, said the Vatican had exercised "notable control on Argentina's economy" and collaborated there with fascist German agents.

Stories Called Propaganda.

These "revelations, which pretend to present themselves to world opinion as sensational news, are simply to be classed among the frequent arbitary, false, and calumnious attacks to which, unfortunately, a certain propaganda has been abandoning itself for some time," Osservatore said.

"There is no element, however slender or imperceivable, or foundation . . . or any fact or attitude which might give pretext to any inference of the kind" in either article, the newspaper stated.

Pope's Charity Recalled.

After "the numerous proofs offered by the Holy See of repeated and untiring effort and incessant charity to lessen the horrors of war," it might have been hoped that "at least some methods of explicit religious hatred would be abandoned," it added, continuing:

"On the contrary, the abused technique of inventing with fantastic arguments, of vilifying and wounding, is always alive. Surely not on this basis will it be possible to construct an efficient, lasting order when there are those who stubbornly sacrifice truth to sectarian passions."

'Shields Nazis'

MOSCOW, Feb. 10 (AP).—The Russian orthodox church charged today that the Vatican sought to shield Nazi Germany from allied punishment, making the accusation in a document signed by four patriarchs and representatives of four others.

"In view of the present international situation," said the document, addressed to the people of the world and published in all soviet newspapers, "representatives of the orthodox church present at the sobor [church congress] raise their voices against those—the Vatican especially—who try to protect Hitlerite Germany from responsibility for crimes committed by her and ask forgiveness for Fascists who spilled the blood of innocent victims all over Europe."

"Anti-Christian Doctrine."

It continued that in the opinion of the signers, those accused of trying to protect Germany wanted to "leave on the earth after the war a Fascist misanthropical anti-Christian doctrine, together with its supporters."

"The Christian religion must bless the efforts of freedom-loving and peace-loving mankind directed toward organization of such order on earth by which the world will never again experience Fascism and bloody, terrible aggressions like Hitler's," it said.

Four Patriarchs Sign.

The church leaders whose signatures appeared on the document were Christopher, patriarch of Alexandria; Alexander, third patriarch of Antiochia; Kallistrat, patriarch of all Georgia, and Alexei, patriarch of Moscow and all the Russias.

Another attack on the Vatican was made in Moscow last night by Boris Stein, professor of history at Moscow university, who said it had constantly carried out "anti-soviet" campaigns. Stein asserted the pope approved the Nazi annexation of Austria and had opposed Anglo-French-Russian alliance.

STEINMETZ TOPS 2 MILLION; SHOW ENDS BOND DRIVE

A variety show at 2:30 p. m. today in the Steinmetz High school auditorium will wind up the oversubscribed two million dollar war bond drive conducted by Steinmetz pupils. Mayor Kelly is scheduled to be the principal speaker. Philip Maxwell of The Tribune editorial staff, master of ceremonies of the "Citizens of Tomorrow" radio program on station W-G-N, will preside at the performance, to be given by professional entertainers as well as by the students themselves.

Admission will be by tickets issued to persons who bought bonds from the students. Steinmetz "salesmen" turned over to the treasury $2,235,000 for war securities. E, F, and G series bonds composed $850,000 of the total, while $1,385,000 was in series C securities.

The program has been arranged by the school's Fix-It club, with the coöperation of the treasury department.

WYOMING LOSES COURT FIGHT ON JACKSON HOLE

Cheyenne, Wyo., Feb. 10 (AP).—Wyoming today lost its federal District court suit challenging creation of the Jackson Hole national monument.

United States District Judge T. Blake Kennedy issued a memorandum finding that the controversy was between the legislative and executive branches of the government and that the court could not "interfere."

The state had sought a judicial declaration voiding the Presidential proclamation creating the 221,610 acre monument.

OPA TO CONFER TUESDAY ON NEW CLOTHING CODE

Horace L. Allen, head of the office of price administration men's clothing section, and Norton Come, attorney for the section, will confer with regional OPA chiefs and midwest clothing manufacturers all day Tuesday in the OPA offices at 226 W. Jackson blvd., Rae E. Walters, regional administrator, said yesterday. They are the authors of the OPA's new price regulation, effective March 1, which will reduce manufacturers' ceiling prices on many outerwear garments 8 per cent. Most of the reductions will be in lower price lines, and will be passed on to consumers, Walters said. Some manufacturers' gross profit margins, he said, will be reduced as much as 20 per cent.

BLAME OF FATAL WRECK PLACED ON BROKEN RAIL

Derailment of the Chicago & North Western Viking near Poplar Grove, Boone county, last Dec. 24, killing two persons and injuring 38, was attributed to a broken rail by the interstate commerce commission yesterday.

The locomotive and 11 cars of the 15 car train passed over the rail fissure, the report said. The rail then gave way and two cars left the track and rolled over a 15 foot embankment. The last two cars rolled to a stop without overturning.

The report said the train, bound for Chicago from Minneapolis, Minn., was running 45 miles an hour, 15 miles under its speed limit.

REDS WILL KEEP YANKS ABROAD, SHAFER WARNS

Wave of Communism Is Ahead, He Says.

A wave of communism that will engulf most of the nations of Europe will keep American soldiers on duty abroad long after the close of hostilities with Germany was predicted last night by Rep. Shafer [R., Mich.] in addressing the 50th annual Lincoln day dinner held by the Illinois Republican state central committee in the Hotel Sherman.

"That is my personal opinion," Shafer said, "and that is also what most of the generals think."

Recently returned from a month's tour of European battle fronts as a member of a congressional committee, Shafer said he heard most of our boys already asking incisive questions concerning the reasons for the fighting and their length of stay in Europe.

"Long Time Coming Home."

"When all the fighting has been finished, when all the money has been spent and all the lives sacrificed, many of the nations of Europe will go communistic and American boys will be a long time coming home," Shafer warned his audience, that filled the ballroom to overflowing.

Condemnation by Shafer of the pending compulsory labor legislation as an unnecessary infringement on American rights was followed by the prediction of Sen. Brooks [R. Ill.] that the "work or jail" bill would be defeated and that "we in America can say we have held true to the tradition of Lincoln."

Brooks, who took the floor of the senate last week to oppose the bill, said he had the greatest respect for the military leaders of the nation as militarists, but as a member of the senate appropriations committee, he knew that they always had declared that the furnishing of supplies to the nation's armed forces was an industrial job that must be solved by industrialists and labor.

Compares Inaugural Addresses.

Shafer compared the second Lincoln inaugural address with its keynote of "with malice toward none, with charity for all" to the fourth term enunciation of the President himself that he go "a little left of center." Shafer added that Roosevelt "went into the parliamentary verbiage of the corrupt stewpot of Europe to find the words to tell us that the ideals of government laid down in our Constitution and preserved by Lincoln's determination for unity were off his course. He didn't want them."

"Our boys don't want to come home to a government 'a little left of center,'" Shafer declared.

The Michigan congressman warned the assembled Republicans that "unless you start working today there won't be any chance of increasing your membership in the house in 1946 and there won't be a chance of electing a Republican President in 1948."

Cites Expanding Pay Roll.

He pointed out that the federal pay roll had gone well above the three million mark now, that one federal payroller was considered the equivalent to four votes and that 'the New Deal is adding constantly to its group of federal pay roll voters as each day of the war passes.

Citing production figures including 1,800,000 motor trucks, 68,000 tanks, 2,800,000 big and medium guns, 15 million machine guns and rifles, 43 billion rounds of ammunition, 43,400.000 bombs and 187,000 airplanes for American forces, Shafer listed the part played by American industry in the Russian offensive.

These included 11 million pairs of army boots, 97 million yards of cotton cloth, 50 million yards of woolen cloth, 58 million yards of webbing, 294 million tons of explosives, 331,000 motor vehicles, 1,045 railroad locomotives, 7,164 freight cars, 2,120,000 tons of steel, 480,000 tons of railroad rails, 233,000 tons of aluminum, 314,000 tons of brass, 65,000 tons of copper products, 12,200 airplanes, 1,300,000 tons of petroleum products, and 628 tons of chemicals.

Red Drive "Made in America."

"That great Russian offensive which has so thrilled us could well be labeled 'Made in America,'" Shafer declared.

While listing the tremendous production figures, Shafer warned that Americans must "rededicate ourselves to an upsurge of production so that our forces on all fronts shall be limited in their use of material only by our ability to get it to them."

"Shortages of ammunition and equipment made it impossible for our armies to carry thru into Germany the drive we had maintained thru France," he asserted. "The Germans did not stop us in the Saar valley or at the Siegfried line. Shortages in fighting equipment are what stopped us."

German Weapons Improved.

He warned that Germany would not be "a pushover." The new German Panther and Tiger tanks are better all around than anything the allies have, Shafer declared.

ARMED MILITIA CONTROLS CROWD AS BONG WEDS

and said, "Well, I guess we've got everything well in hand."

By this time the church already was filled except for the respective families. The altar was banked with white gladioli, palms, and sprays of huckleberry. Tall white candles in six seven-branch candelabra cast a soft glow thru the sacristy. Electric crosses shone in niches on either side of the altar, one directly above the church service flag with its seven gold stars and 312 blue.

Young Bud Sits Alone.

In the Bong family row a younger replica of Major Bong sat alone. This was Bud, or Carl Jr., 18. Soon an enormous patriarch with a white beard lumbered up the aisle and sat down beside him. This was a great-uncle. Next, up a side aisle, came Joyce, 16, Barbara, 14, and Sue, 12, all dressed alike in powder blue silk jersey with corsages of red roses. Behind them came Grandma Bryce, who lives with them on their farm 23 miles from here, and Jimmy, who is 5.

All the Bongs so far had looked alike. All had the snub nose, the blonde hair, the short, stocky figure, the imperturbable countenance made known to every American by the achievements of the eldest son. Now up the center aisle came Mr. and Mrs. Bong. And they looked alike, except that the hair above Mr. Bong's unlined face is silver.

The Vattendahl family sat opposite the Bongs, but it is impossible for this correspondent to describe them other than one son, Jerome, 25, home from the merchant marine for the wedding, because three Bong uncles, who again looked just like Bongs, cut off the view.

At this stage, moreover, a young lady in pink satin had stepped out from behind one tier of candelabra to sing "I Love You," and when she retired the organist burst forth with the "Wedding March from Lohengrin." The marriage ceremony followed.

Many Heads Craned.

As the familiar strains filled the church, heads craned, small children leaped up nad down in unrestrained delight, and, suddenly, every one was standing up. Then no one except those on the center aisle could see anything.

Bong's sister, Nelda, wearing long powder blue silk jersey and carrying a corsage of blue iris, came first. She was met at the altar by Staff Sgt. Edward Edgette, a boyhood friend of Bong now home on furlough after 30 months in New Guinea and the Philippines, Next came Beverelee Barrett, a member of Lambda Sigma Lambda, sorority at Superior State Teachers' college here, with the bride. She, too' was in powder blue, nad was met by Tech. Sgt. Lowell Vattendahl, the bride's brother, who was on furlough from Liberal, Kas. Then came Bong's sister, Geraldine, 22, also in blue, who was maid of honor, and Capt. Walter N. Market of City Island, N. Y., best man, who was Bong's squadron mate in the Pacific for 18 months.

Maj. Bong Stands Alone.

Finally, Bong, a little stooped as always, came striding out from behind the candelabra. He stood alone at the altar, facing the congregation, a slight smile on his face, as his bride slowly advanced. He looked much younger than the 24 he is. As she came near, he strode down the staps to take her from her father.

Miss Vattendahl wore a dress of trailing ivory satin with a long sleeved lace bodice and a finger tip illusion veil, the latter fastened to her blonde hair by a lace calot. She wore a single strand of pears, the gift of Bong, and carried a cascade bouquet of red victory roses, the stem of each wrapped in white satin. The red of her roses, the white of her gown, and the blue of her bridesmaids' gowns effected the desired patriotic motif.

Single Ring Ceremony.

The Lutheran marriage ceremony is brief. The Rev. Boe prefaced it with a little speech beginning "Dear Friends." In it he addressed the bridal couple, reminding them they were beginning a new phase of life, one in which two things were necessary: love for God and love for one another.

In their life, he told them, there will be both joy and sorrow, the latter often too quickly true in union begun in war time, but if they built it on a foundation love for God, they will know joy and peace.

He then [while a news camera man worked quietly from behind the candelabra] performed the single ring ceremony, ending with "whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Ceremony Lasts 16 Minutes.

The entire wedding lasted 16 minutes from the first step inside the door to the exit into a night made suddenly luminous by enormous flares wielded for the benefit of the news reels.

The barn dance program followed. The genesis of this was said to be Bong's old friendship for one of the radio announcers. Be that as it may, Lt. Col. Don Eddy of the air technical service command, one of the eight colonels at the wedding, gave it a heart warming interpretation and one certainly shared by all at the wedding, saying:

"Tonight we have witnessed the wedding of Maj. Bong and Marjorie Vattendahl. It is the sincere hope of the army air forces that the best of everything is theirs. We hope and pray God may grant a quick and victorious end to this war so that all happiness we wish for Maj. and Mrs. Bong may be shared by all of the peoples of the earth."

Picture of Gen. Arnold.

And, in time, Maj. and Mrs. Bong boarded a night train for Minneapolis where tomorrow they will board a plane for what Mrs. Bong says is a "military secret" but what her husband says is California. Altho inundated with wedding presents, they took few with them, one being an autographed picture of Gen. Arnold, commanding officer of the American air forces. "To Maj. and Mrs. [Dick] Bong, with best wishes and good luck," the inscription said.

When it was all over, both looked extremely beaten down and tired. It has been a week of news reels, cameramen, parties, rehearsals, problems to be solved, telephone calls, and speeches by every one except that laconic son of a laconic Swede-Bong.

THEATER OF AIR HAS JOLLY TIME WITH 'GOOD NEWS'

The Chicago Theater of the Air produced the old time musical comedy, "Good News," in Medinah temple last night and offered W-G-N and Mutual listeners a jolly reminder of the early days of radio. Here were the old tunes. Here were the campus love and intrigue, and the excitement over the approaching "big game."

Conductor Robert Trendler steered his musicians thru such exhilirating melodies as "Lucky in Love" and "The Best Things in Life Are Free." The ensemble did "Varsity Drag" with enthusiasm. Betty Mulliner, Bruce Foote, and the W-G-N chorus and orchestra constituted the musical forces. Sondra Gair and William Everett headed the dramatic roster.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, spoke on mechanized warfare. [Text of address on editorial page.] United Spanish War Veterans, headed by David A. McVey, senior vice department commander of Illinois, were special guests.

AFL CHARGES CIO AND REDS PLOT TO SPLIT LABOR

Gives Warning of Danger to Union Movement.

BY GEORGE HARTMANN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., Feb. 10.—The CIO is joining with its communist Russian friends in support of a plan to create a rival international labor movement "just as it divided labor in the United States," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, charged today at a press conference.

The accusation resulted from reports that have reached the AFL council, which has recessed its winter meeting until Monday, that a rift has developed between the British Trade Union congress on one hand and the soviets and the CIO on the other at the world labor meeting in session in London.

R. J. Thomas, Reid Robinson, and Sidney Hillman are representing the CIO at the London meeting, which started Feb. 6 and which is sponsored by the BTUC. Two hundred delegates from 40 allied nations are reported to be in attendance.

AFL Stays Away.

The AFL refused to send delegates to the meeting on the ground that the soviet trade union movement was government dominated and therefore not "free" in the trade union sense, and also because the CIO had been invited.

The AFL also refused to attend because it contended that if a world labor meeting were to be held it should be sponsored by long established world labor organizations, such as the International Federation of Trade Unions or the International Labor Order, to which both the AFL and the BTUC belong.

In answer to charges made by CIO officials that the AFL is an "isolated organization" because of its refusal to send delegates to the meeting, the AFL council thru President Green retaliated with the charge that "the CIO has led at home in the creation of division and isolationism and is leading in the creation of division and isolationism abroad."

Warning to BTUC.

A warning also was issued to the BTUC that if the CIO and "its communist comrades" succeed in their plans to establish a new international labor organization, the BTUC "will have to decide whether it wants to remain with the IFTU or join up with the newly formed organization."

"We wonder," said the AFL statement, "what attitude the representatives of the CIO at the London conference will assume toward the proposal which is being urged by Russian Communists that German labor must be made slave labor to rebuild Russia and thru such action substitute involuntary servitude slavery for freedom and liberty."

CIO PROMISES LABOR BATTLE ON AGGRESSION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 10.—A pledge that the American CIO will exert its strength to "guarantee aggressor nations never again will have the opportunity to start their aggression" was made to the world trade union conference here today by J. B. Carey, CIO delegate.

Supporting a proposal of Walter Citrine of the British Trade Union congress that Germany be demilitarized and forced to restore stolen and ruined property, Carey called on the big three to insure destruction of naziism and fascism as part of a lasting peace.

Vicente Lombardo Toledano, Mexican delegate, urged that the German people be punished that they might understand war is not profitable.

CHOKED AND ROBBED OF $69.

Walter Stewart, 1728 E. 70th st., was robbed of $69 at 1:50 a. m. yesterday by a man who choked him and rifled his pockets on 63d st., between Harper and Stony Island avs., Stewart reported to police.

CHARGE THREE MOTHERS LEFT THEIR CHILDREN

On police books yesterday were three cases of alleged child abandonment. Two of the mothers are sought, while the third is being held by police.

Mrs. Eleanor Damiani, 30, whose husband, Edward, is serving a life term in Stateville penitentiary for murder, was sought after police were called regarding her three children. She was said to have left them a week ago yesterday. The youngest, Thomas, 1½, had been left with residents of an apartment at 2623 Hampden ct., and the others, Edward Jr., 3, and Janice, 4, with Mrs. Leopold Holingue, 423 Roslyn pl.

Youngster in Orphanage.

Police took the two older children to the juvenile home. Thomas is in St. Vincent's orphanage.

Mrs. Holingue said she had been informed that the mother of the children was working in a north side drug store, but that a telephone call to the store revealed that she was only a part time employe and had not appeared for work for several days.

Also sought yesterday was the mother, name unknown, of a six month old boy left with the owner of the tavern at 1801 W. 21st st. early Friday. Mrs. Dorothy Jelan, proprietor, told police that a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Angelina Lanzi, 2142 Huron st., left the baby with her and said she would be back "in a few minutes."

Keeps Baby Over Night.

When she had not returned by closing time, Mrs. Jelan turned the baby over to Mrs. Mary Arens, 1853 W. 19th st., who cared for it overnight, and returned with it to the tavern Friday night. Mrs. Jelan then called the police, who took the infant to St. Vincent's orphanage.

Also in St. Vincent's is the 3 month old daughter of Mrs. Margaret Klaus, 27, of Wauconda, Lake county, a sailor's wife. Mrs. Klaus was arrested in the tavern at 110 W. Madison st. on complaint of Morrison hotel officials Monday. She was booked last night on charges of contributing to the dependency of a minor, neglect, and disorderly conduct.

Kelly Christens New Army Glider the Winged Victory

A CG4A army glider was christened the Winged Victory by Mayor Kelly yesterday in the Stevens hotel, where the new ship is being displayed to spur interest in the army air forces' motion picture, "Winged Victory," to show in Chicago beginning late this month. The glider eventually will be turned over to the air technical service command. Profits from the film will go to army charities.

LABOR IN UTOPIA.

The American Federation of Labor declined to send delegates to the international trade union congress in London in the belief that the Russian labor spokesmen who would attend did not represent anything that could properly be called a trade union movement. At the time this decision was reached it was criticized on the ground that even if the Russians were as subservient to their governments as the AFL believed, they would constitute only one among many delegations.

Events have already justified the position of the AFL. The Russians may constitute only one among many national groups but they are already well on the way to overcoming that inconvenience. With the help of Sidney Hillman and the French delegates, the Russians have moved for the admission to the congress of representatives of the so-called trade union movements of Finland, Bulgaria, Romania, Poland [Lublin], and Italy. The first four of these are already under the Russian thumb and the fifth is not conspicuously unfriendly. Even without this added strength, the Russians are not exactly friendless in the congress because the whole trade union movement of Europe has been moving far to the left in recent years.

Still, in a way it's a pity that the AFL didn't send a couple of its outstanding speakers to the meeting just for the fun of telling the Russians to their faces what decent men think of their country's labor policies. Anybody who wants to know the facts can find them conveniently set forth in David Dallin's "The Real Soviet Russia," recently published by the Yale University Press. As Mr. Dallin says, the Russian trade union officials engage in a great variety of activities assigned to them by the soviet government, including the apportionment of garden plots to their members; "they do everything, in fact, except, perhaps, exert real influence on wage policy and working hours."

An experienced public speaker could have a lot of fun with that theme at the meeting in London, but he oughtn't to spend too much time on it because there are much more important things to be said about Russia's labor policy. They, too, can be found in Mr. Dallin's book in his well documented chapter on forced labor.

It seems that the secret police, formerly known as the OGPU and now known as the NKVD, is also a sort of department of public works. It is engaged in road building, lumbering, and kindred activities, most of them in the bleak and desolate stretches of Siberia and Arctic Russia. The NKVD needs a lot of laborers. It gets them for the taking, because it is authorized to sentence men and women on its own motion, without a trial, for terms of forced labor up to five years in length. If the prisoner is still alive at the end of the term he can always be sentenced again for another.

How many men and women have been so enslaved is a secret of the soviet government but the lowest estimate is 5,000,000 and 20,000,000 probably is closer to the truth. There is no doubt of the existence of these camps or of their terrors. Mr. Dallin has assembled the testimony of many witnesses on this point, including Quentin Reynolds and Wendell Willkie, the English journalist Philip Jordan, Walter Kerr of the New York Herald Tribune, the British economist, Leonard Hubbard; Victor Alter, the Polish Socialist whose execution was first denied and then confirmed by the soviets; the American engineer, John Littlepage, and Boris Souvarine, Stalin's French biographer. They all tell the same story. Mr. Willkie, for example, reported:

"We drove into Yakutsk in a heavy black soviet limousine. Between the airfield and the town we looked for the usual concentration camp we have seen in some other cities—half barbed wire fences with sentry boxes at the corners. But there was none, or at least we never came across it."

More candid witnesses have offered glimpses of the life in these camps, of ragged prisoners forced to labor 12 hours a day in the arctic cold, of the miserable food, and the complete lack of beds and bedding. The whole world was horrified by the terms of penal servitude under the czars, but, as Mr. Dallin shows, there were in 1913 only 32,757 sentenced to labor camps and of these only 5,000 were political prisoners. Now they number in the millions and almost all of them are political prisoners.

As was said before, it's a pity in a way that the AFL didn't send a few delegates to the London meeting. They could have asked their Russian colleagues what, as trade union men, they think of this appalling regime of brutality. They could even have asked their Russian colleagues what they had done, as spokesmen for labor, to ameliorate the condition of the victims.

BONUSES FOR WAR WORKERS.

Various proposals have been made in recent months for post-war bonuses to the war workers. Some of the plans call for severance pay or relocation allowances designed to help workers thru the reconversion period. Some of the more extreme demands have been for outright bonuses paid from the federal treasury, for which the argument is made that war workers ought to receive the same sort of treatment accorded veterans by the G. I. bill of rights and similar measures.

What seems to have escaped general attention is that a great many war workers are not waiting for the end of the war. They are already getting their bonuses and getting them, moreover, in large part out of the federal treasury.

The CIO steel workers union, for example, won an order for a variety of pay increases from the war labor board. The WLB, as is its practice in such cases, made the order retroactive for most of last year. As is always the case with such retroactive orders, the steel companies found it impossible to add the increased cost to the price of their products, first, because the prices are fixed by government edict; and second, because the products for which additional back pay had to be given had already been delivered and paid for. The pay bonus ostensibly came out of the earnings of the companies.

The scale of increases was complicated and the back pay has not been computed and paid yet, at least by the United States Steel corporation. It did, however, make proper accounting provisions for the increases in its report of 1944 earnings, made public the other day. The back pay for 1944 amounts to about 30 million dollars. Of this sum, the stockholders of the company had to put up $4,300,000 out of their profits for the year. The remaining $25,700,000 will be paid at the cost of the United States treasury, because the whole 30 million dollars was a business expense and by deducting it the company saved 25.7 millions on its income tax.

The CIO, and the AFL as well, are putting increased pressure on the administration to break the Little Steel formula as a reward for aid rendered in the fourth term campaign. The argument is made that these increased wage payments would come out of the pockets of the employers, which presumably are bulging with excessive war profits. Radicals in the New Deal administration have argued that industry is making such profits that it can afford to pay increased wages without increasing the price of its products.

Experience of the steel corporation shows the fallacy of the argument. If a company has any excess profits, as United States Steel has, it isn't keeping much of them; the greater part is going into the treasury in taxes and the greater portion of any wage increases will come out of the treasury and not out of the pockets of the stockholders. It is the taxpayers who pay the bonus to war workers in such instances, just as truly as if the money had been appropriated by congress instead of being paid out at the fiat of an irresponsible government bureau.

NOT THE LONE VOICE OF MORTIMER SNERD.

Mr. Wallace, the chief executive who nominated him to do the nation's spending, and the left wing politicos who hold up his elbow, have a simple method of bidding for the good will and support of the country—to-wit:

Do you believe, they ask, that it is desirable to have a remunerative job, to earn enough money for food, clothing, and recreation, to get a decent living off a farm, to trade profitably in an atmosphere of freedom, to have a decent home, to get a good education, to enjoy good health and have medical attention, and to come to a carefree old age? You do? So does Mr. Wallace. Then what are we waiting for? This Arcadian life can be had by spending the public money.

John Law, the Scotch easy money philosopher who flourished in France in our early colonial days and who blew up the great Mississippi bubble in French finance, intended to retire the French debt, create a paradise on the banks of the Mississippi, and make Frenchmen wealthy. He could do it with paper money. The question was: Do you want to live a luxurious life in a golden climate with multitudes of friendly native servants, with gold and silver mines on your domain, or, alternatively, do you want to remain at home and share in the profits of such a colonization? Either situation was desirable. Law, escaping from France, spent his declining days wondering why his money scheme hadn't continued to work. The Wallace-Roosevelt-left wing method is simple, but it is not original.

Congress in endeavoring to stop Mr. Wallace before he can get started, has its eye on only one actor. It is Mr. Roosevelt's fully as much as Mr. Wallace's. When the candidate for the commerce department presented himself before the senate commerce committee to prove his qualifications, his prospectus for prosperity and security was taken from Mr. Roosevelt's message to congress on the state of the Union. Mr. Wallace spoke as interpreter rather than author. The scheme of turning every eye to the federal treasury for the assurance of a livelihood would not disappear if Mr. Wallace should fail of confirmation or if the George bill separating the RFC from the commerce department should be passed.

That the government could buy into flagging enterprises by making loans on a fictitious equity basis without eventually seeking control is probably neither believed nor desired by the left wing. Mr. Roosevelt's ideas of the rights of property and of labor crop out in his plant seizures and his recommendation of the draft for workers. It is the experience of the fourth term incumbent never to be out of emergencies, in peace or war. Mr. Wallace is not a lone eccentric figure in Washington. If congress thinks he is it will run into some surprises. Henry is not a lone voice crying in the wilderness.

WHITEWINGS (Mechanized).

The 1st cavalry division [dismounted] was one of the first arrivals in Manila. The 1st cavalry is proud of its name, but it had to leave the horses home.

Now Kansas City provides evidence that the age of mechanization is even affecting the street sweepers. During the day time its business district is patroled by a whitewing on a motorcycle equipped with a trash box, who picks up papers, glass, and other litter. He calls into the head office every hour to get reports of complaints that require his attention. Soon he is to get these reports by radio.

It may not be long before the mechanized sanitation idea becomes so common that it will be necessary to designate those who still go afoot as the 1st whitewing brigade [dismounted].

A touch of the old arrogance appears in Mussolini's latest harangue at Milan. It must be that failure has gone to his head.—Detroit News.

At this report the future of league baseball in war time was shrouded in dark doubt, with magnates groping around like so many umpires.—Detroit News.

MECHANIZED WARFARE

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, and broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

From time immemorial, until four years ago, warfare was conducted at the speed that men and horses could move. These limitations fixed the speed of marches and the momentum of charges. The classic generals—Cyrus, Alexander, Caesar, Genghis Khan, and Napoleon—all planned under these limitations. The first general to break away from the old school was Ulysses S. Grant. His training and campaigning were in the old school. Perhaps his familiarity with river boats at Galena, Ill., gave him the inspiration. More likely it was pure genius for he used steamboats many times faster than horses and men in all of his campaigns from Belmont [Missouri] to Petersburg [Virginia] and in the Appomattox campaign he moved Ord's army past Lee by railroad!

While every narrator of his campaigns necessarily mentions the movements by river steamboat, for 50 years no military writer pointed out that this was an innovation in warfare, and Von Moltke, one of the last masters of the horse and legs school, could only consider "this colossal conflict a matter of two armed mobs chasing each other around the country, from which nothing could be learned."

The automobile had come into being as a sporting vehicle 10 years before the outbreak of World War I. Before its outbreak, motor vehicles had come into general use. Omnibuses and cabs had turned from horses to gasoline engines. Yet the general staffs of all countries could not rise above the logistics which had governed their predecessors.

In 1914 both the French and the Germans planned and executed leg and horse campaigns. The Germans had planned and executed better than the French and English and were on the road to a complete victory when a great general—Gallieni—seized the new vehicle to move an army from Paris and disrupt the whole German campaign.

If it is said of Gallieni that he merely made use of vehicles that happened to be at hand, it may be answered that these vehicles were just as apparent to all of the other generals and that they did not appreciate them.

Gallieni's achievement did not impress his compatriots or their enemies. Not until the railroad into Verdun was cut were trucks used systematically as a line of supply, nor to carry troops until the German victory of 1918 compelled Foch to lay hands on motor vehicles to rush reënforcements to his broken lines.

In this country, the denial of the use of the Mexican railroad forced Gen. Pershing to employ trucks to supply his cavalry riding on horses in his pursuit of Villa. Cavalry Gen. Jim Parker conceived the idea of mounting his cavalry in trucks to travel, but to unload and to fight on horseback. His chief of staff, Capt.—now Maj. Gen.—Frank McCoy [retired], had arranged with civilians of southeastern Texas, sore afraid of Mexican inroads, to allow him to move troops in their privately owned automobiles in the event of invasion.

However, when the army went overseas, it went as a horse-drawn, foot-marching army. The regimental transport was all horse-drawn, as were the guns. Only the ammunition train was motorized. When we marched across France to succor the British army at Amiens a good march for the heavy guns was 10 miles a day. Col. Maxwell Murray of the 5th field artillery called upon the ammunition trucks to pull his guns into the battle of Soissons after the horses had failed.

I remember in the fall of 1916 a friend, William Holbrook, president of the Union Drop Forge company of Chicago, told me that his company was forging crankshafts larger than had been made up to that time and delivering them to the Holt Tractor company of Peoria. These were for the first British tanks.

There was so much opposition to them in the British army—particularly at the headquarters of Gen. Haig—that their proponents, Gen. Fuller and Col. Swinton, have become permanently famous.

I was with Col. Swinton at his tank school in Belgium the day before the battle of Cambrai and I happened to be at British headquarters on the day of the battle.

The tanks were a complete technological surprise to the Germans but, unfortunately, also to the British, who had not expected the break-thru and were unprepared to exploit the success.

The tanks at Cambrai, and later in the war, were designed to resist machine gun bullets, to fire machine guns, and the principal duty assigned to them by the high command was to penetrate the barb wire defenses. They were designed to keep the foot pace of the infantry.

Eventually, thru superiority of trucks, of tanks, of airplanes, and of numbers, the allies won World War I., but their leaders were not anxious to admit that technicians rather than strategists had won the war.

The old services resisted both mechanization and aviation. They contented themselves with defensive efforts to oppose the military machines, which they did not like and did not understand, and reluctantly borrowed automobile weapons to move the artillery and infantry.

While anti-tank guns are necessary, I think their development has been stressed to the sacrifice of the offensive arms, at least on the ground. Tanks continue to be far more effective than anti-tank weapons. All countries now realize that tanks are artillery—not carriers of small arms. All countries are building bigger and bigger tanks. Whatever the practical limit in tanks may be, it has not yet been reached.

The Germans, who had been at the wrong end of these weapons, appreciated them, and developed their tactics. Altho an American—J. Walter Christie—invented the fast moving tank, it was the Germans who changed their logistics from those of the classic legs and horses to those of modern motor vehicles.

They proved them in the campaign of Barcelona in Spain. All other general staffs ignored this lesson, so that the Germans were able to repeat it in Poland, France, the Netherlands, and in Russia with complete technological surprise. The French, Belgian, and Dutch armies were compelled to surrender and the British army to sacrifice all of its material and seek safety in flight overseas. The Russian defeats were equally complete and Russia was saved only by the great distances to which her remaining troops could retreat and the vast supplies of material sent to her from the United States.

In the battle of France our forces turned the German methods against them with equal success until their tremendous march was arrested by the Siegfried line. The Germans then attempted a break-thru just where they had made it so successfully in 1940. Their initial success appeared to be complete, but the stubborn defense of the troops on the ground and the quick and correct decisions of Gen. Hodges sealed up the break-thru and turned it into a bloody salient from which the Germans have just retreated with heavy losses.

As many times faster than tanks—as tanks are faster than horses—are airplanes. At sea they have come entirely to dominate surface craft and are the principal peril to submarines. On land they have proved less decisive. Bombing of objectives far back of the enemy's fighting front has not yet justified itself. Attacking troops in position, it becomes, in effect, long-range, slow-firing artillery.

Its greatest value is against tanks and other motor vehicles on the march, and especially under conditions where the vehicles cannot leave the roads or find concealment in woods. We learned only recently how, after so many disappointing days of poor visibility, our aviation caught the German panzer [armored] army on the march and smashed some 3,000 vehicles.

I think it may be said confidently that aviation is absolutely dominant at sea and the most important weapon over the land, and after it in importance come the tanks.

HOW TO KEEP WELL
by Dr. Irving S. Cutter

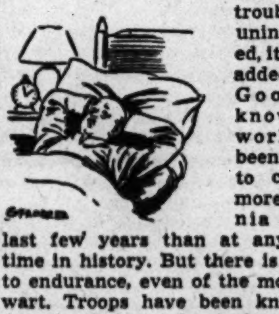
[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SLEEPLESSNESS—A COMMON AFFLICTION.

LACK of sleep can break down one's constitution about as quickly as the most vicious ailment. Rest, with normal loss of consciousness, is necessary for the rebuilding of vital forces. When it is untroubled and uninterrupted, it carries added value. Goodness knows, the world has been obliged to confront more insomnia in the last few years than at any other time in history. But there is a limit to endurance, even of the most stalwart. Troops have been known to drop in their tracks during violent combat or while on the march. For most of us, it is a question of opportunity and a suitable environment. Given a comfortable bed and a quiet spot, relaxation and oblivion will come without much delay.



As we grow older, sleeplessness may become a problem. Naturally, it will be encouraged by pain, coughing, difficult breathing, gas within the bowel, or any one of many poisons. Among mental disturbances, worry is offender No. 1. In fact, any type of anxiety will be accompanied by alertness as an instinctive defense against danger.

The most common cause, however, is arteriosclerosis, which may be characterized by a high blood pressure and poor circulation to certain regions of the body. At first, these victims will waken early in the morning and be unable to recapture the lost hour or two. Later they are likely to become drowsy, chiefly in midafternoon or following the evening meal. Sometimes there is a wakeful interval in the middle of the night.

If recognized speedily, this situation can be overcome by the omission of tea and coffee at lunch and dinner and by focusing the mind away from exciting events. Furthermore, if more rest can be obtained, and all sources of toxins eliminated, we may be able to reduce the "pound" within the blood vessels.

We have numerous sedatives which are less harmful, for the most part, than staring at the ceiling all night long. Barbiturates are short-acting drugs and will usually bring on somnolence. Occasionally, when headache or muscular spasm is present, a combination of one of these remedies with aspirin is advantageous. Some seem to feel that there is special virtue in fighting off hypnotics. This must be granted if the cause can be spotted and removed. The role of excessive smoking likewise must be considered, as well as heavy, late meals likely to contain gas forming edibles. It is silly to break all the rules of good hygiene and then attempt to cover up with a sedative.

How much sleep is needed? There are wide variations. More depends upon consistent regularity than upon lengthening the period. I know people who are perfectly healthy who have no elevation of arterial tension, and yet who rarely waste [as they put it] more than six hours out of every twenty-four in slumber. The average individual, however, will require eight, while a few demand nine or ten.

Most of us are familiar with the deep sense of fatigue which comes after a long tramp thru the woods or a day spent in reasonable physical activity. It is no doubt true that "sitters" have more trouble than "doers." Many a case improves by increasing exercise to a reasonable standard.

ALL THIS AND MORE.

Mrs. D. M. writes: For some months I have been nervous and shaky and have frequent spells of dizziness and melancholia. My heart beats fast, I am short of breath, and I bloat up after eating. After examination, my doctor told me I am in the changes. I can't believe that all these disorders can come from this. What is your opinion?

REPLY.

If a skilled examination failed to disclose any real reason for your complaints, the menopause may be the culprit. Some women go thru the interval with no difficulty whatsoever. You apparently are one of the unlucky ones. In a few, like yourself, the upheaval is prodigious.

QUESTIONABLE.

J. U. writes: I am troubled with cold hands and feet, belching, and pain first on the right side and then the left. I am thinking about getting married but wonder if I should. Will you advise?

REPLY.

If your "intended" is willing to take a chance, who am I to interfere? Common sense would suggest that you investigate your symptoms. Abdominal pain, particularly, should not be neglected.

THE TIRED CHILD.

Mrs. T. writes: My 10 year old son is either lazy or weary. How can I find out what is wrong?

REPLY.

First have the family doctor check him over thoroly. If no abnormalities are found, see to it that his meals are balanced and adequate in amount. Keep in mind that some youngsters require more rest and sleep than others. A lad of that age should be so active that the parents are worn out by his vivacity.

APPLE CURE.

P. R. writes: I have heard that apples are helpful in diarrhea. Could this be?

REPLY.

Yes. Scraped pulp, from a well ripened apple, is frequently valuable in reducing overactivity of the intestinal tube. The tannic acid and pectin contained therein undoubtedly produce this effect.

GRADING INTELLIGENCE.

W. J. writes: Which has the highest mentality—an idiot, an imbecile, or a moron?

REPLY.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, The Tribune.

EVADED RESPONSIBILITY.

Galesburg, Ill., Feb. 3.—It makes my blood boil to read the letter in today's issue condemning Marshall and Crane high schools and other public schools for the conduct of students on a public bus. The attitude of the writer is typical of the reasoning of far too many people today. For the last 10 years our public schools have been shouldering more and more of the responsibility and blame for the welfare of our American youth. The blame for such actions should not be laid to the door of the school, but rather in the homes where children should learn such things.

But where is the American home? It expects the school to feed the child the one balanced meal it will get during the day in the school lunchroom. The school authorities are the first ones called in by the police when the child gets into trouble outside of school hours. The school nurse is supposed to tend to the teeth, the eyes, and check the weight. The school is supposed to plan constant recreation under careful, well planned teacher guidance, after school hours. The deans watch their morals, and in between the teachers are supposed to teach actual readin', writin', and 'rithmetic. Well, where does the home come in? Would it be just too much to ask it to teach them how to behave on a bus?

I think the sooner the schools refuse to assume the responsibility for a child from 4 p. m. until 9 a. m., the sooner the responsibility will be placed back in the home where it belongs. According to statistics, 280,000 teachers have left the teaching profession since 1941. It's easy to see why!

Mrs. Juanita Bednar.

HEAVEN HELP THE SCHOOLS.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—I am a teacher in the Chicago schools. No one in public knows the gross insults, annoyances, bad language, lies, a teacher encounters daily in her work. Pupils insist black is white. They throw chalk, erasers, blocks of wood at teachers. One teacher was hit on the face by a moron [boy]. In some school districts teachers have been attacked and beaten. The pupils talk incessantly right in classes. In some places they insist on putting on makeup, combing hair, dancing. They waste good paper and are rough with the textbooks. They are a destructive bunch, wrecking the furniture and windows. They want to tell the teachers what to do and how to teach. Three or six out of each class of 30 desire to work and be attentive. I could say much more. They even have the nerve to call teachers "liars." L. O.

DR. CUTTER'S COLUMN.

Elmhurst, Ill., Feb. 7.—I wish to express our sincere appreciation of Dr. Cutter's column. He, thru your paper, did the public a great service.

I hope you will publish his column in book form. Helma Gregg.

Friend of the YANKS

[Advice and assistance on draft and military questions, the problems of dependents of service men and veterans, is given here and by mail if a stamped envelope is sent. Personal advice and assistance are given veterans by appointment.]

F. C. writes: "Recently I took my pre-induction physical and my papers were stamped 'Limited Service.' Now I have received a 4-F classification from my draft board. Now, I have one perfectly good eye, but one eye slightly below par. Why should I be classed with the mentally and morally unfit? How can I get out of this classification?"

As the regulations stand now, the limited service classification has been eliminated and your board has no alternative but to put you in 4-F. However, if you go into war production, agriculture, or war supporting activity, your board can then put you in II.-B, II.-C, or II.-A[F].

"F. F. T. writes: "Before I entered service, I was in medical school in the beginning of my sophomore year. I was called in the draft and entered the navy. I received my boot training and then 18 months' sea duty when I was ordered back to school to complete my medical training. I still have a year to go. If the war ends before I complete my medical traning, will I be eligible to continue under the G. I. law after discharge, and for how long?"

The rules may change before your discharge, but, under present rules, you would be entitled to additional training for 13 months, plus the period of duty in boot training.

DR. CUTTER'S INFLUENCE.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—It is hard for me to believe Dr. Irving Cutter is gone. Only a few know the influence that he has been not only to Passavant but to the other Chicago hospitals.

Never did we have a problem at Henrotin hospital which I took to Dr. Cutter that he didn't patiently consider and usually offer a logical solution.

I shall miss him greatly in our hospital work. E. F. McDonald.

FACE WASHING.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—The patient innocently imagines that the purpose of a hospital is to benefit the ill and broken, but soon finds that its real intent is a place where nurses and interns may pursue their routine. The patient's comfort is of no consequence.

The unfortunate inmate of a hospital cot lies on his bed of exquisite pain. Toward morning, thru sheer exhaustion, he falls into a sleep. But he is immediately awakened by a fiend in the shape of a nurse, roused out of that blessed surcease from pain, and has his "face washed," in order that he may be kept awake and the nurses proceed with their routine and the interns acquire their necessary practice. Sleep is impossible, then, and once more the unfortunate victim of the most brutal practice since the Inquisition faces another long day of agony.

In the final reckoning, when justice is meted out, I hope to have the concession to wash a nurse's face—with snow—each morning.

James O'Grady.

NOT ALL JIVE ADDICTS.

Eureka, Ill., Feb. 3.—I am really disgusted with the broad classification adults have given us teen-agers. It seems that every normal high school girl must wear jeans and knee-length plaid shirts to any and every affair, spend at least two hours over a lemon coke in a crowded drug store, and swoon when Frankie, the Voice [?], Sinatra comes on over the ether waves. The ones among the army of youth who like to dress according to the occasion, have some ambitions and ideals, and have an appreciation of the finer arts—we're freaks? I think not! I have been in schools of all sizes and I find the lazy-day friends and Sinatra addicts the exception rather than the rule.

As for Sinatra—he may be the crooner at the White House teas—but I'll take Tibbett.

So, please, grown-ups, don't label us and tell us what we are. Let us speak for ourselves.

WORKERS WHO WON'T WORK.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 30.—"A Broken Hearted American" could tell plenty more. Those of us in the plants know what happens to those who are trying to get out the work; who speak up and say, "All right, folks, let's get this job out!" They become from that moment marked people. Unpleasantness, ranging anywhere from snubbing, backbiting, a general black mark, up to physical violence can result. What goes on within these plants cannot be imagined by our citizens who are paying the high wages with taxes. Many enter the plants expecting to work, but they are scared out of their purpose by the bullies within the plant. The sooner the public wakes up and comes to the rescue of the fighting and loyal minority who are getting out the production the sooner we will win this war. Write your congressman for a full and determined investigation now.

THE VOICE OF CIVILIZATION.

Camp Livingston, La., Feb. 1.—I've heard The Chicago Tribune called a lot of things while reading it thru the years, but it had to be down here in Louisiana where I heard its most apt description.

The boy newshawks from Alexandria each day about 4:30 come screaming down the alphabetical streets, "Get-cha latest news he-ah . . . the voice of civil-i-za-shun!" The only paper this one bunch have is The Chicago Tribune with yesterday's news. But in the hinterland, it's refreshing.

THE APPETITE OF BIRDS.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 23.—I read with a great deal of interest The Chicago Tribune Press Service story of the fashion in which you are caring for hungry robins.

I think that you will find a very useful and time saving device in feeding these birds will be to prepare vermicelli by boiling it with hamburger. Vermicelli, so prepared, has proven to be extremely acceptable for all worm eating species, and this procedure will save you the trouble of rolling up your worms. James Nelson Gowanloch,

SAVED THEIR BABY.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—We would like very much to express our sincere gratitude to No. 6 inhalator squad, under the supervision of Lt. O'Hare. On the morning of Dec. 16, our 17 month old baby stopped breathing. We called the fire department and within 10 minutes the inhalator squad was here.

In all, they administered one and one-half tanks of oxygen. They also warmed the blankets with which to wrap the baby, to take him to the hospital. Then they heated the cab of the inhalator squad car, and as soon as we got in with the baby, one of the firemen continued administering the oxygen. We drove very carefully on icy streets to the hospital, the siren going when necessary and the spotlights flashing on oncoming cars.

They accompanied us to the seventh floor of the hospital, where the doctor, nurses, and interns were waiting for us. After the doctor gave a quick, but thoro examination, and assured us that the baby would be all right, they left.

We were so grateful to them for all they had done, we felt quite humble in offering them a cash gift, which they flatly refused, telling us that was their duty and they were only glad that they had achieved their goal.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Helledy.

THE PUBLIC AS FALL GUY.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—It seems strange in Franklin D. Roosevelt's pre-election speeches everything regarding the war was supposed to be up to perfection. All the war front looked better than had been anticipated. The production lines were operating at capacity and there was no impediment of the war effort. Then, after election, out of a clear sky, everything went wrong. The casualty lists started to mount. Strikes spread and the production lines were not producing what was anticipated.

After being reëlected, the great commander in chief had to find a scapegoat for all the diplomatic errors and the failure of his foreign policy, which would soon be brought to light, so he directed his ire at the public and started a series of crackdowns on civil life. The worst is yet to come.

KEEPING UP MORALE.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—All you can hear and read is "Write to the boys to keep up their morale." I would like to know how it can be done when you get heartbreaking letters such as I have from my son, who is in the air transport command in India. He writes he has not received any of the six Christmas boxes that were sent to him, and please send cigarets, as all they get there are cornsilk or the equivalent done up in paper. At least, they taste like it—and at 50 cents a pack. If people say the cigarets are being sent overseas, they must be crazy, as none of the privates at my son's post is getting any.

Letters are not getting thru to him, so I, like hundreds of other mothers and wives, would like to know where the things are going if our boys don't get what we send them. Certainly, it can't all be at the bottom of the ocean or some other place. G. D.

JOLLY OLD HIROHITO.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Important policies regarding future relations with Japan were discussed at the recent Institute of Pacific Relations at Hot Springs, Va. Most important of all was a proposal by the British to retain Emperor Hirohito and the Japanese ruling class in post-war Japan.

A leading adviser to the British foreign office led the appeal for Hirohito. He stated, "No alternative to a monarchial system, under the present emperor or some other member of his family, is likely to provide the focus of stability which will be essential if the state is not to dissolve into chaos in the impending crisis."

What in hades are they thinking about? Let them dissolve into chaos. Who cares? George M. De Beer.

SUBURB FIGHTS WAR PRISONER CAMP PROPOSAL

Plan Arouses the Ire of Western Springs.

Opposition to the proposed location of a prisoner of war camp on the site of the old civilian conservation corps camp at Howard and Ogden avs. in Western Springs will be voiced before the board of county commissioners Tuesday by a committee of residents headed by Charles H. Wilson, 4209 Franklin av., in the suburb, president of the Field Park association, an organization of Western Springs property owners.

First intimation of the army's intention to house German prisoners of war from Fort Sheridan in the suburb, from where they would be distributed to various war plants in the vicinity, was given to residents of Western Springs and the neighboring communities of Hinsdale, La Grange, and La Grange Park last Wednesday night at an emergency meeting at which D. F. Farquharson, Western Springs village president, presided. They heard Capt. Fred H. Dettmar and Capt. J. F. Kopp of Fort Sheridan on their plans for the camp.

County Board Approached.

Army authorities previously had approached the county board with the proposal, because the abandoned CCC camp is located in the forest preserve, over which the board has jurisdiction.

Near Two Schools.

It was pointed out that the proposed location is directly across the street from a good residential district, and that children going to and from school must pass near-by.

The site also is adjacent to two schools. Our Lady of Bethlehem school, just east of the camp site, has 250 girl pupils between the ages of 6 and 13. St. Joseph's academy for boys also is in the vicinity, and a summer camp for girls usually is held in the forest preserve near-by.

"Some of our pupils are having nightmares about the camp being placed here," said Mother Superior Walburga of Our Lady of Bethlehem school. "No one ever builds a school next door to a penitentiary; why should they locate this prison camp next to our school? There is plenty of open prairie land available elsewhere for such a camp."

DEFENSE TAKES OVER IN DHAMER MURDER TRIAL

Princeton, Ill., Feb. 10 [Special].—Farmers in town for their Saturday night shopping gathered in groups outside the county jail and along business streets tonight for talkfests about the Dhamer murder trial which is scheduled to be resumed Monday with Harry Dhamer, 42, Sheffield farmer, taking the stand in his own defense.

Dhamer and his wife, Lucille, 27, are jointly accused of murdering Charles Neufcour, 32, who was shot in a bean patch last October by Lucille while her husband stood by.

Trial fans were disappointed today when the trial was adjourned until Monday after a brief morning session.

Josef T. Skinner, defense counsel, said he plans to put Dhamer on the stand as his first witness Monday and then will call Lucille. The defense is attempting to show that Neufcour was shot accidentally.

WARNS ILLINOIS MAY BECOME A 'DUST BOWL'

State Official Urges Lake, Pond System.

Restoration of natural lakes and ponds in Illinois as a means of overcoming a water famine in the state was urged yesterday by Livingston E. Osborne, director of the state department of conservation. Unless some such water saving program is worked out, he declared, Illinois may become a "dust bowl."

L. E. Osborne.

The water table in Illinois, as in other midwestern states, has been lowered steadily by heavy drains for commercial uses, particularly in the big war plants, Osborne said. In the last few years some downstate communities have had to haul in water. Too much emphasis has been placed on commercial development, he said, and too little on conservation of the natural water supply.

"In former times, when we had sufficient lakes and rivers, water was retained in the soil," Osborne said. "Since the emphasis has been placed on commercial development, many of these lakes have been drained. The moisture has been taken out of the soil. If this trend is allowed to continue, huge dust bowl areas will develop and residents of this state will be victims of the whims of the wind."

Osborne said his proposal not only would provide reservoirs to maintain a sufficient water table under ground, but also would regain the fish and game bird stocks that once made Illinois a center of outdoor sport.

"This program could be started at once or after the war," he said. "The rebuilt lakes would be designed as fish waters and as sanctuaries for game birds and other wild life. The threat of famine and dust bowl would be removed and Illinois once again would take its place as a leading center for fishing, hunting, and other forms of outdoor recreation."

ONE OUT OF 185 U.S. SOLDIERS IN ARMY CUSTODY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—More than 45,000 American soldiers are in United States army custody around the world as prisoners for offenses ranging down from murder, rape, and desertion. About 20,000 of them are being held for minor offenses.

This means that one out of every 185 soldiers is a prisoner.

More than 1,800 are in federal penitentiaries, more than 8,500 in disciplinary barracks which are really army penitentiaries, more than 7,700 are in rehabilitation centers, and 4,700 are prisoners overseas. Others are held in army camps or garrisons.

A. W. O. L. Common Offense.

The statistics are from Col. Marion Rushton, head of the army's correction division, in an address before the Army and Navy club.

Absence without leave and desertion are the most frequent offenses and the line between them sometimes is thin.

Courts martial have to decide when a man ducked only to see his family or to have a good time and when he really intended to desert.

Special centers have been established on the east and west coasts to deal with the problem of men who have jumped ship on their scheduled trips abroad.

Records Examined.

Col. Rushton said that in those centers the ship skippers' records are "examined and if the excuse is pretty good and the record justified the conclusion that probably the soldier will make good after all, he is put on the next ship to rejoin his unit, with or without charges preferred."

"Such procedure is often recommended when soldiers miss their return boat after sick, rotational, or battle fatigue leave in this country," he said.

The colonel indicated desertion may be a real problem when Germany quits.

"It seems clear that there never will be any single optimum solution to the desertion problem," he said. "And it is not difficult to foresee real trouble with it when the fighting ceases in Germany and troops in large numbers are ordered across the world to fight in Japan."

8,000 A. W. O. L. in France.

More than 8,000 American soldiers have been reported absent without leave in France.

There seems to be no simple formula that can be used in judging different categories of cases, such as absence without leave or refusal to obey an order, the colonel explained.

Many cases have to be judged on their individual merits by the courts martial trying them. Civilians may think some of the decisions don't balance right. Army men apparently think some of the decisions don't balance right either.

Prison or Death.

But Pvt. Henry Weber, for refusing to drill at Camp Roberts, Cal., was sentenced to death. This later was changed to life imprisonment.

The army has put a lot of effort into its rehabilitation centers. If their superiors think a man can be "salvaged," even tho he is under heavy sentence, he may be sent to a rehabilitation center.

He is given severe tasks to do. If after going thru the grind he convinces his superiors that he is worthy of another chance, he is sent back to duty.

WPB AND UNION OPEN DODGE PLANT INQUIRY ON WORK STOPPAGE

War production board officials from Washington, D. C., met with union officials yesterday in the first of a series of meetings to investigate reported work stoppages, high labor turnover, and excessive absenteeism at the government's huge Dodge-Chicago plant, where B-29 Super Fortress engines are manufactured under Chrysler company management.

The preliminary meeting, explained as an exploratory one, was held in the War Agencies building, 226 Jackson blvd. In attendance were Joseph D. Keenan, WPB vice chairman for labor production, recently returned from a tour of the war fronts; D. Alan Strachan, deputy vice chairman of the same department, and Joseph Mattson, Paul Russo, and Henry Tough, officials of the United Auto Workers' union [CIO].

Several workers at the plant were called upon by the union to present testimony to prove the union's contention that company practices caused 119 work stoppages, and the reported 33½ per cent absenteeism rate among the women workers.

J. L. Kinsella and Charles Winters, members of the labor division of the regional WPB in whose office the conference was held, said the investigation would be resumed today, and perhaps continue for several days.

Ah, Order 31! Under It You Can 'Embrace' the Help!

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 10 (AP).—A southern business man wrote the 4th regional war labor board, asking that "you authorize me to embrace all my stenographers, under general order 31." After a couple of huddles, wage stabilization experts granted the request, deciding that "embrace." in this instance, was a statistical approach to an intra-office wage problem.

BOARD BELIEVES DENTISTS OPPOSE RACIAL QUOTAS

The board of trusteees of the American Dental association, making it plain that it did not speak for the association, whose house of delegates is not now in session, yesterday gave it as its opinion that members of the dental profession and of the association are opposed to a quota system based on racial origin for students desiring a dental education.

It has been charged that Dr. Harlan H. Horner, secretary of the association's council on dental education, had made reports to two eastern universities advocating a quota system designed to limit the number of Jewish students entering dental schools. Dr. Horner, tho refusing to divulge the contents of these confidential reports, said that they were the work of the council, not of himself personally.

Shortly after the board issued its statement from the association's headquarters at 222 E. Superior st., Dr. Walter H. Scherer, president of the association, received a telegram from officials of the anti-defamation league of B'nai B'rith urging that the association repudiate Dr. Horner's reports to the schools and to the house committee on education.

Hunt in Vain for Naster, Accused by Paratrooper

Police searched in vain yesterday for Bert K. Naster, president of Superior Electrical Industries, 1259 S. Campbell av., who was named in a warrant charging assault and battery obtained by Lt. Glen Crawford, a paratrooper who was wounded twice in Holland. Lt. Crawford, whose home is at 412 Lee st., Evanston, asserted Naster knocked him down in the Camelia room of the Drake hotel on Feb. 1.

WIFE SLAPS G. I. AT PROXY BABY CASE HEARING

Attack Occurs During Divorce Trial Recess.

Pvt. Gerald Brennan was slapped and kicked by his wife, Irma, 21, at a recess yesterday afternoon in the hearing of his suit for divorce on grounds of adultery, which she is contesting with the contention that he approved her having a baby by another man.

Brennan, on the witness stand during much of yesterday's hearing, denied her story. He said he first learned the baby was not his just before he ended a furlough from duty with the army air forces in Trinidad, British West Indies. Then at recess he went into the corridor, where she was talking with her lawyer, Samuel Starr.

Slaps and Kicks Him.

Mrs. Brennan flew at him, shouting, "You dirty, no good liar." She slapped his face and kicked his shins until the lawyer stopped her.

Brennan's testimony and that given by his wife the day before brought their dispute to where the question to be settled was whether he had condoned her conduct by living with her during his furlough, said Judge William J. Lindsay. He told the lawyers to be in court tomorrow, even tho it is a holiday, with briefs bearing on forgiveness of errant spouses.

Brennan said he came home for his brother's funeral last September, and went at once to see his wife then living with a married sister. A few nights later he and his wife were in a hotel room when, he testified, she said she had something to confide, "but if I tell you you'll kill me." Next day in a loop restaurant, the husband said, she told him, "I had a baby."

Says She Agreed to Divorce.

Brennan said that he announced at once he would seek a divorce, and he testified that she agreed. He said that during the rest of his furlough he stayed at his grandmother's home.

Relatives of both were witnesses yesterday. On Mrs. Brennan's side, the testimony was that Brennan, his wife, and the baby were seen together. His relatives upheld his contention that he had not seen her after learning her secret.

At one point Judge Lindsay asked the soldier, "Did you authorize your wife to give the name of Brennan to this baby?"

"No, sir, I did not."

"Your honor, he did too," Mrs. Brennan shouted.

SON, DAUGHTER CONTEST WILL FAVORING DRYS

The will of Nillis Johnson, book store owner, bequeathing $16,000 to missionary and prohibition organizations, was contested by his son and daughter in a suit filed in Circuit court yesterday asserting he was not of sound mind when the will was written.

The father, who was 70 when he died, Aug. 3, 1943, had a religious turn of mind in his latter years, said Sidney S. Schiller, attorney for Norman Johnson, the son, and Miss Angela F. Johnson. In 1933 the elder Johnson brought an "angel," a barefoot man with white robes and a beard, from Arizona to visit A Century of Progress exposition.

Among the bequests was $5,000 to the National Voice Broadcasting and News service, Los Angeles, to promote "a plan for reinstating national prohibition," and numerous gifts to missionary activities of the Methodist church.

7 MORE NAMED IN MICHIGAN ON BRIBERY COUNTS

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 10 [Special].—A conspiracy in which representatives of the Michigan State Dental society were alleged to have bribed legislators in 1939 to support a measure curbing activities of advertising dentists was charged today as Judge Leland W. Carr's one man grand jury indicted three dentists and four former legislators.

Dr. Clarence J. Wright, Lansing dentist, who was chairman of the state organization's legislative committee during the 1939 session, headed the list of defendants. All four former lawmakers named have been convicted on earlier charges.

Other defendants named as bribe givers in today's warrant are Dr. M. S. Devilliers, past president of the Detroit district Dental society and member of the state organization's legislative committee, and Dr. Edwin J. Chamberlain, Grand Rapids, the state dental society's treasurer.

The legislative respondents, all Democrats, are Francis J. Nowak, Earl C. Gallagher, Ernest G. Nagel, and D. Stephen Benzie, Norway.

Sigler disclosed no details of the charges in the latest grand jury case. He said the defendants will appear for arraignment Tuesday.

MEAT TO VANISH BY MIDSUMMER, OFFICIALS WARN

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—Meats may virtually disappear from civilian markets by midsummer, government food officials predicted today. The forecast accompanied new steps to divert the larger portion of current production into war stocks.

Civilian supplies could be expected, however, to reappear when fall marketings of live stock begin their normal increase.

With live stock marketing falling below previous expectations, the agriculture department cut its forecast of total production this year from 22¾ billion pounds to 22 billion. Last year 24.7 billion pounds were produced.

Production Drops.

Three factors are involved: unexpectedly smaller total meat production; the sharp drop in live stock marketing which normally occurs in spring and summer, and the combination of those factors which may leave the government unable to satisfy its wants beforehand and get out of the market ahead of the low supply season.

The war stocks are those the government buys for the military services, for lend-lease, and for civilian consumption in United States territories outside the continental limits of the country.

Low Level Indicated.

It is possible that per capita civilian consumption this year may fall to the lowest level since 1935, when meat supplies dropped after emergency slaughter of drought stricken cattle on western plains in 1934 and a reduction of hog numbers by means of the government's pig killing program designed to improve farm prices.

Per capita consumption in 1935 averaged about 116 pounds. Last year it was 147 pounds. Food officials said this year's average may be between 120 and 132 pounds, depending on length of the war in Europe, foreign relief requirements, and live stock production trends.

Government Stocking Up.

The government is trying to stock up now, reduce its buying later, and permit the bulk of the slim summer slaughter to civilians. Whether it will be able to do this is somewhat doubtful.

At present, marketing and slaughter—particularly of hogs—are not sufficient to fill allocations the war food administration has made for civilians and for war agencies. Insofar as production fails to meet allocations, civilian supplies suffer.

Action taken by the government today to divert more meat to the military services and lend-lease was an order requiring federally inspected slaughterers to set aside 70 per cent instead of the previous 50 per cent of their utility grade beef for production of canned meats.

RESCUE in the SUGAR CANE

*Dear Bill:

". . . When I was hit on Tinian (in the Marianas) Nips had us pinned down in a sugar cane field. They were in caves in some cliffs and really were giving us the business. A machine gun slug went through my hip early and I had visions of being in the field until dark when one of those Chrysler jobs rolled up.

"The driver told me what he was going to do and those treads looked plenty big as they straddled me. He pulled me through the escape hatch which is in the floor of the tank. If you should go to the Chrysler Tank Arsenal, find the head man and kiss him on the forehead for me. I love tanks and everyone connected with them."

CHICAGO GOLDEN GLOVERS AWAIT FINALS

32 TO BATTLE TOMORROW IN MARIGOLD RING

City Titles Prizes in Climax Bouts.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Golden Gloves firing on a farflung front enters one of its most congested campaigns this week, but for more than three hours tomorrow night 32 young Chicagoans are going to forget what their rivals in California, Florida, Louisiana, and Minnesota are doing. This band of rugged punchers and adept boxers is going to converge on the ring at Marigold Gardens, Grace st. and Broadway, for the big battle of their young lives — the Chicago finals of the eighteenth annual edition of boxing's biggest show.

One thousand general admission tickets for this climactic series of 16 bouts, at $1.20 each, will go on sale at 7 o'clock tomorrow night at the Marigold Gardens box office.

North Against the South.

Since the tournament began in 1928 Chicago boys and young men have proved themselves worthy competitors against the nation's best glove swingers. Tomorrow night's program carries an added intensity, for it will be the culmination of an old fashioned intracity feud — the north against the south. Sixteen of these lads earned the right to hop into the Marigold ring in the south side trials at St. Sabina's gymnasium. The other 16 passed their preliminary examinations at Loyola university's gym.

The program will open at 8 p. m., with the novice winners of the two sectional tests going at each other in eight weight divisions.

Witnesses to the sectional preliminaries at St. Sabina's and Loyola will testify that these youngsters, none of whom has won a championship in a major tourney, frequently surpassed their more seasoned fellows in the open class in ability as well as courage. Out of these novice ranks have come a number of the brightest fighters in Golden Gloves history. They are all prepared to leave their marks for future reference in the big show.

Look Ahead to Feb. 26.

The open division program of eight bouts will bring out experienced punchers who have been thru the leather mill. Whereas the novices will conclude their Golden Gloves activity for another year with tomorrow evening's performance, the open competitors will be fighting for more than a city championship. They'll be throwing lefts and rights for one of the eight places on the team which will represent Chicago in the Tournament of Champions.

This, the nation's premier boxing competition, will be decided in the Chicago Stadium on Feb. 26, 27, and 28. The survivors of this trying ordeal then will qualify for the 1945 finals, to be settled in the same Stadium ring on March 9.

The Tournament of Champions is the most important goal in a young boxer's life. It was this crucible of skill and heart which sent forth three world's champions—Joe Louis, Barney Ross, and Tony Zale—as well as a host of other battlers who distinguished themselves on the world's fistic stages.

Novices Highly Regarded.

Tomorrow's winners will have an opportunity to share in the fighting glory won by these champions when they compete with boxers representing 28 cities in 15 states, extending from California on the west to Florida on the east, and from Texas and Louisiana in the south to Minnesota in the north.

The open division will produce the Chicago ensemble for the Tournament of Champions, but ringwise connoisseurs of the preliminaries feel that the veterans' work tomorrow night may be overshadowed by the work of the novices. The railbirds who saw the preliminaries are anticipating one of the most explosive bouts in Golden Gloves records when 16 year old Howard Schultz of the Elgin Boys' league meets Bob Bomert of the Horn Athletic club in the novice heavyweight final.

Leading the open contenders will be two of last year's Chicago cham-

Baseball Men Voice Optimism

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—Baseball people were optimistic today that the war's trend in the next few weeks will help solve their problems.

This came to light when the offices of James Byrnes, war man power and war production, reported that no requests for conferences have been received from baseball representatives.

A week ago, Ford Frick, National league president, and Will Harridge, American league head, were appointed to come to Washington and discuss baseball's headaches with government officials.

Persons close to baseball said "it is a cinch that nothing will be done until Byrnes gets back" from overseas because the war mobilization director is considered the keyman in the whole situation.

There remained little doubt that baseball feels a lot better today than at any other time in the last two months over its prospects of going ahead in April on a reasonably satisfactory basis.

These developments the last week have been in its favor:

Delay in the senate of the house passed work-or-jail bill, which would seriously limit baseball's available man power [there is some question as to whether the bill will ever pass in "compulsory" form].

Support in the Senate military affairs committee, handling this legislation, to allow the game to use about 400 men rejected for the armed forces upon reëxamination.

Implication by the war department that it will "not counsel against" the sport's continuance, or its man power needs.

Substantial evidence that the public and service men want the sport kept alive, coupled with friendly reaction to soundings in official circles.

NEWS TO HARRIDGE

GREENLEAF WINS TWICE, BUT HE'S STILL FAR BACK

Ralp Greenleaf continued his belated rally yesterday in his challenge match with Willie Mosconi, world pocket billiard champion, by winning both the afternoon and evening engagements in Bensinger's 31 S. Wabash av. recreation. They will play two blocks today, ending their Chicago engagement. Detroit is the next stop.

Grenleaf put on a spectacular finish by running 61 to close out his night duel with the champion, 125 to 122, in 23 innings. By running 86 in the 21st inning, Mosconi had taken a 118 to 54 lead. On the afternoon block, Greenleaf triumphed, 125 to 115. At the conclusion of the day's business Mosconi had an over-all lead of 2,582 to 2,087. TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 10 (AP).—The last place Chicago Blackhawks displayed one of the tightest defensive exhibitions of the year tonight as they defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs, 2 to 1, before a crowd of 11,446. Tonight marked the first victory of the season on Toronto ice for Chicago. The two teams left immediately after the game for Chicago where they will meet again tomorrow night.

Left Winger Don Grosso started the Hawks on the way to victory with an unassisted goal early in the first period, and from then until late in the final period, the Toronto attack stalled against unwavering Chicago checking.

Wilf Field gave the visitors a 2 to 0 margin half-way thru the third period when he beat Frank McCool easily on Butch McDonald's perfect pass.

Desperate Leaf attempts to crack the Hawk defensive wall finally paid off with only a minute and 45 seconds remaining, when Lorne Carr spoiled Mike Karakas' shutout on a ganging play. He was assisted by Art Jackson and Wally Stanowski.

Despite the fierce checking, the game was cleanly played and only two penalties were handed out, one to each team.

Irish Defeat New York U. Violets, 66-60

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Staving off a last half rally, Notre Dame's basketball team defeated New York university for the fifth straight time tonight, 66 to 60, before 18,210 fans, the largest turnout of the season in Madison Square Garden.

The Irish, led by Vince Boryla, took the lead in the first five minutes and raced away to a 42 to 25 advantage at the intermission and widened their margin to 23 points early in the final half.

Hassett Scores on Fouls.

With little Don Forman and Adolph Schayes pacing the attack, the Metropolitan five struck back with an offensive that rapidly made a close game of this 12th meeting between the two schools, 10 of which have been won by Notre Dame.

Notre Dame lost the services of Billy Hassett with 10 minutes to play, and five minutes later the New Yorkers were within six points, 60 to 54. They never got any closer, however, as Boryla and George Ratterman connected with three field goals.

Boryla, Ratterman Lead Irish.

New York's deadly shooting from the foul line kept the losers in the game as they counted 20 of their 24 foul shots. Notre Dame made good on eight out of 10 but outscored the locals 29 goals to 20 from the floor.

Boryla and Ratterman paced the Irish with 24 points each while Shayes led the losers with 16, two more than Sid Tanenbaum chaked up for N. Y. U.

WHITE SOX MAY START SPRING DRILL MARCH 12

The uncertainties surrounding major league baseball at the moment are the cause of the White Sox failure to set an opening for Prof. James Dykes' annual spring baseball school which this year—unless there is a hitch—will be conducted in Terre Haute, Ind. Vice President Harry Grabiner declared yesterday that indications pointed to March 12 for the grand opening in Terre Haute but "that it might be much later." Because of the clouds in the baseball sky, Grabiner has abandoned his annual vacation jaunt to California.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The difference between victory and defeat for Defaul's basketball team last night in the Stadium was George Mikan. De Paul won from the Oklahoma Aggies, 48 to 46, and the Cowboys made it a battle from the first whistle to the end. But it was Mikan who gave the Demons the edge and held them together against a closing rally for De Paul's-17th victory in 18 games.

Mikan met his equal in Bob Kurland, the Cowboys' 7 foot center, as far as height is concerned. And the game developed strictly into a defensive and offensive fight between these behemoths. But Mikan was the more agile, he played a bit more intelligently, and De Paul was the benefactor.

There Is No Rough Stuff.

Kurland and Mikan, rivals on the respective pivot lines, played clean basketball. Seldom has any game been so evenly contested; but in the final analysis, Mikan's passing, as well as his shooting, paid off. De Paul trailed, 10 to 5, and, 14 to 9, before a late surge in the first half sent the Demons ahead 28 to 25 at the intermission. The score had been tied four times.

Jack Allen, who gave a fine exhibition of defense and offense until excused on five personals, assisted De Paul to an early 35 to 27 lead in the second half. Thereafter, it was the Demons' task to hold that advantage.

With the score 44 to 36 for De Paul, however, the Cowboys rallied and closed the gap to two points on Weldon Kerns' field goal, two free throws, and Doyle Parrack's field goal. John Wylie missed the tying shot and Ed Kachan hit for De Paul with two minutes to play. The rivals traded goals before Parks ended the scoring.

Buckeyes Win; Hold Lead.

Northwestern was beaten by Ohio State in the first game last night, 36 to 32, as the Buckeyes held first place in the Western conference race. Ohio State got away fast against a lethargic Wildcat quintet to lead, 26 to 7, at the end of the half.

Frank Wright opened the second half with a free throw followed by Morris' basket from far out. Bill Pfeiffer hit for the Buckeyes and Max Morris responded with his second basket, followed by Bud Pettit's free throw to make the score 27 to 13. After Pfeiffer connected the Wildcats scored three points on two free throws by Wright and another by Benny Schadler.

Northwestern got a drive under way that accounted for 10 straight points while Ohio was held to two points on Arnold Risen's follow-up shot.

Northwestern continued on the attack as Wright and Morris hit in succession, while Ohio got a free throw by Paul Huston to bring the score to 35 to 32 in the Buckeyes' favor. Just before the final gun Huston made a free throw.

The games were played before 14,972.

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 10 [Special].—Iowa's Hawkeyes kept in the thick of the Big Nine basketball title race tonight by winning a 45 to 40 victory over Indiana, but only after rallying late in the game. It was Iowa's sixth conference triumph in seven contests.

The Hoosiers, trailing at the half, 28 to 23, took a 34 to 30 lead after nine minutes of the second period and there never was more than four points difference in the score during the rest of the game. Dick Ives, who was the game's high scorer with 12 points, brought the Hawkeyes from behind with three consecutive baskets before he left the game on fouls. Ives' rally gave the Iowans a 38 to 36 lead, which they built to 40 to 36 on Clayton Wilkinson's tip-in shot.

Herbert Wilkinson Breaks Tie.

The Hoosiers came back with baskets by Freeland Armstrong and James Copeland to knot the count at 40 to 40 with four minutes to play, but Iowa controled the rebounds from then on. Herbert Wilkinson cashed in on Indiana fouls for three points and Ned Postels hit a hook shot to give the Hawks their margin of victory.

Iowa beat Indiana three weeks ago, 56 to 51. This was the Hoosiers' fifth straight conference defeat and the sixth in eight games. Lineup:

ILLINI, 57; GOPHERS, 35

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 10 [Special].—Sparked by Walt Kersulis, who soon will be leaving for a date with the United States army, and Junior Kirk, the University of Illinois basketball team rolled to its fourth Big Nine conference victory tonight at the expense of Minnesota, 57 to 35. The Illini thus remained in the title running, having suffered only one conference defeat. Kersulis and Kirk scored 14 points apiece.

Controlling rebounds from both backboards and passing with deadly accuracy, the Illini played like champions all the way.

The Illinois defense, too, was remarkable as evidenced by the fact that the Gophers were held to 11 field goals, including three by the towering Kleggie Hermsen.

The visitors led at the half, 29 to 17, and Minnesota's only sign of a threat came late in the game when baskets by Gordon Muske, Walt Rucke and Ray Christensen in quick succession cut the Illini margin to 44 to 30. Lineups:

BADGERS WIN, 55-44

Madison, Wis., Feb. 10 [Special].—The University of Wisconsin basketball team broke a five game losing streak, four of them against Big Nine opposition, by trouncing Michigan, 55 to 44, in a fast, rough game tonight.

The Badgers, led by Ray Patterson with 18 points, were behind only in the early part of the game as the entire squad found the range and raced away from the Wolverines, 29 to 21, at half time. Bill Johnson and Patterson got eight points each in the half but it was little Gene Matthews who sparked the Badgers in both late scoring sprees.

Michigan battled the Badgers on even terms in the second half and cut Wisconsin's margin to 47 to 42 with eight minutes to play. Again Matthews stepped into the breach with two short baskets. Patterson and Des Smith also scored and the Wolverine threat was ended.

WILDCAT SWIM TEAM DEFEATS IOWA, 58 TO 26

Koblish, Heusner Pace N. U. to Victory.

Northwestern university's swimming team won seven of nine first places to defeat Iowa, 58 to 26, in a dual meet in Patten pool in Evanston yesterday. The Wildcats were paced by Art Koblish and Bill Heusner who swept all four free style events. Koblish won the 50 and 100 yard free style and Heusner captured the 220 and 440.

Capt. Bernie Walters of Iowa carried off scoring honors by winning the fancy diving and 200 yard breast stroke and placing third in the 50 yard free style. Walters also swam on the second place medley relay team.

In winning the two distance events Heusner remained in the undefeated class and established himself as an outstanding contender for the conference titles in these events in the Big Nine championships to be held at Northwestern March 10. The husky freshman was a former star at Evanston High school.

Baseball Gets New Hope in War's Trends

a report from Washington that government officials might ask the major leaguers to realign their setup as a means of cutting down on train travel.

"In the absence of official notice I have no comment to make," Harridge added.

The Associated Press story from Washington said the plan suggested would align the leagues as all-eastern and all-western organizations with the clubs allocated as follows:

EAST—Two Boston, New York, and Philadelphia teams, Brooklyn, and Washington.

WEST—Two Chicago and St. Louis teams, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Detroit.

The same idea came up in the first year of the war and has been mentioned each succeeding year but nothing was done about it.

Jug M'Spaden Leads Way in New Orleans

New Orleans, La., Feb. 10 (AP).—Harold [Jug] McSpaden, Sanford, Me., appeared headed for his first New Orleans Open golf title in six tries tonight after shooting a three under par 69 in the second round for a 36 hole total of 137.

The half way mark in the $5,000 war bond tournament, which ends with two 18 hole rounds tomorrow, found McSpaden seven under par and three strokes ahead of Byron Nelson of Toledo, O.

McSpaden's card today, 34-35—69, one stroke over his first day score of four under par 68, showed five birdies, 11 pars, and two bogeys.

Nelson shot a two under par for the second straight day and remained McSpaden's greatest threat. Golf's leading money winner had a 35 on both nines.

CLEVELAND ICE STARS SHINE IN FIGURE EVENT

BY EDWARD PRELL.

A group of talented young misses and misters from Cleveland yesterday won five of 11 events as the two day midewstern figure skating championships ended lasts night in the Chicago Arena.

When the gliding and the jumping on the ice was over, 17 year old Michael McGean of the Cleveland Skating club had established himself as a standout. He won the men's senior, the senior pairs with his cousin, Anne McGean, and the senior dance with Sally Blair as his partner. Young McGean, who packs away his skates when summer comes to play sandlot baseball in Shaker Heights, a Cleveland suburb, will enter the national championships in Madison Square Garden March 2-3-4-5. He was pressed in men's senior competition by a rival from the Cleveland Skating club, lanky John Tuckerman.

13 Year Old Wins Crown.

The small, but smart, crowd was treated to an evening of dazzling routines and warmly cheered Deedee Arends, University of Minnesota 19 year old freshman from the St. Paul Figure Skating club, who won the women's senior championship. It was her third straight triumph on the midwestern event. She will make a third bid in the nationals next month after having finished fourth last year and third in 1943.

Barbara Jones had almost unbelievable poise, skill, and grace for her 13 years and she easily won the women's junior crown. Barbara was representing the Tulsa Figure Skating club, but came to Chicago from Philadelphia, where she is studying skating under Guss Lussi. The little brown-haired miss began skating years ago when her uncle, proprietor of a Tulsa sporting goods store, gave her a pair of skates. She plans to make this sport her profession.

Chicagoan Wins Novice Title.

The only triumph scored by the Chicago Figure Skating club on its home ice went to Larry Van Der Bosch, who took the men's novice title. The Chicago club's fours was forced to withdraw from competition when one of the quartet, Jacqueline Dunn, suffered a badly cut leg during practice earlier in the day.

After the event ended, Harry Radix, president of the Chicago Figure Skating club, said he would try to land the 1945 national championships to help celebrate the club's 25th anniversary.

Skaters Seek Season Point Awards Today

The Will county ice skating championship meet with 22 final races on the program, will be held this afternoon in Highland park, one and one-half miles east of Joliet on Route 30. Most of the leading skaters in the Chicago area are entered in the meet which will settle leadership in the season's point standings for the awards to be presented by the Chicago Sports association.

Only 10 points separate the three leading skaters in the men's senior division, with Buddy Solem and Lowell Miller, both of the C. Y. O. tied for the lead with 270 points, and Seaman 2/C Ray Blum, representing Radio Chicago, having a total of 260. Max Kargol, also of the C. Y. O., is fourth with an even 200.

Elaine Bodga Gordon, Northwest Skating club star, looks like a certain winner in the women's senior events. She has a big lead in points for the season, but may be hard pressed by a trio of runners-up, Peggy Barber of the Barrett Athletic club, and Luetta DuMez and Marion Laise of the C. Y. O.

Joliet busses will leave the terminal at Randolph and State at 11 o'clock this morning for the meet. The program of events:

SENIOR MEN—440 yards, ¾ mile, and 2 miles. INTERMEDIATE BOYS—440 yards and 1 mile. JUNIOR BOYS—440 and 880 yards. JUVENILE BOYS—440 and 880 yards. MIDGET BOYS—220 and 440 yards. MEN'S CLASS B—1 mile. SENIOR WOMEN—440 yards and 1 mile. INTERMEDIATE GIRLS—440 and 880 yards. JUNIOR GIRLS—440 and 880 yards. JUVENILE GIRLS—220 and 440 yards. MIDGET GIRLS—1/6 mile and 220 yards.

The first race is scheduled to get under way at 1:30 p. m., and the skaters are requested to report to Harry Berz, chief clerk of course, by 1 p. m. for numbers and assignment to heats.

PHILLIES SIGN JIMMY FOXX TO YEAR CONTRACT

Road Secretary Jimmy Hagen said terms of the contract have not been announced.

"Foxx is in good shape," Hagen said. "We expect to see Jimmy playing a lot of ball in Shibe park this season."

Foxx began his long career in Philadelphia with the Athletics in 1925. He was traded to the Boston Red Sox in 1935 and moved to the Chicago Cubs in 1942—his first entry into the National league. He quit organized baseball altogether in 1943 and played only a short time last season.

The Cubs listed Foxx as a coach and scout on this year's roster and then released him when he said he wanted to play again.

"I'm not thru," Foxx said. "My legs are as good as ever."

PAPKE KEY MAN IN CLEVELAND'S GOLDEN GLOVES

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., Feb. 10.—Johnny Papke is Mr. Golden Gloves in Cleveland. For 17 years now Johnny has been one of the big cogs in the annual tournament sponsored by the Plain Dealer, which thru the years has led all contributing centers in champions crowned in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S great Tournament of Champions.

Since 1929, when Cleveland entered the Chicago show the first time, 18 Plain Dealer champions have gone all the way thru the big amateur fistic jamboree in the Stadium and all those 18 title holders owe much of their success to Papke.

Wins Prize Ninth Straight Year.

For many years Johnny has entered the greatest number of boys in the Cleveland tournament and last night he won the open division trainer's prize for the ninth straight year, as the 1945 venture came to a close before a capacity crowd of 10,000 in the arena. On two other occasions in the city's 17 years of Golden Gloves, Johnny came out with top honors.

Papke has a gymnasium on the east side of Cleveland. Fully equipped, open to amateurs and professionals thruout the year, it is nationally known and is one of the few in the country that pays its own way.

Johnny boxed briefly as an amateur around Wisconsin and then turned professional as a middleweight. He boxed the best of them, including the late Harry Greb, who beat him, but said later, "He was the toughest so-and-so I ever met."

Uses Dunn Training System.

When Johnny arrived in Cleveland he hooked up with Jimmy Dunn, generally recognized as one of the outstanding boxing teachers of the country. Dunn at one time managed a great stable of fighters, including Johnny Karr, Charley O'Connell, and Phil and Matt Brock. He taught Papke his training system.

Papke's method of teaching starts with the feet-proper position, etc. He uses a mirror to teach correct hand positions and punches.

Has Artificial Eye.

Papke has an artificial eye, but few can tell which it is. And there's a story behind that. One of his closest friends was a doctor and John visited him often. He dropped in one afternoon and the doctor said, "How about a good physical checkup, eyes and all?" That was when Johnny learned that the sight in one eye was entirely gone and the other was endangered. Without even consulting his wife, Papke submitted to an operation that same afternoon.

The boys Papke coached to Chicago championships make an imposing list. In the 112 pound class there were Jesse Levels and Jackie Wilson, now in the army. Troy Bellini, who is making another name for himself in the navy, won the 118 pound title. Four 126 pounders made the grade: Don Gonzales, now a referee; Ted Kara, a lieutenant in the army air corps, is missing in action; Dam Derrico is in the navy, and Tony Janiro is fighting professionally.

Coached Many Champions.

The lightweight champions were Frank Bojack, Mike Gamieri, and Chuck Hunter, now an outstanding pro. Danny Farrer, now a chemist, and George Horne, in the coast guard, won 147 pound titles. The 160 pounders were Joe Maxin, a sergeant in the army, and Samson Powell, now a pro. The light heavyweight champions were Joe Bauer, Jimmy Reeves, and Ray Standifer, while Dan Merritt, who won the heavyweight crown in 1938, now is a trainer.

Papke, whose squads won the team trophy in Chicago seven times, has another capable squad ready for the Tournament of Champions Feb. 26, 27, and 28 in Chicago Stadium, and the chances are there is at least one champion among them.

112 POUNDS—Ted Fittipaldo, Youngstown, O.
118 POUNDS—John Emanuell, Akron, O.
126 POUNDS—Willie Stevenson, Cleveland.
135 POUNDS—Francis Pebbles, Dorset, O.
147 POUNDS—Lalo Berezo, Youngstown, O.
160 POUNDS—Sam Crandall, Akron, O.
175 POUNDS—Bob Redding, Cleveland.
HEAVYWEIGHT—Charles Lester, Cleveland.

ST. LOUIS READY

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 10 (AP).—The 10th annual version of the St. Louis Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament will open Monday night with approximately 400 entrants.

Out-of-town teams scheduled to participate include civilian squads from East St. Louis and Quincy, Ill., and Malden and Algoa Farms, Mo.

Military posts sending teams are Scott field, Ill., Jefferson Barracks, Fort Leonard Wood, Malden army air base, St. Louis coast guard, and V-12 naval unit at Westminster college, Fulton, Mo.

Pvt. Joe Maxim, one of the midwest's outstanding professional heavyweights, whose home is Cleveland, O., is coaching the Malden air base squad, while Chief Specialist Ben IVtale, former University of Arkansas football star, is in charge of the Westminster sailors.

Three Champions Return.

Three of the 1944 open division champions have entered the 1945 event. Eldon Chadek, coast guard, will defend his featherweight crown; Willie Jackson, Jefferson Barracks, is king of the welterweights, and Curtis Filer of East St. Louis, heads the middleweights.

Open division champions will qualify for the tournament of champions in Chicago. The St. Louis event is sponsored by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

RAY ROBINSON, COSTNER HEAD STADIUM SHOW

Consistent Ring Winners to Meet Wednesday.

BY FRANK MASTRO.

Ray [Sugar] Robinson sparred several rounds in the Ringside loop gymnasium yesterday afternoon in preparation for a 10 round fight with George Costner, Cincinnati knockout specialist, in Chicago Stadium Wednesday night.

Costner was only a preliminary fighter when the New York welterweight star last appeared in Chicago, on Oct. 27. On that date Sugar scored a ninth round technical knockout over Sgt. Lou Woods, and Costner knocked out Phil Williams, Ray's stablemate, in a supporting match.

"What do you think of Costner's chances against you?" Ray was asked. Robinson, busy taping his hands glanced up and replied, "I couldn't say. I've never seen Costner fight, but according to what I've heard, he's no soft touch."

23 Victories, 22 Knockouts.

Costner's conquest of Williams was his 18th straight knockout. He has scored five additional triumphs since then, four of them by knockouts, to give him a record of 23 consecutive victories and 22 knockouts. Sugar appeared properly impressed by this record when he said, "I expect Costner to give me a lotta trouble."

He no doubt was recalling his disappointing exhibition against Woods, against whom he failed to score a single knockdown.

Robinson belittled his performance against Tommy Bell in Cleveland last Jan. 16, saying he won the award after a hard fight. He was reminded of the two knockdowns he registered, one each in the ninth and 10th round. But that didn't cheer him much.

Sugar Looking Ahead.

Sugar acted as tho he were being led to a slaughter, but he must expect to beat Costner because he is looking ahead to matches with Jack Lamotta in Madison Square garden Feb. 23 and Joe Curcio in Buffalo March 5.

Robinson has lost only one decision in 142 encounters both as an amateur and professional. Fifty-three bouts were fought in the money ranks. He scored 40 consecutive decisions as a pro before suffering that lone setback.

Robinson and Costner will appear in semi-final workouts in the Ringside gymnasium this afternoon, the latter at 1:30 o'clock and Ray at 3.

Defended by Jacobs.

Robinson will donate 20 per cent of the purse he will receive for his match with Costner to a disabled veteran's fund, as he did after stopping Sgt. Woods. Ray's 35 per cent share amounted to $9,746, of which $1,953 went to the fund.

He also will collect 35 per cent of the receipts at Wednesday's encounter.

Mike Jacobs, New York promoter, who has more than a rooting interest in Robinson, has come to the defense of the New York boxer whose army record occasionally is attacked by sports writers who may not be thoroly familiar with the facts in the case.

Sugar, whose correct name is Walker Smith, was inducted into the service in March, 1943, and mustered out last June 3. It has been charged Ray was given "an easy discharge from the army as being temporarily unqualified for military service."

According to Jacobs, that report is not true. Mike sent a photostatic copy of the HONORABLE DISCHARGE [the caps belong to Jacobs] to prove his point.

See Brown as GridironTonic in Cleveland

Cleveland, O., Feb. 10 (AP).—The calendar says it's February but Cleveland sport circles are buzzing with professional football—prompted by Lt. [j.g.] Paul Brown's acceptance of the post-war general manager and coaching job with the Cleveland entry in the All-America Football conference. Gridiron fans are debating whether Cleveland can support two top flight pro teams when so far it has been somewhat indifferent to one.

One group points to the fact that Cleveland has had a National league pro-football team, the Rams, since 1937—and the Rams have yet to make a profit. But the other side counters that the mere fact that Brown, in turn the Massillon High school, Ohio State and Great Lakes coach, will operate the new club guarantees the profitable attendance the Rams sought in vain.

Brown to Draw New Fans.

This latter school claims the big problem facing pro football here is to get new people into the park—just once or twice. The argument goes like this: Thousands of new people will be drawn by Brown's name alone, and, having sampled the pro game, they'll want to see it whether Brown's team or the Rams are playing.

The fact that crowds ranging from 30,000 to 80,000 have watched big college games in Cleveland's stadium also is cited as a sign of potential support.

The post-war Rams admittedly will be quite an aggregation. Manager Chile Walsh has signed one of the fanciest rosters of ex-college stars to be seen outside All-America records.

McBride Is Optimistic.

The new team has not yet announced signing any players but Brown's boss-to-be, Arthur McBride, says the hunt is on.

"We have all the vast population of northern Ohio to draw from and a stadium with 80,000 seats," he said, "and I believe the public will go for new faces and new teams, particularly if we show them headline players."

Honorable Discharge

Army of the United States

This photostatic copy of his honorable discharge from the army is Robinson's answer to those who would criticize his service record. Mike Jacobs, New York boxing promoter, is one of the most enthusiastic defenders of Sugar's service record.

The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

PERHAPS it is just a coincidence, but on Friday, first day in two months in which the temperature ventured more than a hop above the freezing level, the Industrial Amateur Golf Tournament association issued a call for its 1945 meeting. The session will be held Wednesday at 7 p. m. in the offices of the Chicago Sports association, 134 N. La Salle st. All member industries—around 40—are requested to send representatives, as plans for the season will be drawn up.

Also on the program will be the election of officers for 1945. The nominating committee is headed by Art Sweet of Douglas Aircraft, one of the area's better known veteran tournament golfers. Claud S. Gordon, president of the company which bears his name, has served as president of the association for the two years of its existence. In fact, for the first year he was the entire official staff, as well as the godfather and nurse of the infant organization. In its first season, however, it grew so lustily that a year ago the association was incorporated, with a full set of officers, directors committees, and what have you. Already a number of applications for membership have been received, indicating further vigorous growth this year.

Original Industrial Bowling Meet Entries Close Wednesday.

Entries for the 22d tournament of the Original Industrial Bowling association, which opens March 3, will be accepted until midnight Wednesday, Walter Juergensen, secretary of the association, reports. The event will be held at Congress Recreation.

Yesterday, before the usual last minute rush of entries had begun, Juergensen reported that 250 teams had been nominated in the five man division, indicating that the tournament will attract about the same number of entries as in recent years, in spite of various war time handicaps which might have cut down the nominations. All contestants must, of course, be bona fide employes of the concern which they represent in the tourney.

Heading the list of entries, as of yesterday, was the tractor division of International Harvester company, with 24 teams signed up. Second was an out of town company, Barber-Colman of Rockford, with 16 teams. BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Frank Van Dalen, the 41 year old Niagara Falls, N. Y. clerk who on Thursday night found the 1,600 combination which had baffled the rest of the field, was still in charge of the lead in the Petersen Bowling Classic yesterday as the $43,200 show wheeled into its final seven squads. Van Dalen, one time member of an A. B. C. championship team, hit the 1,600 figure on the head on Thursday's first detail.

That performance gave him a 15 pin advantage over Charley Boehm, Detroit war worker, who had gone to the front last Sunday with a 1,585. In each case, the two leaders came thru in the stretch, Van Dalen outdoing 220 in his seventh and eighth attempts, while Boehm fashioned a 225 on his last appearance. A majority of other stars outdid the pair in their first six games, but couldn't produce 200 games in finishing pairs.

Van Dalen's total stood up thru Friay's firing, the only newcomer to the top 10 being Eli Maricich of Chicago, who shot a 1,562 on Friday's last crew.

The Van Dalen 1,600 also survived the attempts of yesterday's first two squads.

Spotting the Pins

BY ROBERT BEACH.

TONIGHT will bring a close to the Petersen twin bowling events, the Classic and the two-in-one doubles tourney. It will also write finis to Dom DeVito's Classic. These three tenpin enterprises have held the center of the stage for the last 16 days and each reaches its final chapter marked with success both from competitive and pecuniary standpoints.

But, think you, this marks the close of tenpin tourneying in Chicagoland? Well—

For the top notchers, Louie Petersen's next presentation will be his five man team Victory event, scheduled in the Auditorium Service Men's center March 10 and 11. On April 14 Barney Hochstadter's Junior meet, carrying a top award of $2,500 [increased from $1,500 last year] for under 185 average bowlers will open at Archer-35th. Seven days later Leo Krisch's Irving Park Sweepstakes will start. It also is for under 185 average performers and its first prize is $2,000. On the 29th of the same month the Marigold Handicap, still another event for the under 185 boys, with its leading reward doubled to $2,000, will begin.

April 21 will see Jerry Peck's second annual individual Classic get under way, with the winner to get $500. Then will follow on May 18-19-20, the Petersen national doubles meet.

There are others, for both the big shots and the lesser lights. But these should prove sufficient to convince Mr. Bowler that the show isn't over just because the three current features reach the fadeout stage tonight.

Soccer Comes Back Today in Cup Game

BY OFFSIDE.

Soccer action, frozen for the duration of the winter storms, will be thawed out and dished up to Chicago fans at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon when the Guisti-Italians will meet the Slovaks in a first round match in the National Open cup competition in Sparta stadium, 21st st. and Kostner av. The contest will mark the resumption of soccer warfare after a lapse of more than two months.

During the long layoff many changes have been made in the Guisti-Italian club in both official and playing capacities. Marino Mazzei, tea mcaptain, who plays in the center half position, has taken over the duties as manager, held for years by Sam Reda, who now is giving all his time to the juniors.

Capt. Mazeei, who was one of the game's leading referees for many years, has rounded up a strong combination, and with only one exception, he has an all Italian outfit.

Three new additions, along with several players from the reserve team, make up an outfit that might again spring surprises. Noteworthy newscomers include George Fishwick, who used to sparkle for the Schwabens; Helga Gunnard, for a couple of seasons first reserve for the Swedish-Americans, and Meni Minio, in goal who was for years with the Italians.

RAFFERTY WINS HUNTER MILE IN BOSTON GARDEN

Boston, Mass., Feb. 10 (AP).—The famous Hunter mile, traditional feature of the Boston A. A. track meet, whittled down to a three man event by war conditions, was won in easy fashion tonight by the 4:14.3 effort of Jim Rafferty of the New York A. C. He had 25 yards to spare over his fellow townsman, Rudy Simms.

A crowd of 8,000 in the Boston Garden saw Rafferty, who had to do 4:13.1 to win last week's Wanamaker mile, run third behind Simms and Ensign Tommy Quinn from the Bainbridge, Md., naval base, until the gun sounded for the final lap.

Herbert Sprints to Victory.

After a seven year lapse, 29 year old Jimmy Herbert, New York Negro, turned in his third Hollis "600" victory by bursting from fourth on the gun lap to beat out Elmore Harris of Long Branch, N. J., by inches.

Herbert, whose previous Hollis victories were in 1937 and 1938, appeared hopelessly out of contention until the last half lap, when he displayed the blazing speed that brought him home a victor in last week's Millrose games.

Thompson Wins 50 Yard.

The veteran Herb Thompson, now running for the Long Island coast guard base, won his fourth Briggs 50 yard dash triumph with a foot to spare on Barney Ewell of Camp Kilmer, N. J., in the meet record equaling time of 5.3 seconds. Last year's winner, Ed Conwell of New York university, pulled up lame in his trial.

The first of the favorites to be outfooted was Eddie Dugger, Tufts' recent intercollegiate titlist, who was beaten in the 45 yard high hurdles final by F/O Don Kinzle, R. C. A. F., the former Duke star, who was clocked in 5.8 seconds.

45 YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Kinzle, R. C. A. F., Toronto; second, Dugger, unattached, Dayton [O.]; third, Snyder, Dartmouth. Time, 5.8.

50 YARD DASH—Won by Thompson, U. S. C. C., Long Island, N. Y.; second, Ewell, Camp Kilmer, N. J.; third, Mathis, Cardoza H. S., Washington, D. C. Time, 5.3 [equals track and meet record].

ONE MILE RELAY—Won by Massachusetts Institute of Technology [Chapman, Shea, Serrie, Crimmin]; second, Harvard; third, Cornell. Time, 3:29.5.

1,000 YARD RUN—Won by Challender, New York university; second, Joseph F. Hall, Columbia; third, Borck, New York A. C. Time, 2:18.6.

ONE MILE RELAY—Won by Tufts college [Southwick, King, Porter, Kennedy]; second, Rhode Island State college; third, Williams college. Time, 3:32.6.

600 YARD RUN—Won by Herbert, Grand Street Boys' association, N. Y.; second, Harris, Shore A. C., Long Branch, N. J.; third, Dibeler, New York A. C. Time, 1:15.5.

POLE VAULT—Won by Padway, U. S. army, New York; second, Schmidt, Ohio State; third, Harwood, Harvard Naval V-12. Height, 13 feet, 6 inches.

MILLER, 1943 IRISH STAR TO JOIN YALE STAFF

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 10 (AP).—A spokesman for the Yale Athletic association said tonight that arrangements had been completed whereby Creighton Miller, 1943 Notre Dame football star, will be added to the Yale staff as back field coach.

Miller, a member of the Notre Dame squad in 1941, received an honorable discharge from the army in 1942 in time to participate in about half of the Notre Dame schedule that year. The following year he rose to brilliant heights as a back, climaxing a great season by winning a place in the Associated Press' All-America back field.

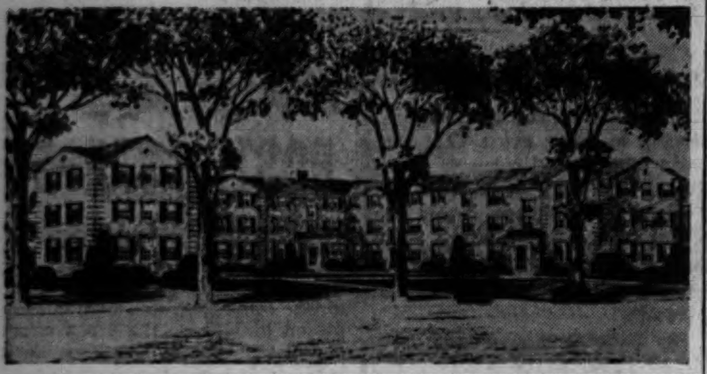
Suburban Apartments



Flats for war workers which will be built at the northwest corner of Lake st. and Bonnie Brae av., River Forest, from plans by Carl J. Kastrup. Completion for fall occupancy is sought.

LARGE CHICAGO HOUSING PLANS MADE BY GROUP

BY AL CHASE.

[Real Estate Editor.]

Joseph D. Shane.

Plans for a 2 million dollar Chicago residential project, the first of six involving a possible total investment of 20 millions in post-war private housing, were announced yesterday by Atty. Joseph D. Shane. He said his Chicago group will make use of the recently validated neighborhood redevelopment corporation law which permits condemnation of parts of the sites for blighted area private housing. Several sites for the first project are under consideration.

"We have two distinct types of apartment projects in mind," he said. "The groups planned for near-in blighted areas will have comparatively small living units. Those farther out, in so-called 'conservation areas,' catering to families wanting larger apartments and more extensive yards, will be laid out on a more generous ground plan and with bigger units."

Buy Minnesota Projects.

Entry of the Shane group into Chicago housing plans followed its recent purchase of two of the largest and newest residential developments in Minneapolis and St. Paul thru acquisition of the $2,500,000 capital stock of Village Apartment Homes, Inc., of Minnesota. Shane said the Twin City projects will be operated as an experimental guide for action in Chicago.

They fit into the two types planned for Chicago, he said. Fair Oaks, near the heart of Minneapolis, consists of 224 apartments in six buildings on a four acre tract with landscaped courts and gardens, broad lawns, and playground facilities. The apartments have 3½, 4, and 4½ rooms.

Six Million Dollars Available.

Highland Village, on 17 acres just outside St. Paul, has 16 buildings with 265 apartments with 3½ to 5 rooms in each. Provision was made there for larger families who want more space both indoors and out, Shane said. Rentals average about $60 a month.

Shane is president of the Minnesota corporation. Arthur J. Draper of Draper & Kramer is a vice president. David Saul Klafter is a vice president and consulting architect. All are Chicagoans.

Shane said his group had about 6 million dollars available for residential developments in Chicago and would obtain an additional 14 million thru Draper & Kramer. That firm, which manages large rental properties in several midwestern cities, will manage the two Minnesota projects. Arthur Draper negotiated their purchase.

River Forest War Worker Units Planned

Work is scheduled to start March 1 on a 36 apartment building at the northwest corner of Bonnie Brae av. and Lake st., River Forest. Expected to be ready for fall occupancy by war workers, the project was announced yesterday by John Cummings Lindop, realtor, who is sponsor and builder.

Designed by Carl J. Kastrup, it will have 18 units of 3½ rooms and six each of 4, 4½, and 5 rooms. Financing has been arranged thru Dovenmuehle, Inc., with a $190,000 FHA insured loan.

The three story building will be named for E. A. Cummings, pioneer Chicago real estate man. Beginning in 1869, he subdivided a large part of the Chicago west side, Oak Park, Maywood, River Forest, and other western suburbs. John Cummings Lindop is his grandson.

The new apartments will be located across from Cummings park, a 10 acre forest preserve west of the Marshall Field store and north of Wieboldt's.

9 STORY HOTEL IN UPTOWN AREA SOLD FOR $197,000

The nine story Winthrop Terrace hotel, 5734 Winthrop av., was sold yesterday by Liberty National bank, trustee, for $197,000. Title was taken by Esther Holznagel, who conveyed it to the Liberty National, as trustee. Carl Pomerance was attorney. The building contains 114 furnished apartments and is on a lot 50 by 150 feet.

Realty Miscellany

Baird & Warner's gross sales in 1944 were $12,795,995, an increase of 55 per cent over 1943, said Stewart B. Matthews, vice president. Number of sales increased from 296 in 1943 to 386 in 1944, a gain of 30 per cent.

"During 1944 properties increased in sales value about 15 per cent and during 1945 we expect a further increase in prices of property sold," said Matthews. "We also anticipate a great deal more vacant property will be sold during 1945 than in 1944."

William W. Sears of the Sears Real Estate company, Winnetka, said a survey disclosed that realty sales in the north shore suburbs from Evanston to Highland Park totaled $22,670,000 in 1944, compared with $12,564,000 in the previous peak year of 1937. Unit sales averaged $17,345, compared with $11,340 in 1937. Larger tho fewer homes were sold.

WORKS OR FACTORY MANAGER

To a technical college training, I have added 25 years of practical experience. In the multiple responsibilities of plant manager I have been successful, notably in material control, machine control, planning for mass and precision production, cost and incentive set-ups, labor relationships and engineering.

My experience has been in the fabrication of ferrous and non-ferrous metals and alloys; the assembly of mechanical and electrical products, together with tool and machine design for those products.

While familiar with unusual requirements of war material production, I am interested in hearing from responsible organization with attractive post war outlook.

EXPECT TRAVEL TO MAKE MANY POST-WAR JOBS

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Catering to the desire of Americans "to go places" is expected to open broad avenues of employment and small business opportunities after the war as transportation agencies, states, and resort areas compete with each other for travel and tourist business estimated to run into billions of dollars.

The department of commerce recently estimated that nonbusiness travel after the war—1946 was the year used for report purposes—would total 4 billion 80 million dollars, compared with 2 billion 352 million in 1940.

The Chicago Motor club estimated that 5 or 6 billion dollars a year was spent for recreational driving just before the war—amounts which will probably be exceeded when the family has enough gasoline and tires to be free to jump in the car and move out on the highways again.

More States Angle for Tourists.

Many states are devoting more attention to revenues possibilities from tourist business and are building up funds to be used to exploit their attractions. Such states as Utah, which previously had paid little attention to tourist business, are accumulating funds for advertising. California, Florida, Michigan, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, and New York are among the states which for years have sought to entice travelers.

The railroads, air lines, bus lines, and steamship companies will compete for the nonauto business of the traveling public. The transportation companies are expected to have some advantage in the years immediately after the war because so many automobiles have been worn to the point where they will not be reliable for long trips, and many months, if not a couple of years, may elapse before manufacturers will be able to satisfy the demand for new cars.

Larger Planes, Lower Fares.

The air lines will enter the competition with larger planes—seating 40 or more passengers—and recent proposed reductions indicate that fares may be lowered to about 4 cents a mile after the war if sufficient volume of business can be obtained. Present air line fares are about 5 cents a mile, compared with one way first class railroad fare of a little above 4 cents a mile. Post-war rail fares are expected to be lowered sufficiently to compete with air fares.

The railroads also are making ambitious plans to increase their post-war business thru the use of improved trains, high speed, and convenience. They hope to attract customers who either formerly used automobiles or did not travel.

The bus companies also are preparing for post-war period opportunities by placing orders for luxurious vehicles surpassing anything used before on the highways. They offer low fares, convenient points of departure and arrival, and travel over picturesque highways as inducements.

Many Thousands Will Reopen.

A resumption of civilian pleasure travel will reopen hundreds of thousands of small business establishments such as gasoline service stations, roadside restaurants, tourist camps, and complementary businesses. Before the war the automobile business provided jobs for more than 6 million persons, the larger part of them employed in servicing jobs, it was estimated.

With more persons expected to travel, more opportunity is anticipated for small resorts in recreation areas. Factors listed as favorable to such business activities will be the resumption of shorter work weeks, extension of vacations with pay to more workers, and longer vacations.

Railroad executives have said they expect a large amount of business after the war in handling the travel demands of returned service men.

MARKETS TO CLOSE.

Truckers Act to Solve Acute Lack of Labor

Chicago area motor truck operators yesterday appointed a four man committee to ask the war man power commission for a labor priority rating to relieve the acute shortage of drivers, dock workers, and mechanics.

The committee was named after a meeting of the operators with representatives of the office of defense transportation, the interstate commerce commission, and military officers, including Col. Harris P. Ralston, Illinois selective service director. Harris said the truckers need not "worry too much about workers over 30, but would have to put up a strong fight to keep men who are in the 26 to 29 age group."

Leventhal on Committee.

Committee members are Ben Leventhal, president of the Central Motor Freight association; Anthony Nelson, president of the Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association; William B. Crawford, head of the Cartage Exchange of Chicago, and Arthur Sorenson, president of the Suburban Motor Carriers' association.

John Keeshin, president of the Keeshin Freight lines, and other operators asserted they were compelled to recruit dock labor in West Madison street establishments to keep their loading and unloading facilities clear, but added that this method was unsatisfactory.

Not Much Use to Truckers.

They said this type of worker had to be "sobered up" before being put to work, that he usually stayed only a few hours, and did not know how to handle freight properly.

"The railroads get navy help when they need it, but we have to go up and down Madison street for our workers," Keeshin said. "We are entitled to the same kind of help the railroads get because the truckers' freight is just as vital."

He said the railroads had obtained a more effective labor priority than the truckers, and urged the operators to unite in a single appeal for a rating equal to that of the railroads.

JOLIET STRIKERS TOLD TO OBEY ORDER TO WORK

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—The war labor board today ordered strikers at the Phoenix Manufacturing company plant in Joliet to obey immediately a Feb. 5 regional WLB order to return to work. The strike involves 200 members of the CIO United Steel Workers, protesting against retroactive pay distribution.

Ship Crane Operators Out.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 10 (AP).—Crane operators failed to report for work today at the Cramp Shipbuilding company yard and President Harry E. Rossell said the strike halted all operations requiring cranes. The operators are members of local 42, CIO, United Marine and Shipbuilding Workers. Union officials said tonight that the strikers would return to their jobs tomorrow.

ELECTRIC POWER OUTLOOK.

Public utility common stocks recently have risen to the highest prices on the average since 1937. The Dow-Jones utility average advanced above 27 compared with a war time low of 10.58 in 1942.

The latest phase of the movement followed, and may have been inspired in part by the Supreme court's decision Jan. 29 upholding the right of the common stockholders of United Light and Power company to share in the distribution of its assets under a dissolution plan ordered by the securities and exchange commission. The plan had been under attack by a preferred stockholder, on the contention that the present value of the company's assets was not equal to the liquidating preferences of the preferred stock.

The majority opinion of the court is regarded as favorable to the position of common stockholders of other solvent utility companies in dissolution proceedings under the holding company act. The court said, "When the commission proceeds in the simplification of a holding company system, the rights of stockholders of a solvent company which is ordered by the commission to distribute its assets among its stockholders may be evaluated on the basis of a going concern and not as tho a liquidation were taking place."

The increase in interest in public utility shares may also be related to the fact that electric power production will be one of the relatively stable industries in the transition period from war to peace and in the post-war era. The outlook, nevertheless, appears mixed. The present expanded industrial power business will undoubtless decrease, altho at least a partial offset is expected in larger residential and commercial loads, which are regarded as more profitable. The power industry is planning intensive efforts to increase sales of domestic current for lighting, heating, appliances, and air conditioning.

Fuel and other costs are expected to stabilize around the present higher levels. The President's plan for development of publicly owned power sources has created new apprehension regarding the possibilities of future government competition in certain districts.

Many holding and operating power companies during the war have reduced debts and augmented working capital. Low money rates have permitted refunding of bonds with important savings in interest charges. At the same time the existing low interest rates probably have a tendency to reduce the rate of return which public regulatory bodies regard as reasonable compensation for utility companies.

Proposes Butter Subsidy Lift to Increase Output

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—Rep. Andresen [R., Minn.] today said he is preparing an amendment to a senate approved measure, extending the life of the Commodity Credit corporation, that would encourage more butter production. It would increase the present 7 cent CCC subsidy to 15 cents a pound which, coupled with the 5 cent rollback subsidy paid by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, would bring the total to 20 cents, without increasing the retail price, he said.

Beef Program Fails to Ease Pork Demand

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

Altho the government's program to force a rise in beef production this winter to offset the big drop in pork and lard output is sending cattle to market after a short term in the feedlots, the results in January were disappointing, it was said in the stock yards yesterday.

Because of the lighter weights of the cattle slaughtered, beef volume has dropped below the expected tonnage by a wide margin, substantially under the supply needed to offset the pork decline. It was estimated that pork and lard production was 250,000 tons smaller than in January last year, and beef was increased only 9,000 tons, despite the fact farmers unloaded the largest January cattle supply in the history of the industry.

Beef Gain Small.

The number of cattle slaughtered under federal inspection was 12 per cent larger than a year ago, but the gain in tonnage of beef was only 5 per cent. Hog numbers were down 32 per cent and tonnage of pork and lard down 36 per cent in inspected plants.

Pork produced in January normally is at least double the beef output. Last month beef was 62 per cent as large as the pork and lard total, compared with 39 per cent a year ago. Despite the decline in over-all production, buyers for the military took a larger volume than a year ago, leaving less for lend-lease and civilian use.

Selling of cattle thru the Chicago stock yards last week was larger than last fall at the peak of movement of western range stock. The total was largest for any February week since 1927.

Best Steers Bring $17.10.

Strictly prime longfed steers were absent. The best available reached $17.10 a hundred pounds and the six day average declined 15 cents to $14.85. Most steers sold at $13.50 to $16.25. They had been in the feedlots from a few weeks to several months, but all lacked quality and finish to bid for the $18 OPA ceiling.

Lambs met broad demand at the highest prices since last April. Hogs all week remained at ceiling levels.

OPA INCREASES SOUTHERN AREA HARDWOOD PRICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—General price increases at the mill level averaging $3 a thousand board feet on hardwood lumber produced in the southern region were authorized today by the OPA. The increases, effective as of Feb. 9, are the minimum required by law to prevent financial loss, OPA said. The bulk of the hardwood lumber is needed for military use, especially for army trucks.

Prices in general will rise 3 per cent for grades of No. 2 common or lower, and 10 per cent for grades of No. 1 common or better. The action makes slight changes in the 1 inch, 1¼ inch, and 1½ inch price differentials for plain sawed red oak in the No. 1 common or better grades.

WPB Bars Rayon Cord for Small Truck Tires

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—The WPB today forbade the use of rayon cord in certain small truck tires for both military and civilian use to conserve supplies for aircraft and heavyduty truck tires.

STOCK MARKET RECOVERS THO TRADE SHRINKS

Rail Prices Stiffen Near Close.

New York, Feb. 10 (AP). — The stock market recovered moderately today altho many leaders failed to attract buying. Trade was relatively sluggish.

Some demand arose from a belief that the two day reaction had partly "corrected" the long climb to seven year peaks. Numerous customers stood aside or continued to lighten accounts, however, pending possible international developments of importance over the holiday week-end. Principal exchanges will recess for Lincoln's birthday.

Climb on Stock Split Plan.

Rails bids were timid but prices of several stiffened in the last 15 minutes when Atlantic Coast Line climbed 2 points to a new peak. Also at new highs were Standard Oil of Ohio common and preferred, up 3½ and 7¾ after the proposal to split the common stock. Baldwin Locomotive touched a 1944-'45 peak. Rail equipments benefited by reports of further heavy foreign orders for locomotives.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite rose 0.1 to 59.7 and for the week had a gain of 0.2. Transfers approximated $10,000 shares, compared with 1,034,800 last Saturday.

BONDS FAIRLY STEADY.

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Prices were irregular in today's bond market, but the list had a steady undertone in the face of some pre-holiday selling in speculative issues. Averages of the various groups were unchanged except for a rise of 0.1 in the industrial composite.

Some rail loans extended yesterday's decline, but most losses were confined to fractions. Scattered utility and industrial liens advanced moderately. Various South American obligations advanced as did some Scandinavian and Greek issues.

CHICAGO PRICES ADVANCE.

Prices were higher yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Most active issues in a 25,000 share turnover included Chicago corporation common, up ⅛; Admiral corporation and Armour, unchanged, and Aviation corporation, down ¼. Four 1944-'45 highs were reached.

GRAINS UNEVEN IN PRE-HOLIDAY CAUTIOUS TRADE

Grain futures prices were mixed yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. Brokers were cautious in view of the double holiday ahead. Scattered selling caused a moderate recession early, but short covering developed and prices rallied.

Wheat futures closed ⅛ cent a bushel lower to ¾ cent higher, the deferred deliveries showing the strength. Corn was ⅛ to ⅜ higher, oats ¼ higher to ¼ lower, rye ¼ to ¾ higher, and barley, unchanged to ⅛ lower.

Altho a large part of the trading in wheat was professional, some buying of July was attributed to elevator interests.

Rye futures were off about ½ cent early, but the market rallied more than 1 cent from the low when shorts covered to even up for the holidays.

Chicago Flexible Shaft Shows Profit and Sales Rise for 1944

Chicago Flexible Shaft company and its domestic subsidiary, Sunbeam Appliance Service company, yesterday reported increased sales and net income last year, compared with 1943.

Sales for 1944 were $12,141,851 against $10,036,078 before renegotiation in the preceding year, said H. C. Wright, chairman. The company was permitted to make a limited quantity of electric irons late last year which increased sales in that division. Shearing and clipping machinery and industrial furnace sales also rose. Production of war material was expanded despite many government changes in design and production schedules.

Earns $2.17 a Share After Split.

Net income was $1,172,423 or $2.17 a share after a three-for-one stock split last July. In 1943 earnings were $1,101,966 after renegotiation, or $6.12 a share on the old stock. Share earnings last year would have been $6.51 on a comparable basis.

Wright reported that the Australian subsidiary continued to produce shearing machinery and engines despite shortages of supplies, but its war production was cut substantially in the last half of the year. The Canadian subsidiary experienced a heavy reduction of war work and was not permitted to make any civilian products.

Mickelberry Profits Soar.

Profits of Mickelberry's Food Products company before taxes reached an all-time high of $610,392 last year, said G. E. Duwe, president. After taxes, net income was $231,507, or 80 cents a common share, compared with $158,874, or 56 cents a share in 1943.

Duwe said scarcity of meat continued to be the most perplexing problem, with the only dependable supplies coming from the company's slaughtering plants at Rushville and Paris, Ill.

ORDER NEW CUT IN INDIANA COAL FOR INDUSTRIES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10 (AP).—C. J. Potter, deputy solid fuels administrator, today ordered an additional reduction during February in shipments of Indiana mined soft coal to industrial consumers with more than a minimum supply on hand. He said the object was to provide more fuel for home heating.

Shipments permitted to industrial consumers using Indiana bituminous already were cut 15 to 50 per cent below February consumption requirements, depending on the size of stockpiles. Plants having 20 days' supply or less may obtain full current requirements.

The new order prohibited February shipment of more than 90 per cent of either of the following, whichever provided the least tonnage: [1] The amount of Indiana mined coal ordered by the consumer for February delivery, or [2] the tonnage of that coal which an industrial consumer was permitted to receive under previous SFA regulations.

MONSANTO FIRM DESIGNS ROCKET LAUNCHING UNIT

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 10 [Special].—Monsanto Chemical company will not only manufacture the launching propellent chemical for the American models of the robot bomb, but will also produce rocket launching motors, it was announced today. The company said the rocket motors in general appearance will resemble open end bombs.

The rocket motors were engineered by Monsanto technicians at St. Louis and Dayton, O., working in coöperation with the national defense research council and the air technical service command.

Subcontractors will fabricate them from steel tubing following a technique substantially similar to that used in making bomb casings.

Chicago Area Firms Get 71 Prime War Contracts

Chicago area companies last week received 71 new prime war contracts with a total value of $1,464,000, Leverett S. Lyon, chief executive officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said yesterday.

URGES RETURN TO WISE USE OF VENTURE CASH

Money Must Work. Asserts Folger.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 10 [Special].—Fifty-five to 60 million peace time jobs may be possible, but only if private investment is allowed to return to its "historic role" of providing jobs, J. Clifford Folger, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, said tonight.

J. Clifford Folger.

Folger outlined to the Advertising Club of Baltimore seven rules of "mental attitudes" toward finance if ample venture capital is to be available after the war. His rules were:

1. People must put their money to work. They must take calculated risks, being aware there may be "gains in Normandy and losses in Belgium." Out of every thousand dollars in savings, so much should be earmarked for risk taking.

Advises Bank Aid.

2. Investment bankers must take care to not repeat the mistakes of the '20s.

3. The 15,000 banks in the United States should be prepared to give more freely and constructively advice on how to put money to work.

4. The numerous ways the government has hobbled and shackled business must be "ripped out of our systems at once."

5. The securities and exchange commission, the social security board, and similar bureaus should be supported, but they should change their approach to their functions.

6. The government must realize that in taxing business to redistribute income, they may go so far they will "drive venture capital into the foxholes" and there will be no income to distribute.

Real Security Periled.

7. Unconventional as it may seem, banks, insurance companies, and other institutions must ask themselves whether their security is real or fancied.

"The nation has gone a long way down the road of riskless economy," he asserted. "In the mad chase after security, we have endangered the security of all. We have frozen savings in riskless securities and riskless pools of cash.

"In 1929 you couldn't give security away. People lost sight completely of thrift and calculated risks. They shot the works. Now we are at the other end of the gamut, and meanwhile the explosive power of uninvested money is building up."

Business men and bankers, observing the large volume of capital available, are afraid of the "chill of stagnation, the feverish glow of inflation, or the wild passion of gambling and easy money," Folger said. "We want none of these things."

DRAFT POST-WAR PUBLIC HEALTH PLAN FOR STATE

Board Members Propose Tuberculosis Hospitals.

Reorganization and expansion of public health facilities over the whole state are urged in a report made by the committee on services of the Illinois post-war planning commission. The commission is headed by Anderson Pace and the committee by State Sen. Daley [D., Chicago].

Emphasis was placed in the committee report on the need for better handling of tuberculosis cases, on the raising of sanitary standards, and on the licensing of hospitals and nursing homes.

The committee stated that 10,000 new cases of tuberculosis are identified annually in Illinois and that the deaths per year from the disease are 3,200.

Propose Five Sanitariums.

To take care of those thus afflicted, the committee found, would require five new sanitariums—four downstate, with a total of 800 beds, and 2,000 beds in Cook county—some in a new building and the rest in existing institutions.

To make the point that the state needs better sanitation, figures were quoted showing that of 1,142 villages and cities only 691 have public water systems and only 411 have sewage systems.

"Adequate protection of health would require every community of 500 or more to have both public water supply and a sanitary sewage system," the committee stated.

Favor Licensing of Hospitals.

At present there is no state law requiring any hospital to be licensed. The report proposed that the state health department set up standards and insist they be met before licensing; it is recommended, however, that the state let local bodies enforce the law if they have established adequate health units.

It is expected that the committee will present its plans to the whole commission next Friday and that they then will be presented to the legislature.

NEIGHBORS FAIL TO LIFT OPA BAN ON GAS STATION

Former patrons of Ole Haugland's filling station, 9154 Jeffery av., will have to find other sources, John R. Allen, hearing commissioner for the office of price administration, said yesterday in ruling against Haugland's appeal from suspension.

Haugland was ordered out of business for the duration of rationing Jan. 16, when an OPA hearing found him guilty of having used three counterfeit inventory coupons. He based his appeal on affidavits of neighbors, who asserted his suspension was a hardship to them.

Allen said OPA investigators had found enough other filling stations to serve the neighborhood.

"LET'S FACE FACTS"

It will be another 5 or 6 years before it will be practical to build for the individual owner single or 2 flat homes. There are always good buys where owners have to sell and we offer this type of buys, but refuse to sell those bldgs. overpriced. Bargain hunters generally wind up paying more for what they buy than the sensible person who is willing to pay right market prices. So, if buyers and sellers will deal with reliable brokers who have a record of square dealing, they will always secure good values.

NOTICE!
Our last Sunday's Ad literally swamped us with inquiries. At first we gave out street addresses over the telephone with some rather unpleasant results to the owners of these properties. Accordingly, we MUST hereafter make it a rule NOT to give addresses over the phone. Since last week we have received several new listings. Call us as to your requirements and we will tell you frankly whether you can use these offerings.

HAVE decided to dispose of my country estate consisting of 393 acres—About 70 miles northwest from Chicago, only a few miles from good town and only 1 mile from popular lake with skating, fishing, boating, and hunting, and in the heart of the estate district where your neighbors are your friends. Has about 230 acres under a high state of cultivation, balance grazing land, some virgin timber, and large spring fed trout creek circling thru pasture which is very inviting owing to the fact that the cattle have fresh spring water at all times. 9 room modern home and some furniture; full and complete set of farm buildings. Barns have concrete floors, 24 inch stone walls, and cemented cow yard. This estate is fully equipped with 2 good teams of horses, 1 riding horse, approximately 335 chickens and ducks, 35 feeders and brood sows and 61 head of Holstein cattle of which 26 are registered pure breds showing an income at the present time of over $1,250 per month, in addition to hog, calves, and chicken sales; full and complete line of machinery to operate a farm of this size, including tractor and truck on rubber and an ample supply of all feed which has an appraised value of over $26,000 which puts the cost of this estate to less than $60 per acre for land and buildings. Has been successfully operated on a paying basis for the past 4 years by the same manager who will continue if purchaser so desires. If sold within 30 days this estate is being offered with its full equipment at a price of $127 per acre. Terms can be arranged and immediate possession given. Owing to its location, its many improvements and year around creek and complete equipment — in other words, a going farm, it must be seen to be appreciated and should appeal to the most critical purchaser.

IN HIGH TAX BRACKET
Consider new rental units in planned development built to last at least 60 yrs.; rented at moderate ceiling rent without heat or janitor services to executives, foremen, engineers, technical men and skilled workers. GRAPHIC SECTION Chicago Sunday Tribune THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER FEBRUARY 11, 1945

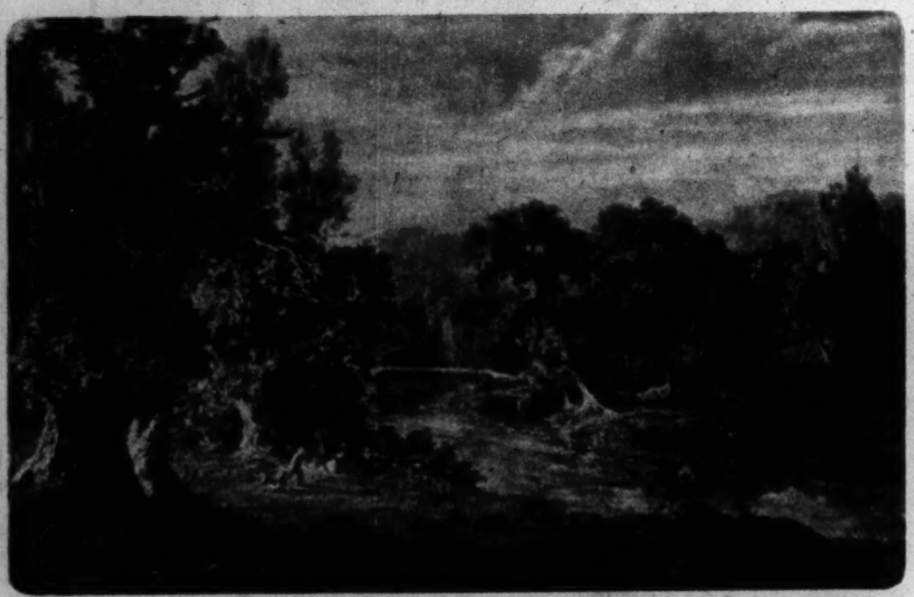
THE EVENING OF LIFE, by Asher B. Durand. Best known for his engravings of Trumbull's painting of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, Durand was an early member of the Hudson River school of landscape painting. This romantic painting of an old shepherd sitting beside the ruins of a Greek pillar was the sad companion piece to his "The Morning of Life."



THE OLD MILL, by George Inness. This is one of Inness' few paintings in the first American tradition, painted in 1849, before he came under European influence and adopted the fuzzy technique of the French Barbisen school. It, like the majority of the paintings in America's artistic coming of age, was done in the Catskills.

When American Art Came of Age

By MARCIA WINN

THE PAINTINGS reproduced on this page are among the most neglected, jeered at, and forgotten pictures produced by American artists. Yet they are probably as important in the field of art as the Declaration of Independence was in the field of political philosophy, for they marked the first break by American artists from subservience, in art as in all things, to European culture.

Study these pictures with care. They have charm, certainly, and innocence, and serenity. Do they also have greatness? Perhaps so. Perhaps not. But greatness was theirs—if not in paint and technique, in influence and impact.

Study them again. What do they deal with? They deal with the wonder of trees, the magic of a virgin forest, the grandeur of a 164 foot drop of water, the serenity of a river, the brooding solemnity of a quiet glade, of an undulating prairie, of a strip of canyon. Today only fragments of these scenes are painted, if they are painted at all. Today they are matter of fact, even banal. But not between 1800 and 1875, when they were painted. Few then had seen these scenes, for they were young America, painted as unfolded. Fewer still dared paint them, for, working sedulously in the European tradition, the average artist executed only the portrait of a man of means, a ruined abbey, a broken Greek arch, or a trickling stream of water called a Swiss fall.

Later this school of landscape painting, the first true American school of painting, was to be derisively termed the Hudson River school, for it stemmed from Rip Van Winkle's sleepy village along the Hudson—Catskill. You will find little about it in books

LINCOLN'S TEACHER

By DELOS AVERY

WORDS that clutch the memory and will not let go, words fit for carving in granite and graving in bronze, living words that shape the course of history and survive the centuries, words like those of the Gettysburg address and the inaugurals—who taught Abraham Lincoln to write such words?

The common saying is that he taught himself, and that is true. His words are as much his own as Beethoven's music is Beethoven's. Yet some one ruddered the budding genius of Beethoven, and some one lighted the lamp of Lincoln's eloquence, tended the flame of it, trimmed the wick of it, kept it burning clear.

Who was that man?

His name was Mentor Graham. He was one of the greatest and one of the obscurest teachers of all time. He tilled the good rich soil of Lincoln's mind like a gardener, and he planted the seed from which such perfect prose as Gettysburg grew and flowered.

• • •

Lincoln was 24 when he became Mentor Graham's pupil. Graham was the schoolmaster at New Salem, conducting his classes in the Baptist church. Lincoln was a "working boarder" in the Graham home.

One morning at breakfast on a raw February morning in 1833 Lincoln said in his blunt way:

"I have a notion of studying grammar."

Graham replied:

"If you expect to be before the public in any capacity, I think it is the best thing you can do."

(Graham photos courtesy University of Chicago Press.)

Sarah Graham

"If I had a grammar," said Lincoln, "I would commence now."

Textbooks on grammar were rare in the New Salem region, where folks "jest couldn't see no sense in larnin' how to talk like books." There had been a time when Graham had been actually forbidden to teach grammar on penalty of forfeiture of his pay—five cents a day per student. But he bootlegged instruction to those who could be trusted. He had his own copy of a grammar, Kirkham's, but that could not be lent to Lincoln because it was in daily use, and almost worn out.

"But there's a grammar at Vance's," he told Lincoln, "and I think you could get it."

Lincoln finished his breakfast and started down the road, six miles to Vance's farmhouse, six miles back. A 12 mile walk across the frozen countryside, but he brought back the book—and it was Kirkham's!

Kirkham's was no ordinary textbook. Fortunately I am permitted by the University of Chicago Press to quote a description of it, taken from one of the most fascinating books I have seen in recent years, "Mentor Graham: The Man Who Taught Lincoln," by Kunigunde Duncan and D. F. Nickols. Miss Duncan has turned the pages of the very copy that Graham owned. She writes:

"Graham's old Kirkham that he dared to teach lies before me, eloquent with use. The text might well amaze a grammar student of today. We have our own smug definitions of the subject; but with Kirkham's, guided by such an understanding mind as Graham's, what ambitious log-school scholar could not be led to the love of learning? For Kirkham's included spelling, with the classical derivation of every word; and, of course, the parts of speech, their various forms, and diagraming. Then it proceeded to prosody—the forms of poetry, their accents and meters. Next, rhetoric: Sentences of various kinds for various uses; eloquent word order; punctuation and its theory; words oftenest misspelled and mispronounced; colloquialisms of various sections of the country and their correct forms. Then came a section headed 'Good Writing,' which went directly to the heart of the matter in one sentence: 'One who understands his subject well, directed by common sense—that is the foundation of all good writing.'

"Every illustrative sentence held a moral: 'None performs his duty too well,' 'A good man is a great man,' or 'Mercy is the badge of true nobility.' The entire book is interlarded with confidential chats of the author with the learner. For example: 'Do not commit and rehearse this book. Read one or two sentences, then look off the book and repeat their contents in your words, in your mind. . . . It is an evidence of a weak mind to be discouraged by the obstacles every learner meets. . . . There is nothing more effective than grammar to enable you to think. . . . Learn to unlearn what you have learned amiss.'"

That was the book thru which the mind of Abraham Lincoln was led by Mentor Graham. That—and other books. One is reminded of a saying attributed to James A. Garfield: "My definition of a university is Mark Hopkins at one end of a log and a student at the other." For "student" read "Lincoln," for "Mark Hopkins" read "Mentor Graham"; let the log be a blazing one in the winter fireside of the Graham home, with Graham's thrifty wife fretting over the cost of the candlelight, and you have the university in which it pleases me to think the lean and muscled prose masterpieces of Lincoln germinated.

But not solely in Kirkham's Grammar did they germinate, nor solely in Mentor Graham's eager, inspired genius for teaching. There was also the whole treasury of Graham's accumulated wisdom, and there was his wonderful library—gathered at heroic cost in toil and sacrifice.

For Graham was a poor man with a rich man's hungers. When he could afford it he was a man of elegance in dress and grooming—for he felt that a mind adorned with scholarship ought to dwell in a well caparisoned body. So he bought good clothes when he could, and how he made them last!

"Master Graham was shaven," writes Miss Duncan, "his shirt collar was white and lay smoothly, and his wonderful vest was of black velvet, his stock, shining satin. His tall hat seemed only right; he would have looked odd in a coonskin cap. . . ."

But dollars were hard to get. Even his slender pay as a teacher was not a reliable income. Sometimes it was paid in groceries or fuel, sometimes not paid at all. And when he did have dollars they went for books. When he wanted a house he had to be his own builder, and since he wanted a brick house he had to make the bricks. It was a good job, too, a fine house that stood for 75 years and might be standing yet save for a fire.

The best of clothes do not endure for such a period. It is true that a muffler which Sarah, his wife, knitted for him served nobly thru 50 winters. But his fine coat became frayed, his tall silk hat grew dull and "shaggy." And Sarah, seeing him stride forth on a morning in quest of more books, would call after him with loving anger:

"Threadbare clothes, but buyin' books, books, BOOKS!"

Miss Duncan describes the Graham library:

"He owned an encyclopedic dictionary, a set of the Kentucky and federal laws, Shakespeare, Milton, Burns, Dante, Hume, Volney, Shelley, Keats, several books on plants and a botanical analysis, several volumes on medicine, many biographies, a surveyor's manual (important to Lincoln), many files of Kentucky newspapers and anti-slavery publications, several books of commentary on the Bible—these in addition to a great array of school books. . . ."

One of the school books was Murray's English Reader (and if there is an antiquarian bookseller who can supply a copy of that and Kirkham's Grammar I should like to hear from him). Says Miss Duncan:

"The common conception that log-school learning was very primitive receives complete refutation thru scanning the table of contents of Murray's English Reader. How many Americans today have read—and discussed, digested and memorized high spots from—narratives by Dr. Johnson, Blair, Cicero? Arguments of Pliny and Addison? Descriptions by Goldsmith and Fenelon? The pathos of Goldsmith and the earl of Stratford? The dialogs of Heraclitus, Dionysius, Pythias, Damon, Locke? The orations of Fabricius, Cicero, Adherbal before the Roman senate, Paul before Festus and Agrippa, Lord Mansfield before the British parliament? The essays of Addison on contentment; of Quintius Curtius on slavery and freedom?

"Add to these some one hundred selections from the great poets and excerpts from English literature upon friendship, fortitude of mind, government of your own thoughts, proper use of your faculties—and you get some idea of what those roughly clad children, going home thru knee deep snow after sunset, had heard within the fireplace lighted little 16 x 18 foot log church."

Lincoln learned how to parse. Do you remember how to parse? To parse a sentence you resolve it into its elements. You point out the several parts of speech and their relation to each other by government or agreement. You analyze a word and explain its inflection. When you can parse, you know—and need not rely on such arguments as "It sounds right," or "That sounds wrong." Parsing may be drudgery, but one of the tasks set by Graham for Lincoln was to parse every word in Paine's "Age of Reason."

That is one way to learn something about the craft of writing. But Graham made Lincoln do more than that with Paine, made him analyze Paine's logic, too. For, as Miss Duncan points out, "A good teacher toughens his learner's mind by waking up his logic."

Lincoln is described in one of Miss Duncan's chapter headings as "Graham's most advanced learner." Lincoln had less time than others for classroom work, and his attendance at the school, which met in the Baptist church, was only about six weeks. But the school itself was not all. The avid student and his "university" got together for walks, for over-the-fence discussions at odd moments, for long fireside sessions. Student and teacher found each other stimulating.

The late sessions began after all the work, both inside and outside the house, had been done. Graham's wife, Sarah, a fine woman but unschooled, was fond of Lincoln, "who kept the woodpile higher than it had ever been before and never let the wood box get empty." He also "told the children stories to hush their crying" and he carried heavy tubs and buckets for Sarah "and never had to be told to empty the wash water."

Quoting Miss Duncan again:

"Only when there was nothing more that Sarah could think up that ought to be done would Abe sit down to 'eat up books whole.' . . . Night after night the two men sat (by the fireside) talking, kinfast by the love of learning, unconscious of the flight of time. Tho their voices were low enough most of the time, the excited flare-up would rouse Sarah from sleep. 'If you two goin' to sit up all night, seems like a body oughtn't have to remind you to mend the fire!' . . . Hasty and apologetic scraping of feet being unwound; the door opened, shut, as Lincoln went out. And pretty soon the door opened, shut, as he came back with wood. . . . The log thrown on. . . . Some one poking the fire. 'Now, don't go poking ashes all over the floor!' And Sarah, dozing off to the snap and crackle of the fire, would soon be wakened again by another volley of voices. . . . 'You two ever goin' to bed?' Until finally, from sheer exhaustion, she got up and snuffed out their candle."

Lincoln "devoured" histories of America, Europe, the orient, and even "took a pull" at Greek and Latin classics. Poetry and biography he read "by spells."

"He sat upon the low and narrow splint-bottom chair in complete discomfort, never realizing how cramped he was until, after hours of total concentration, he groaned as he unwound his numbed body and tried to stand erect. When Graham came in, or while the two were doing the chores, he asked questions on what he had read. Graham always tried to cast further weight of evidence, from what Lincoln reported reading, to prove his thesis that convincingly worded thought conditions the progress of the human race. . . ."

• • •

Sarah's nerves were "fraying" as she tolerated the repetition over and over of a single sentence when teacher and student were trying to discover the one best way of intoning it. Her worst ordeal was to hear Lincoln conjugating a verb. . . . "If I should be . . . if you should be . . . if he should be . . ." But Beethoven learned scales before he wrote a symphony; and Lincoln parsed and conjugated before he could dream of composing the phrases, organlike and stirring as a psalm, of the "Fourscore and seven years ago . . ."

Poor Sarah, hearing only the scales and not the symphony of Lincoln's prose, could stand just so much before bursting into protest. She was shrewd enough, however, to pick a vulnerable spot for her attack. She would wait until Lincoln or Graham poked the fire the wrong way, and she would cry, "Don't stir it from the top!" And Miss Duncan observes:

"If Sarah's frenzy woke the children, it was she who scolded them back to sleep again and got up to diaper the baby, give the windlass a turn or two to tighten the bed's rope slats, plump up the bedtick of prairie hay and the featherbed of wild goose down."

Graham and Lincoln understood Sarah better perhaps than she understood them. She couldn't see "no sense" in their ceaseless quest of learning. They baffled her plain housekeeping mind. But she did have an instinct, an intuition, which told her that what they were doing must have—somehow—an importance. So even while she scolded she forgave. And her tenderness for Lincoln at the time of his greatest sorrow, the death of his beloved Ann Rutledge, was complete.

That was the period, too, when Mentor Graham, having ministered to Lincoln's mind, must minister to his heart.

"Nothing to live for now, Graham," Lincoln would say. "I feel like taking my own life."

Graham would answer:

"God is bringing about a higher purpose, Lincoln. Surely He is, Lincoln."

He and Lincoln read "Pilgrim's Progress" together that winter, Miss Duncan says, "but not analyzing the grammar."

"Eyes to the future, Lincoln," Graham said. "Other men have lost their dearly beloveds."

It seems strange that so great a teacher of so great a pupil has remained thru all these years so little known. You find nothing at all about him in some of the biographical reference works, mere fragmentary items in others. Nobody—until Miss Duncan and Mr. Nickols undertook the task—even attempted a complete biography, for the project was too baffling.

The chief difficulty was due to the fact that, while Graham was known to have kept careful records of his life and of his thoughts, these papers along with his treasured books were destroyed long ago by fire.

But Nickols was fascinated by such scraps of information as he could find, and when Miss Duncan consulted him on another subject some five years ago he proposed a collaboration. Apparently most of the writing of their book was done by Miss Duncan, because writing is her profession, while Nickols helped in the gigantic task of research.

The two traveled 7,000 miles "by train, automobile, bus, mule cart, and afoot," in the "Lincoln country," to gather their material. They interviewed more than 200 of Mentor Graham's descendants, pupils, and others who remembered him. They wrote and received thousands of letters. Even so, they might have been defeated by the taciturnity of the Graham clan had not Miss Duncan won admittance to their confidence by proving that she herself was a "seventieth-eleventh" cousin of the Grahams.

• • •

The present brief sketch, based almost exclusively on the Duncan-Nickols work, does not pretend to tell anywhere nearly the whole life store of "the man who taught Lincoln," but is restricted to Graham's relationship with his celebrated pupil. For the rest, for a really splendid picture of a truly great American, who was a one-man university, read the book.

THE HEALY LINCOLN

ON THE FRONT PAGE of the Picture Section of this issue is a reproduction in its original colors of one of G. P. A. Healy's famous portraits of Abraham Lincoln, whose 136th birthday anniversary the nation will observe tomorrow.

The original portrait hangs in Lincoln hall of the Chicago Historical society, and it is thru the courtesy of this society that The Tribune reproduces it today. There are three other portraits of Lincoln that were painted by Healy with the same object in mind. One hangs in the White House in Washington, another is in the Minnesota state capitol, and the third is in the Newberry library in Chicago.

At the close of the Civil war the idea came to Healy, an American painter, a native of Boston, who had established a reputation abroad, to execute a picture called "The Peacemakers." The picture represented Lincoln, Grant, and Porter aboard the River Queen opposite City Point, Va., on March 28, 1865, receiving from Sherman his account of his march from Atlanta to the sea. The artist made all his studies for this picture, which was painted some years later in Rome. In making his studies of Lincoln he used for his model Leonard Swett, an old friend of Lincoln, who resembled the President a great deal in figure, face, and temperament.

Pleased with his interpretation of Lincoln, Healy made four copies, the one in the Chicago Historical society and the three others named. The Historical society's portrait was saved from a fire in the Calumet club (Chicago) in 1893. When that club liquidated in 1914 the portrait was purchased by Ralph C. Otis and presented to the Historical society.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

THERE are now more than 17,000 fighting Illini—believed to be the largest collegiate military enlistment group in the country—now literally living up to their traditional sobriquet all over the world. Among the things they'd like would be a glimpse of the old stamping ground at Champaign and Urbana.

If they could have come back by magic carpet this winter they'd have learned that junior prom still ranks as the social highlight of the school year, but that life at the University of Illinois is greatly changed in many other phases.

Prom, held in George Huff gymnasium, was a big dance, with 2:30 hours for the co-eds and the pre-war trimming of a name band. But decorations were modest and uniforms were abundant. From 10 finalists, chosen by a faculty committee on the basis of personal appearance, scholarship, and campus activities from a larger group of candidates, all representing sororities and residence houses, the 1,400 dancers, by ballot, chose Phyl Brown of Urbana, representing Chi Omega, as queen and Alice Koehler (Phi Beta Phi) and Nancy Gray (Presbyterian hall) as her two attendants.

As always, the queen was crowned by the chairman of the prom committee, this year Bob Purdy of Lamba Chi Alpha, and as always, there was a grand march at midnight, headed by the president of the junior class, Margaret Stewart, and Prom Chairman Tom Kubelius. The fact that the junior class president is a woman is in a way indicative of the changes on the campus that would most startle the alumni in arms.

There are more girls enrolled at Illinois this year than at any time in the institution's history. The problem of housing the predominantly feminine majority has even necessitated the conversion of a dozen fraternity houses into women's residences, operated for the duration by private individuals.

• • •

That's one change. The boys would find another at WILL, the university's radio station, which is now staffed in practically every department, from engineering to production, by women students. And they would find that women also have taken over the Daily Illini, the workmanlike newspaper for the campus and the community, which is edited, written, and published by undergraduates. Editors, business administrators, even sports editors are women.

But considerable interest centers on one growing organization which is wholly masculine. The Illini veterans—now numbering more than 250 men who have resumed their studies after discharge from service—compose a campus organization that is wreathed in an importance that the social elegance and clubs of pre-war days never quite attained.

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

ALL EYES ARE ON HER EYES

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood.

HOLLYWOOD'S newest juvenile star—all hands seem to agree on that—is a 12-year-old girl who can say more with a flash of her wondrous eyes than most veteran actors can put across with a full page of dialog. Those eyes, deep set pools of blue that probe right into your heart, are the first thing you notice about Elizabeth Taylor. The second is her indomitable will.

The two form an unbeatable combination. Elizabeth is a quiet, beautiful child who has "willed" her way to Hollywood success, and her eyes have made her the most talked about moppet on the screen today.

With any less determination she never would have won her opportunity to portray Velvet, the little heroine of "National Velvet." It is her outstanding performance in this picture that has lifted her to the stellar heights.

Since she first set foot on the M-G-M lot almost two years ago Elizabeth's heart has been set on playing Velvet. The studio's had the script since May, 1937, waiting for the right girl. Hundreds had been tested and many announced, but with no success. Even then they didn't recognize their Velvet when they first saw her. When Elizabeth approached Producer Pandro S. Berman she was told: "I'm sorry, honey, but I'm afraid you're not tall enough. Besides, Velvet has to ride a horse over a very difficult steeplechase course."

"I can learn to do that," promptly declared the little girl. "And I can grow, too!"

In the next three months she did. To the amazement even of her family doctor, she grew three inches. This is explained by the fact that she suddenly developed an enormous appetite, after being a finicky eater for years, and added two hours to her sleeping each night. It was all her own idea, and she stuck to it.

Elizabeth already knew and loved horses. She had learned to ride at the age of 4 while living in England. Now, during the three months, she trained daily on jumps until she was clearing five foot hurdles with the ease and grace of a winning jockey at Aintree, home of the Grand National steeplechase.

When she confronted Berman again he, too, was amazed at her growth. He called Clarence Brown, and they watched her ride and jump and marveled some more. A technicolor test was made, and Velvet had been found.

Elizabeth's next step was to see that King Charles, the horse on which she had learned to jump and which she had grown to love, was picked for the picture with her. "I love King Charles just like Velvet loved 'The Pi,'" she told Director Brown, referring to the horse ridden by Velvet in Enid Bagnold's novel. "It wouldn't be honest with any other horse. I just couldn't feel the same."

When tears welled into those eyes Brown was convinced. Elizabeth's own discovery, King Charles, became "The Pi."

Brown learned more about Elizabeth's eyes as he went along. He soon came to refer to them as her "key light," borrowing a term from sound stage parlance meaning the huge main lamp used to flood the star's face with light. That was just the effect of the girl's eyes.

Elizabeth was born in London, the daughter of Francis Taylor, art dealer, and the former Sara Southern, who played the little crippled girl in Channing Pollock's "The Fool" on the New York stage. She spent summer vacations in Kent at the lodge of her godfather, Col. Victor Cazelet, who was killed in an airplane crash over the continent last year. It was on a wild field horse given to her by him that she learned to ride and first displayed her surprising influence over animals.

• • •

Elizabeth attended school at Byron house in London, traveling with her parents to the United States every year to visit her grandparents in Pasadena. She studied ballet dancing with Vaccani, dancing teacher of the royal family for two generations. Her only public appearance, however, was at the age of 3 when she danced at a recital given for British Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose. Altho none of her screen appearances to date has called for any display of musical talent, she also has a trained coloratura voice and plays the piano.

She was 7 when war clouds began to darken Europe and her father moved his family to America. They have since made their home in Beverly Hills.

Altho friends repeatedly suggested that Elizabeth would be ideal for motion pictures, her parents both frowned upon a screen career for their offspring during their first two years in this country. They even turned a deaf ear to pleas that she try for Scarlett O'Hara's daughter in "Gone with the Wind," her resemblance to Vivien Leigh in beauty and coloring have been noted frequently. Finally they relented, however, shortly after meeting John Considine, then a producer at M-G-M. Elizabeth was taken to the studio, but at that time there was no story for her, so they let her slip over to Universal. There she remained under contract for a year without once appearing on the screen, that being a period when Hollywood was almost devoid of children's pictures.

• • •

It wasn't until two years ago, when her father was on duty as an air raid warden, that Elizabeth finally got her break. Sam Marx, a Metro producer, was moaning to a fellow warden that evening about not finding a child for "Lassie, Come Home," with Roddy McDowall. The man said. "Taylor, here, has a young daughter that would be good for that part." Sam said to Taylor, "Bring her over to my office tomorrow, will you?" Taylor did, and Elizabeth got the part.

Elizabeth, as the mistreated school girl in "Jane Eyre," has her curls cut off by the cruel school master.

After the Lassie picture she appeared with Roddy again in "White Cliffs of Dover," then was loaned to Twentieth for "Jane Eyre" as Jane's ill fated school chum. Her death scenes marked the first real proof of her acting talent. Following this she achieved her goal of the title role in "National Velvet," in which she teams with Mickey Rooney. Mickey told me she had grown so fast while they were making the picture he almost made love to her by mistake one day, 'cause he thought she was grown up. Elizabeth must have given him ideas about little girls, for he married one only 17 a few months after finishing the picture.

Her next assignment was awaiting her, and she's now nearly finished "Hold High the Torch." It is a part to delight any child and particularly Elizabeth. In the cast with her are her old friend, Lassie, the collie dog star, and a collection of wild life that includes a black bear, coyote, beaver, silver fox, squirrels, chipmunks, porcupines, and even skunks. The set is a little girl's paradise in which Elizabeth revels.

Since she could barely toddle her love for animals of all descriptions has been another of Elizabeth's outstanding characteristics.

At the moment Elizabeth's home shelters two horses, three dogs, two cats, half a dozen rabbits, and assorted mice, frogs, and pollywogs plus the latest addition—eight chipmunks. They were caught and tamed by Elizabeth while she was on location for "Hold High the Torch" at Lake Chelan, Wash.

"It has come to the point," declares Mrs. Taylor, "that as soon as I see that twinkle in her eye I automatically say, 'No!' One more pet in this family and we'll have to move into the garage and let the menagerie take over the house."

• • •

A glance at Elizabeth and that twinkle tells you that tomorrow she'll probably bring home anything from a stray cat or dog to a box full of lizards. She just can't help it.

Her mother phoned me the other day and said, "Hedda, Elizabeth is just dying to bring over her pet chipmunk to introduce him to your pet dog, Wolfie." Well, since I love Wolfie as she does her chip, I had to say: "Wait until you can get her out of the house without an animal—then Wolfie will love to see her, and so will I."

With or without animals, Elizabeth will creep straight into your heart, and let me predict now, no amount of praise will ever spoil her.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have been a constant reader of your articles and have always enjoyed them thoroly. Several of my friends and I have a special liking for Dana Andrews and wonder why he hasn't had a break. Would you please print his address for us?

M. W. K. JR.

Dana Andrews

I agree with you about Mr. Andrews, and I'm glad you like us, too. Dana has had some good roles lately, and I think you'll be seeing lots more of him. Did you see "Laura"? If you haven't, make it a point to do so. Mr. Andrews has the lead in it, and I'm sure you'll enjoy the film. You can write your favorite in care of Twentieth Century-Fox studios, 10201 W. Pico blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Miss Tinée: Read your comments on "Dark Waters" with interest. Saw the picture shortly afterward and heard several people comment, "What is a psychiatrist?" when the word was used by one of the players. Seems it is a little confusing for some moviegoers and I think a defining word would have been better. Will you pass on the word, please?

J. B.

I'm not sure I agree with you. That term has been used in many movies and I think most people understand it completely. What would you suggest as a substitute?

BEANS—A Substitute for Meat

By MARY MEADE

WHAT are we going to eat when the red points are scarce? Beans, of course! Baked beans Boston style, "beanburgers," dishes like chili which make a little meat go far.

Dried limas are rich in protein, too, and can be used almost as frequently as navy beans in the family menu. Limaburgers look like meat cutlets, but there's not even a scrap of meat in them. Peanuts and cheese sauce add to the protein value of this dish, a winter special.

LIMABURGERS WITH CHEESE SAUCE

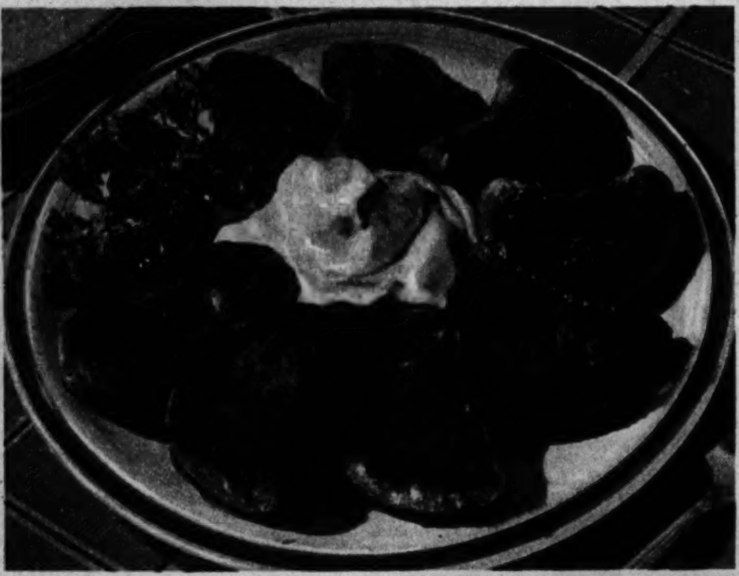
(Serves six)

1 cup dried lima beans
¼ cup meat drippings
1 small onion, chopped
1 cup finely chopped celery
½ cup flour
1 cup milk
1 egg, beaten
1½ cups fine bread crumbs
1½ cups grated raw carrot
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon mixed dried herbs
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup chopped salted peanuts

Wash beans, cover with cold water, and let soak overnight. Heat to simmering and simmer 30 minutes, or until tender. Drain beans (save liquid for soup) and rub thru a sieve. Melt drippings in a saucepan, add onion and celery, and saute until soft. Blend in flour, add milk, and stir over direct heat until sauce boils and thickens. Beat egg, stir in 1 cup of the bread crumbs, the carrots, seasonings, peanuts, and mashed beans. Combine with white sauce. Chill thoroly. Drop heaping tablespoonfuls of the chilled mixture into the remaining crumbs and shape into patties, coating well with crumbs. Brown in drippings on both sides. Serve hot with cheese sauce made by adding ¼ pound grated cheese to 2 cups hot white sauce, stirring until the cheese has melted.

• • •

Veal paprika is an old Hungarian dish. An American version includes canned beans, stretching the meat in a savory manner to serve at least six persons. All you need with this dish is a tossed vegetable salad.



They look like meat cutlets but are made of beans and peanuts, and taste even better than they look.

VEAL PAPRIKA WITH BEANS

(Serves six)

2 medium onions, sliced
1 pound veal cutlets, diced in inch pieces
¼ cup meat drippings
1 tablespoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups water
1 jar baked beans with tomato sauce
½ cup thick sour cream

Brown onions and veal in meat drippings. Sprinkle with paprika and mix well. Add salt and water. Simmer, stirring occasionally, until veal is tender and water has evaporated. Add beans and heat thoroly. Add sour cream just before serving.

When Art Came of Age in America

on American art. It is dismissed in a paragraph or a page. You will find few of its pictures in museums unless you explore the basements or the attics.

Yet from Feb. 15 to March 25 the Art Institute of Chicago will make a bold, daring move. It will exhibit 164 paintings by 50 artists of this condemned school. Not for 75 years, not since Inness brought the fuzzy technique of the French Barbizon school of painting to America, has any one attempted such foolishness. To find the 164, Frederick A. Sweet, associate curator of painting at the institute, spent a year and a half combing attics, basements, and discards. His safari covered 10,000 miles, 42 cities and towns, and 115 museums and private collections.

To get a proper perspective on his findings you must leap back 145 years in time to the year 1800. The new Republic of the United States, its mind free of war and revolution for the first time in 25 years, had begun to stir, to find itself, to forge its path. The little Republic carved in the wilderness throbbed with national pride, lifted its head, and began to look at itself with wonder and awe.

Few of its people had traveled more than 100 miles from the place of their birth. Roads were morasses of mud in winter, whirlpools of dust in summer, negotiable only by open wagon, and penetrating scarcely 50 miles inland. Beyond lay the Indian and the wilderness. Beyond lay many a saga, but principally the saga of the American ax.

The people knew much about Europe but little about the America they had not seen. The few books dealing with it were letters or travelogs in which the traveler, usually an Englishman, depicted his amusement at the antics of the savage colonials, altho one, the Frenchman Chateaubriand, had come and gone in 1791 full of admiration. "There are no roads here, no towns, no monarchies, no men!" he exulted as he walked thru the wilderness of upper New York state. He then ran headlong into a group of Indians dancing a quadrille to the violin of an old Frenchman in a white wig.

Much earlier, in 1751, the first novel with an American setting, "The Life of Harriet Stuart," had appeared, but it was by an American girl, Charlotte Lennox, who forswore America for England, where she was the protegee of Dr. Samuel Johnson, and it was little read in America. Instead, the Waverley novels of Sir Walter Scott and the tales of terror of Mrs. Radcliffe were to be the American vogue. There was a true American poet, Philip Freneau, who introduced the honeysuckle, the whippoorwill, the katydid, and the pumpkin into brilliant verse, and was plagiarized by Scott, but in 1800 he turned to political satire.

America's only artists, well nourished in the English tradition, were portrait painters. Benjamin West, John Singleton Copley, and Gilbert Stuart had gone to England to live, leaving only Charles Willson Peale, who wangled out a living as harnessmaker, silversmith, watchmaker, dentist, and—painter.

Few painters even attempted landscapes except for relaxation when visiting a friend in the country, such as Samuel F. B. Morse, one of whose landscapes appears on page one. Morse is remembered for invention of his "talking spark," the telegraph, but he was an assiduous portrait painter, and all he ever wanted was recognition as a painter. But no one outside of George Washington, who paid $233.33 for four landscapes and authorized George Beck to paint some views of the Potomac, was even interested in landscapes.

The new Republic frankly had no arts. The American mind had devoted its energy to political philosophy.

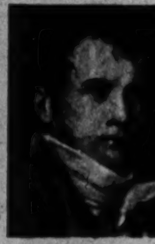
But then America began to move. It began to build roads—2,700 miles in Pennsylvania alone at the turn of the century and 1,400 in New York—to build bridges, to dream of canals, to follow its waterways to the west, by "west" meaning western New York state or along the Cumberland road thru Maryland or across the Virginias into Kentucky. As John C. Calhoun was to say later, the country was "rapidly—I was about to say fearfully—growing."

As America followed its waterways it began to take a wondering, romantic interest in rivers, mountains, and scenic wonders. In 1800 Washington Irving, then a boy of 17, made his first trip up the Hudson. Twenty-one years later the impressions and legends he garnered then, retold in his "Sketch Book," were to make of the Hudson a cult—so much so that wanderers from far and wide were to traverse it, artists were to glorify it in every conceivable mood, pictures of Anthony's Nose and Sugar Loaf and West Point were to appear on dinner plates, and Currier & Ives lithographs were to copy the artists' versions and send them around the world.



John Vanderlyn

In 1800, too, America began to discover Niagara falls. A French engraver had made a picture of this wonder in the 18th century, but not until 1802 was it painted. Then it was done by John Vanderlyn, the portrait painter, and done rather apologetically. Years later, in 1837 after "Clinton's ditch" (the Erie canal, opened in 1825) had made Niagara a paradise for pilgrims, Vanderlyn returned to paint what is known as his "great" Niagara, an adjective based solely on the size of his canvas, for the falls are the tiniest object in it. They are far in the distance, merely part of the landscape, the principal figure of which is a surrealist broken, dead tree with a hawk perched on it.

This, as well as six other paintings of the falls, is in the institute's Hudson River show, for every one who could wield a brush ended up there. Vanderlyn's first trip there was followed by John Trumbull, best known for his painting of the signing of the Declaration of Independence and his four historical canvases in the capitol rotunda at Washington ($8,000 each). Altho primarily a portrait painter, he also executed a series of water-

FLYING a Grumman Wildcat fighting plane in his first battle action, James E. Swett of San Mateo, Cal., a marine first lieutenant, leading a division of four planes, on April 7, 1943, contacted 150 Japanese planes above the Guadalcanal-Tulagi-Savo area in the Solomon Islands.

Picking a formation of 15 enemy bombers, he made his first dive and exploded three of these craft in midair. Other members of his division now were scattered about and Swett found himself alone. Without hesitation he attacked six other Japanese bombers and in a few minutes shot four of them down in flames, making a total of seven in one engagement.

As he began maneuvering to resume the attack his ammunition ran out. With a partly disabled engine and a shattered windshield, he was forced to make a crash landing on the ocean. He brought his plane down skilfully without injuring himself.

On the following July 11, while trying to break up a Japanese attack on the American-held Rendova Island, Swett, by this time a captain with 12 enemy planes to his credit, encountered a big flight of Zeros and enemy bombers. Swett noticed two Zeros tailing Lt. Harold Segal of Long Island City, N. Y. He attacked one of these, shearing off a wing, and then turned his attention to a Japanese bomber, which he blew up.

At this point a Zero which he had not seen got on top of him and he was forced to make a crash landing in the sea. The Zero came in strafing, and the marine captain spent most of the time diving under the surface of the water to escape machine gun bullets. After 15 minutes the pilot of the Zero gave up the effort. Swett then made his way to the shore of a small island, and the next day was picked up by a rescue boat.

He has the medal of honor (congressional medal) and the distinguished flying cross.

A southbound freight enters Whittier tunnel on the Alaska railroad cut-off.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

AMONG the miracles of modern engineering achieved under the pressure of war time necessity is the building of a new railroad cut-off in Alaska, cutting the distance from a usable seaport to the town of Anchorage by more than 50 miles and providing an alternate for a rail route highly vulnerable to attack by enemy airplanes.

To complete the facilities of this new stretch of railroad it was necessary also to construct a new seaport. The job is finished and the government-operated railroad of Alaska, 513 miles long, now is a safe one in war time and promises to become doubly useful in the development of the territory in peace time.

Under the stress of war time emergency authorized by congress in 1940 a decision was reached to construct a branch line cut-off from Portage, on the original line between Seward and Anchorage, to a site on Prince William sound, considerably northeast of Seward and farther out of range of Japanese attack. The 114 miles of rail line between Seward, which is located on Resurrection bay, and Anchorage, at the head of Cook inlet, presented great vulnerability to air attack and sabotage. Constructed over the worst possible terrain, with heavy grades in both directions, with two summits of great height, and with seven tunnels and trestles, the Seward-Anchorage line could have been put out of operation easily by a minimum of aerial bombing. Deep snow in winter always had made operations on the line difficult. Anchorage, as a port, is very limited in usefulness because of the excessive tides, fifth greatest in the world, and navigational difficulties of Cook inlet.

Construction of the new cut-off between Prince William sound and Portage, 12.34 miles long, was started after Pearl Harbor and completed in something less than two years. Using plans prepared by the Alaska railroad, owned by the United States government and operated by the department of the interior, army engineers moved in and, with the help of a private construction company, blasted the cut-off route thru the mountains to Prince William sound, where they built the new ice-free port of Whittier, with a harbor big enough to hold the whole navy. One of the advantages of Whittier is that only one set of fortifications is required to defend it.

The two 1,000-h.p. diesel-electric locomotives which operate in tandem to haul freight over the Whittier-Anchorage road.

At left: Col. Otto F. Ohlson, who is general manager of the Alaska railroad.

The Portage-Whittier cut-off is constructed for the most part on bedrock. It includes two tunnels, one 13,090 feet long and the other 4,911 feet long. The first is fourth in length of all tunnels under the American flag. Starting from Whittier, the roadbed ascends 141 feet in five miles, then gradually drops 114.6 feet to a height of 26.4 feet above sea level at Portage. It is estimated that the lack of this cut-off in the last 20 years has cost the railroad about 14 million dollars, and that under normal business conditions it would pay for itself in from 10 to 11 years. Under present war-stimulated conditions, however, it would pay for itself in less than half that time.

• • •

The town and harbor of Whittier were built upon a site where there was not even a village before. Docks were constructed to accommodate three ships and quarters erected for troops. It should be pointed out that soldiers played important roles in the building and maintenance of the cut-off and the seaport on Prince William sound. With the strategic importance of the Alaska railroad of vital concern to the war department, a crucial problem arose when the Japanese headed for the Aleutian Islands. In February, 1943, in response to the need for operating and maintenance personnel, the army sent its 714th railway operating battalion, 1,160 strong, to keep the trains running.

The soldiers became conductors, engineers, firemen, brakemen, track maintenance men, bridge builders, and office assistants, according to their previous civilian training and experience.

As the branch line neared completion it was decided that forced ventilation systems for the new tunnels should not be installed. It would take time to do this, and the cost would be about $300,000 for the longer tunnel. Altho there is plenty of coal in Alaska for steam locomotive fuel, it was known, of course, that coal-burning engines could not operate safely thru tunnels not equipped with ventilation systems. The answer was oil-burning diesel electric locomotives, which, according to tests later made in Alaska by the United States bureau of mines, are not dangerous in confined places such as mines and tunnels.

Two 1,000 horsepower Alco-General Electric diesel road switcher engines were built at the Schenectady, N. Y., plant of the American Locomotive company for service by the new cut-off from Whittier to Anchorage. They arrived by army transport at Whittier on June 6, 1943, and six days later were placed in service. During the initial run officials of the bureau of mines made tests for carbon monoxide gas in the tunnels and reported it present to the extent of only 25 ten-thousands of 1 per cent. Twenty times that much of the gas, they reported, would be unhealthy for trainmen or passengers, and 100 times that much, they said, would be considered as dangerous. Tests made with coal-burning locomotives indicated that the tunnels would be unsafe for a period of about two hours after the passage of the steamers.

On their initial run the two diesels, working together, hauled a train of 35 cars from Whittier to Anchorage. The next day they returned to Whittier drawing 47 loaded cars. Steam power trains on this stretch of the Alaska railroad are limited to about 25 cars each. It is possible for the diesels to make the round trip between Whittier and Anchorage, a distance of 125 miles, without the need of servicing, which would not be the case with coal-burning locomotives.

The Alaska railroad, under the general managership of Col. Otto F. Ohlson, is expecting a profitable business after the war. Its 513 miles of line provide an essential artery into the interior of Alaska. With the reduction of 52 miles from tidewater to interior provided by the new Whittier-Portage cut-off, a lowering of freight rates is made possible. This is expected to be as much as 30 per cent between the coast and Anchorage and 7 or 8 per cent between tidewater and Fairbanks, the interior terminus.

The original line began operations in 1923. Since Pearl Harbor its business has increased at least 90 per cent. Its operating profit for 1943 was $4,501,264, which is considered a favorable return on the approximately 75 million dollars that the people of the United States have invested in it. In addition to its railway line the Alaska railroad operates river craft between Nenana, the railhead on the Tanana river, and Marshall, on the Yukon river, a distance of 774 miles. The fleet consists of four steamers and nine barges.

HIGH HAIR STYLE

• • •

By ELEANOR NANGLE

BEYOND doubt one of the important if not the most important hair style of the year is the one which uses the artificial hairpiece, preferably the braid. And more often than not the braid, in a most Victorian style, is worn right on the crown of the head, like a round crown, not a band across from ear to ear, nor folded across the back.

• • •

The abundance of the hairpieces is astonishing. As one fashion authority inquired, where is the hair coming from? We've been a short-haired nation for decades.

However, it's coming from somewhere, and its uses are many and flattering. You can wear a chignon low on your neck or a braid in any number of ways. And one of the smartest of the latter is the one illustrated.

This is used with a basic hairdress—officially known as "Winged Victory"—that has sleekness but uplift, too, with the ears revealed and hair swept smoothly up in back. A very few—and those few very soft—ringlets give distinction and interest to the crown. This is a basic style that is worn as is when you want to be regal.

When you want a rather demure distinction you add your braid, winding it into a circlet and anchoring it firmly on the crown of your head. It gives height—which the new hats will accommodate—and it gives tremendous style, 1945 model.

Decoration Tricks

By EDITH WEIGLE

THESE are the days when ingenuity is one of the greatest virtues in the decorator's bag of tricks. Instead of throwing out that old chair, it's both patriotic and wise to make it do by doing it over. Ingenuity can double the apparent size of your living room windows, can break up that monotonous expanse of bare wall without calling in the carpenter, can bring an entire interior out of the doldrums without denting the budget.

The photograph shows a corner of an interior designed by Dorothy Draper and illustrates several clever ways of rejuvenating your own home. For instance, if a new rug is badly needed, why wait for months or until after the war to get an all-wool floor covering? Why not choose one of the smart, shaggy cottons like the off-white one shown in the picture? Not too expensive, sturdy, long wearing, and easy to clean; also available in charming colors.

About that old chair. Not a new idea, but always a good one—simply slip-cover it. But select a handsome material such as the vivid green and white striped cotton shown on the lounge chair and ottoman, and have it made by an expert unless you're pretty professional with the scissors and needle yourself.

When a pair of windows are set in a large wall they become a decorative asset instead of a drawback if flowered draperies are hung from ceiling to floor against the bare wall on either side, as has been done in the room pictured. Then use criss-cross white ruffled curtains at the windows themselves. Or if the view is a pleasing one, dispense with curtains and use Venetian blinds.

One final trick: Break up a monotonous wall with a mirror panel like the one in the Dorothy Draper room. In this case a similar mirror was used on the other side of the fireplace for balance. Put something interesting in front of it, such as the table, lamp, and books used here. It's a face lifter for a room that never fails.

All of the furniture shown in the photograph was exhibited at the recent winter market here, but will not be manufactured for some months, due to government rulings. The color scheme of this room was vivid green, rose, red, and white.

A wing chair, not shown in the illustration, was upholstered in a plain green, and at either end of the couch near-by was a huge ruffled sofa pillow made of the flowered chintz of the draperies. A stunning huge, low black coffee table with a mirror glass top stood in front of the couch.

The fireplace wall was hung in a paper imitating natural toned wood paneling, which acted as a foil for the lively stripes and florals of the drapery and slip cover fabrics. The woodwork was painted dead white.

THE GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER presents "THE GLASS MENAGERIE"

This dreamlike play by Tennessee Williams had its world premiere at Chicago's Civic theater and immediately was acclaimed by the critics as a great work—as one of the most unusual examples of dramatic art yet produced. Its public acceptance was slow at first, but now Chicago is applauding it heartily. This is a picture story of the play, with captions by Claudia Cassidy, Tribune drama critic.

THE CAST

AMANDA, the mother:
An addled southern belle harassed by the present and haunted by the past—played by
LAURETTE TAYLOR

TOM, the son:
A frustrated weakling who shares his father's wanderlust but not his debonair freedom to forget what he has deserted—played by
EDDIE DOWLING

LAURA, the daughter:
A frail girl with a limp, so shy she devotes her time to collecting the little glass animals of the title and to playing wornout phonograph records—played by
JULIE HAYDON

MR. O'CONNOR, the gentleman caller:
A hearty but somehow touching extrovert who represents the mother's brief hope for her daughter; a man who is "disappointed but not discouraged"—played by
ANTHONY ROSS

1 It is 1935. In memory Tom Wingfield returns to the shabby St. Louis home from which he had wandered 15 years before, leaving his nagging mother and crippled sister to whatever fate had in store for them. "St. Louis Blues" is heard faintly from the dance hall next door as the story begins to focus in his mind and on the stage. "This is a memory play," he says. "It is sentimental, it is not realistic. . . . I am the narrator, also a character in it. . . ."

2 Neither time nor distance had dimmed his image of Laura, the girl bound to earth by a limp and to solitude by shyness, who finds release in the flight of her glass animals, soaring to music from a worn-out phonograph which is almost the only legacy left by her father, the man in the photograph.

3 Love of Laura, and an occasional quirk of humor, are about all Tom and his mother have in common. After a bitter quarrel they start speaking again only when Laura slips and falls on her way to the grocery.

4 But this is a more familiar memory of the Wingfields at home: Tom flinging off to the movies in a rage of frustration, Amanda nagging at him to bring home a gentleman caller for sister, Laura hovering helplessly in the background, a frail neurotic who once loved a high school boy who scarcely knew she was alive.

5 Tom's trip to the movies has undergone several detours, and Laura lets him in next morning barely in time to get to bed before Amanda's querulous "Rise and shine!" starts him muttering, "I'll rise, but I won't shine."

6 But Tom is no man to resist anything for long. He admits he has captured a gentleman caller, who is coming to dinner. Amanda, confronted with a miracle, calls Laura, telling her to make a wish over her left shoulder at "that little silver slipper of a moon." "What shall I wish, mother?" And in a trembling voice, her eyes filled with tears, Amanda says: "Happiness! Good fortune!"

8 Amanda flies into a frenzy of preparation, polishing silver, digging out a battered candelabrum, making Laura a dress long enough to mask her limp. "A fragile, unearthly prettiness has come out in Laura: she is like a piece of translucent glass touched by light, given a momentary radiance, not actual, not lasting."

9 Amanda pauses, in a reverie. Not every belle picks the right husband. "I had malaria fever all that spring," says Amanda. "Just enough to make me restless and giddy. I had the craze for jonquils . . . and then I met your father." That amiable fellow in the picture, "a telephone man who fell in love with long distance," seems to remember, too.

10 But after all the preparations calamity strikes. The gentleman caller is the boy Laura loved in high school, and the girl slips in sick fright from the gala table. Amanda, really the party girl of the piece, holds up gallantly: "Nobody, nobody's given me this much entertainment in years! I'm not exaggerating one bit! But Sister is all by her lonesome. Mr. O'Connor, you go keep her company in the parlor."

"Stubborn dirt is meek as a lamb, with so much MORE SUDS!"

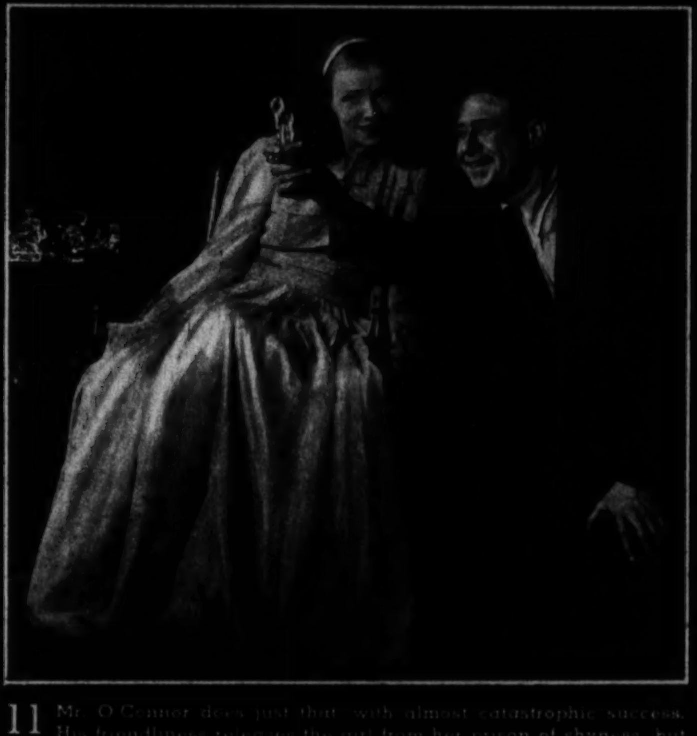
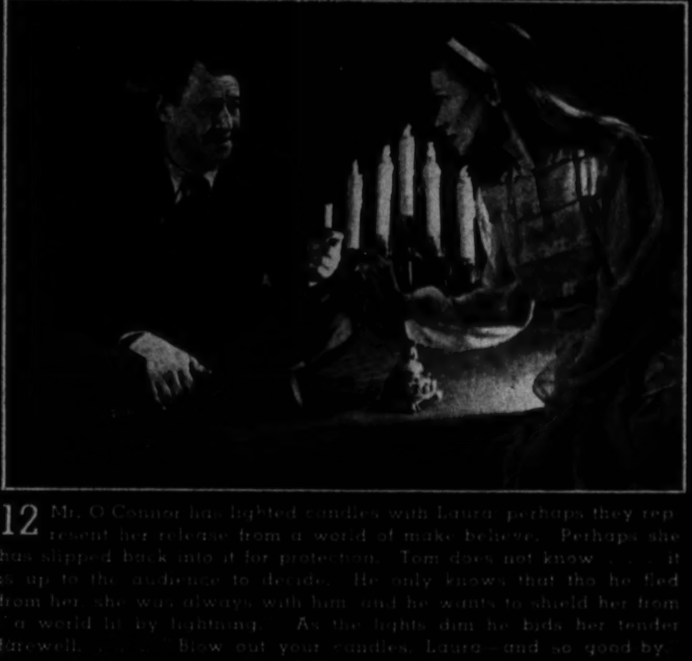
Super Suds, Super Suds, Floods o' Suds for dishes and duds!



11 Mr. O'Connor does just that, with almost catastrophic success. His friendliness releases the girl from her prison of shyness, but as a gentleman caller he has to admit that he punches a time clock elsewhere. Mr. O'Connor, embarrassed and a little unhappy about it, will call no more.



12 Mr. O'Connor has lighted candles with Laura: perhaps they represent her release from a world of make believe. Perhaps she has slipped back into it for protection. Tom does not know . . . it is up to the audience to decide. He only knows that tho he fled from her, she was always with him, and he wants to shield her from "a world lit by lightning." As the lights dim he bids her tender farewell. . . . "Blow out your candles, Laura—and so good-by."

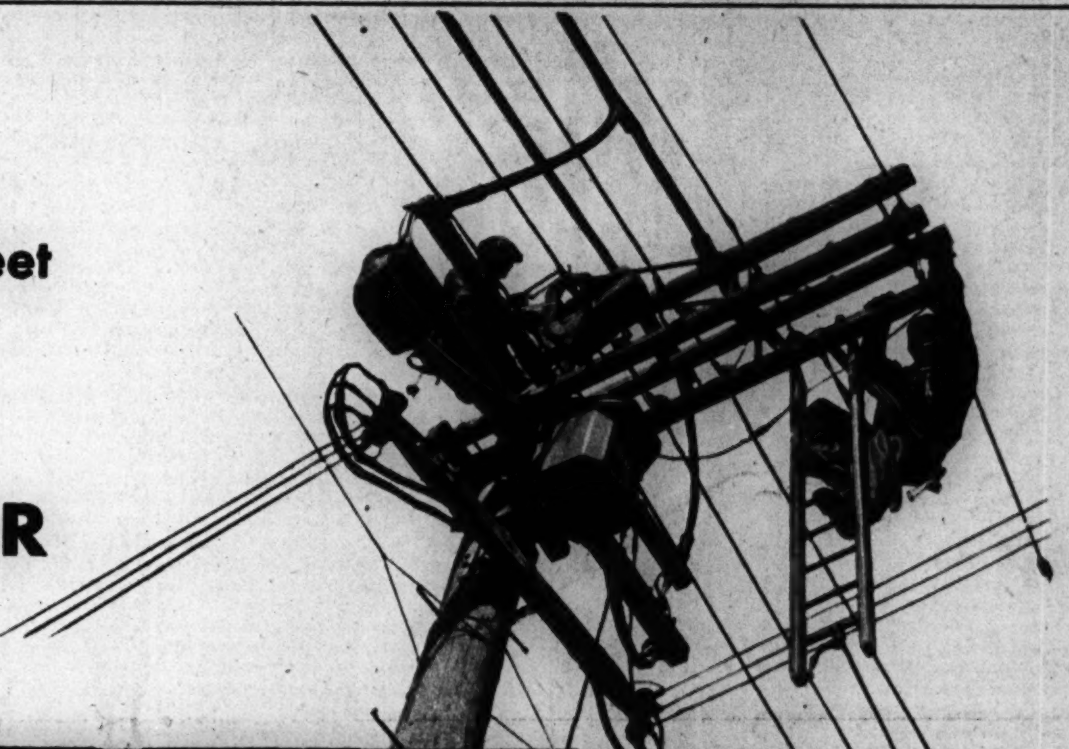
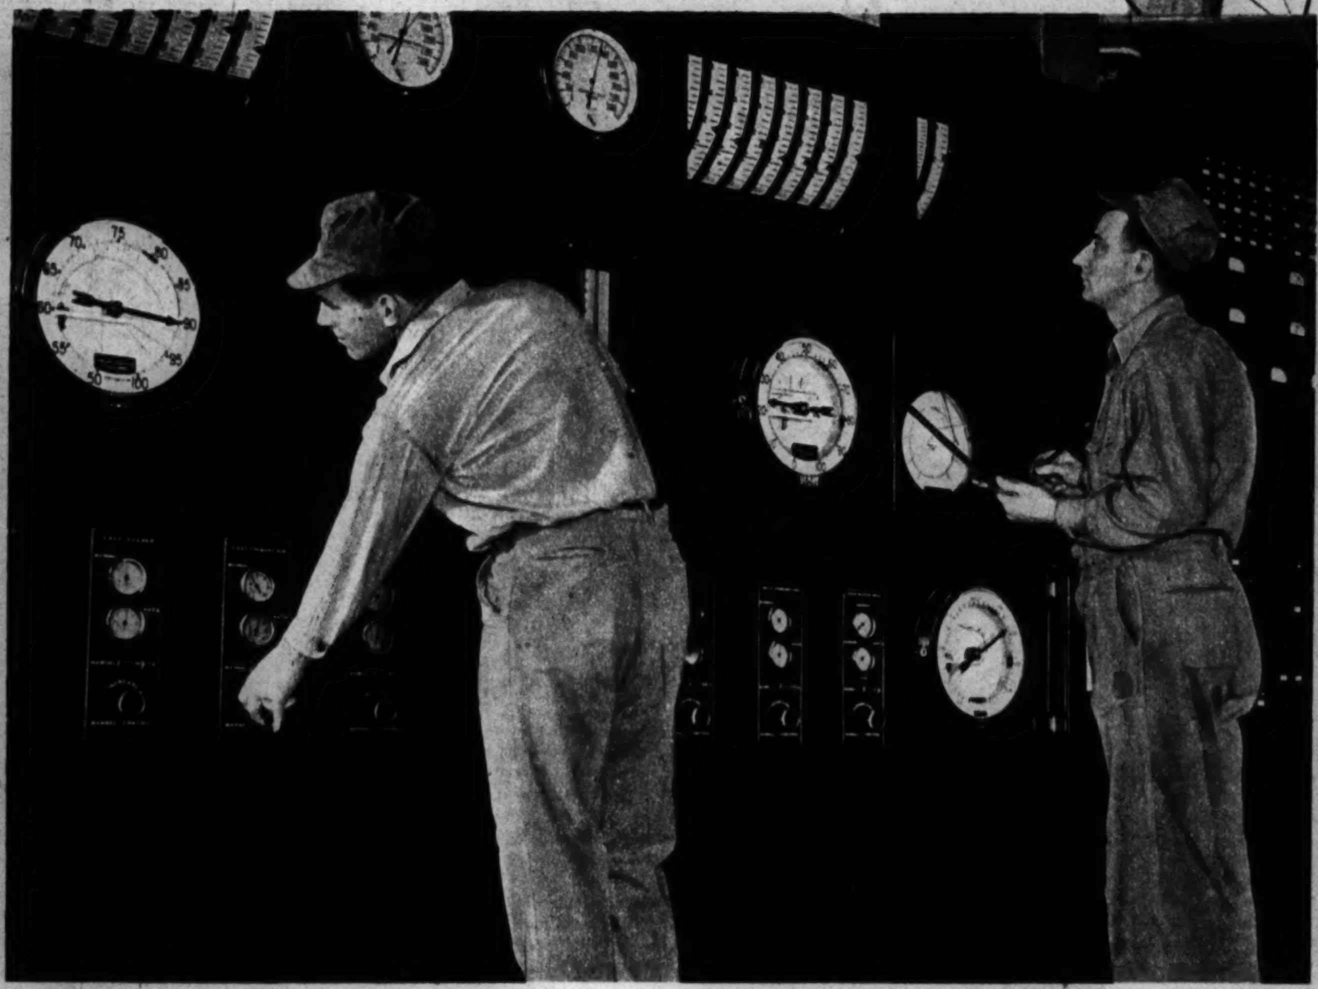
How skilled workers meet wartime demands for ELECTRIC POWER



After devoting years to training, these men are experienced for their work of constructing and maintaining the vital electric power lines. Their duties off the ground require "balance" while performing skilled work.



The complex instrument panel in the boiler control room enables skilled employes to control the production and flow of steam that turns the gigantic electric turbo-generators. Many years of experience are required to fit these men for their jobs.

The production and distribution of electric power is a highly technical business involving the employment of men carefully trained and highly specialized for the particular activity in which they are engaged. There is no substitute for training and experience, and many years of effort are required for these men to be fitted for the jobs of generating and transmitting electricity.

Competent and conscientious man power, qualified by years of training and experience, must stand behind the electric power supply, not only for everyday operation, but also to serve the many war industries now located in Chicago.

THE DUKE—AMERICAN MUSICAL INSTITUTION

Duke Ellington . . . always he stars.

IT WASN'T just sentiment that prompted them to elect Duke Ellington the top arranger and top band leader in the annual Esky jazz poll. His compositions, his arrangements, his two decades of band leadership, his development of sidemen, all testify to his greatness. I was criticized once for saying in a brief review of an Ellington recording that the Duke starred. Technically the criticism was warranted, for no one lists Duke Ellington as among the greatest jazz pianists, and his work in the orchestra is not spectacular. But in any Ellington record Ellington stars. His personality and his understanding of music shape the entire presentation, prepare the opportunities for his sidemen's superb work. In his four most recent sides for VICTOR the Duke demonstrates especially well this genius for personalizing his music, so that the entire arrangement is ineffably his, yet no bit of credit is taken from the individuals who work with him. "Don't You Know I Care" is given over at the start to Al Hibbler, a grand blues singer. Al is followed by a superb interplay of the trumpets and trombones, and it all ends on an elegant note from the sax soloist. Duke himself appears briefly on the B side, "I'm Beginning to See the Light," a slow, easy number marked by the trumpet antiphonal and Joya Sherrill's sharp singing. Joya features in "I Didn't Know About You," too, and she gets a clear, easy piano background from the Duke. There's a good trumpet phrase, too. Hibbler's blues do it again in "I Ain't Got Nothin' but the Blues," with a Kay Davis obbligato. But listen to that sax moan, and the answers of the trumpets and piano!

Harry is Cool, his fans hot. Sorry I called Nat Cool Fan Gloria Crawford "Russell." Had Andy on my mind. Forgiven? Where are the Crosby, Sinatra, Como [illegible]?—W. D.

Of all the "Don't Fence Me In" disks that have come this way, one of the best orchestrally is Sammy Kaye's VICTOR version, with a bit of ragtime touch and Billy Williams' good cowboy style singing. Kate Smith is a little out of character in her COLUMBIA version, the Four Chicks and Chuck taking the play away from her. Gene Autry does a typical Autry job on it for OKEH, and backs it up, paradoxically, with "I'm Gonna Build a Big Fence Around Texas."

Here Comes the Grooming

"SUGAR and spice and everything nice—that's what little girls are made of." And every smart girl knows that that "everything nice" secret includes a grooming routine with a stiff hair brush, nail brush, tooth brush, plenty of soap and warm water, and half an hour set aside each day for an outside finish to give her the attractive, healthy appearance of a John Powers model. Because even tho a gal may have the brains of a Quiz Kid, the talent of a movie star, and the poise of a White House receptionist, it takes more than that to make her charm complete. It takes good grooming and good grooming means hard work.

• • •

Just a once-over-lightly with the wash cloth at night, a quick pouf of powder before a date, and a smudge of lipstick in the morning aren't enough to keep even the most promising of gals on the pretty and petite list for long. Go about this beauty business as methodically and as carefully as you do your homework. Grooming for the next day starts the night before. Take an extra half hour of time just before you go to bed to give yourself that crisp and clean feeling to sleep on and to make it easier to get off to school on time the next morning.

For a high school gal the main things necessary for a clear complexion are cleanliness and correct diet. A nightly work-out with a mild soap and plenty of warm water keeps any girl pink and pretty. To get rid of that "just got back from a hard day at the coal mines" look, a quick wipe with the wash cloth wrung out of warm water is the first step. Then lather the soap in the hands and massage it gently into the skin with the finger tips. Several warm rinses to get rid of all soap particles, then a dash of cold water to give it a final tingling rinse, and even Joan Leslie couldn't do better.

Word comes from those who know that six to eight glasses of water daily and plenty of citrus fruits and fruit juices, with a much lower quota of hot fudges and chocolate cokes, do much toward acquiring a fresh faced and wide eyed appearance. No amount of washing or wishing can make up for that healthy glow that comes from a healthy body.

It is often true that your dating career can hang by a hair, so keeping your hair clean and attractive is one of the best ways to get on some one's regular date list. Whether you're wearing your hair in a long bob, a fluffy feather cut, or in quaint pigtails with bright red bows, that old routine of "100 strokes a night keeps your hair healthy and bright," with frequent and thoro shampoos between, is the best way to give it that magazine ad sleekness.

• • •

A smart hair-do has quality before quantity so give yourself the once-over for side and back views. If your hair is too long, too thick, or too curly, have it shaped, thinned, or tamed down. You wouldn't want to be mistaken for a Zulu at a hundred paces on a clear day.

For enough daily shut-eye to keep you wide-eyed, remember the old adage: "Early to bed, early to rise, keeps you dating the smoother guys." Put that above your trundle bed in cross-stitch and then tuck yourself in beneath it for nine hours' sleep a night. Authorities on teen aged health and rest say it takes at least that much sound sleep to keep you feeling lively enough to clean your bedroom before breakfast, run five blocks to school, attend six classes a day, and still have enough energy left to be some one's wide-eyed, winsome date on Friday night.

It takes more than brains, poise, and beauty to give a girl real charm. Grooming is the key to that.

But no matter what brains or brawn you have beneath, no matter how much vim or vitamins, that added attraction of smooth clothes still make the girl—prettier and more attractive, at least. So any smart character will set aside one night a week and 15 minutes a day to keep herself looking neat and sweet.

Uneven hem lines, crooked stocking seams (on those few dressup occasions when high school gals step out in high heels), unpressed skirts, and shoes that have seen the world the hard way are strictly taboo. A good way to guard against missing buttons, split seams, and cries of "slip ahoy" is to keep a small, personal mending basket tucked away somewhere in your bedroom.

• • •

A supply of needles, thread the color of your clothes, a pair of scissors, and a few buttons will keep you from getting that slightly "unmade" look that comes from too few threads and snaps holding a gal together. You will have no excuse then for knotting your slip straps, pinning up the hem of your skirt, or darning your best bobby socks with dark brown mending floss. If you must wear slacks (and being a high school girl, you must!), a quick once-over with a chemically treated pressing cloth (purchased at any drug store) and a warm iron is all that's necessary to keep them from looking like your G. I. cousin's second-bests handed down to you when he went off to the wars.

That same treatment will work wonders with that brown and white checked skirt you've had since you were a freshman; it will put new life in your old plaid suit and will keep your new wool dress looking like a creation by Claire McCardle.

Every smooth girl is convinced by her freshman year that grime doesn't pay and she'd never be caught red handed wearing yesterday's dickey turned inside out, hair bows that saw their prime two weeks ago, and sweaters that are literally "sloppy" joes. She keeps herself fresh and sweet in small ways — tucks unwrapped bars of toilet soap among her slips and night gowns for a clean, scented odor and uses cologne bottles, empty and uncorked but still fragrant, as dresser drawer sachets.

She hangs her sweaters up to air occasionally instead of leaving them folded in a drawer from week to week, uses a clean piece of cotton batting each day as a fresh powder puff, and lays her clean bobby socks in a drawer in flat pairs instead of bundling them into "sock balls," thus stretching the wool and sagging the socks at the ankle.

And when you're lathered, brushed, scrubbed, and pressed till you look like something out of a pre-war laundry, it still takes a long look in a full length mirror to make sure the picture is complete. It is important to see yourself as a whole, not just a fleeting, limited glance in your compact mirror. That old maxim, "See yourself as others see you," seems pretty important when you remember that those "others" include a lot of datable high school fellows.

Make grooming just another part of your daily schedule, a habit as routine as drinking your morning orange juice. Good grooming means hard work but it's worth it—after all, Joyce Reynolds wasn't built in a day!

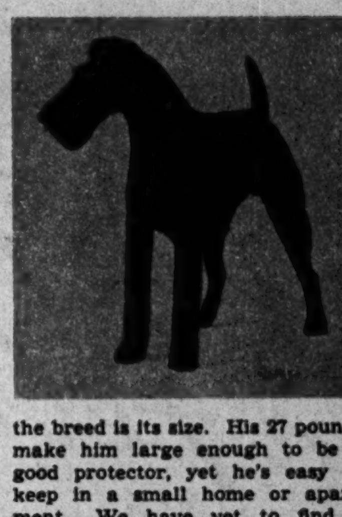
MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER



The Irish terrier is a gay, brave little dog weighing 25 to 27 pounds. This specimen, owned by Mr. and Mrs. W. A. E Woods, has the unusual name of Thunderhead of Ballywood.

TAKEN as a group or class, the terriers are a pretty gay set. They have zip and zest galore. There are some rather calm breeds of dogs known today, but you won't find these quiet ones among terriers. They are full of fun, like to play, keep an eye on what's going on, usually are brimming over with the joy of living, and therefore are entertaining.

We can substantiate any statement about terriers being entertaining, because we have owned them, played with them, and laughed at their antics. Some of them are regular little show-offs. Most of them like to do tricks, because it's a chance for them to get into the spotlight and get a few laughs. It's no secret that there are dog fanciers who don't like terriers because they are so full of bounce and energy. We can understand that viewpoint, too, because some people prefer one of those calm, reserved types of pets, whereas certain terriers may require more than a bit of handling. Unless trained pretty early in life to restrain some of its bounce and alertness one of the more energetic terriers can get out of hand around the house. We learned that lesson years ago.

England and Scotland have produced many of the terriers which are so popular today. The breed name comes from the Latin terra, meaning earth. Years ago terriers were bred to work for sportsmen and land owners. They had to dig for animals that burrowed underground. In Europe there still are many of these working "earth dogs," and terrier owners in this country who give their dogs a chance to be useful know how their pets like to dig for woodchucks, chipmunks, and other animals. Our Sealyham, Ch. Redlands Defiance, which died last summer, loved to hunt for mice and chipmunks and was an accomplished digger. We used to find him throwing the dirt all over the back yard after he had the delightful fun of running a chipmunk into a hole. It used to keep us busy smoothing out the dirt in one spot of the back yard due to his attempts to dig out a saucy chipmunk. (He never did catch one.)

• • •

Altho England is known as the country which has produced many terriers, one of the most interesting members of the family comes from Ireland. This is the Irish terrier, which is undoubtedly an old breed. He's a pretty gallant looking type of dog, with a red coat, alert in bearing, trim in outline, and keen eyes. All in all the Irish terrier, a 25 to 27 pounder, is true terrier type and character. The breed never has achieved the popularity of the Scotty or the fox terrier, but it has a lot to give its owner in courage, fidelity, and good looks.

We never see an Irish terrier that we do not think about the way dogs of various colors and types of coats develop in different countries. For example, one thinks of Ireland as the Emerald isle, the isle of green. Yet that country has given the world two breeds of contrasting colors—the Kerry blue, which is a deep blue color, and the red Irish terrier.

The Irish terrier should be a whole-colored dog; a bright red, red wheaten, or golden red are the preferred colors. As is the case with most solid-colored dogs, a small white patch on the chest is permissible tho not desirable. You may hear this breed spoken of as the "daredevil," and fanciers of the breed will assure you that the little Irisher has no trouble living up to that nickname. He isn't afraid of anything. There's a devil-may-care trait in the Irish terrier that has won him a lot of friends. He's lively, full of pluck, gay, and a devoted pal.

One of the desirable features of the breed is its size. His 27 pounds make him large enough to be a good protector, yet he's easy to keep in a small home or apartment. We have yet to find a family owning an Irish terrier switching to another breed after everybody in the family circle has got to know the dog. In fact, one of the letters we always are sure of seeing in our mail is that which tells how the family has had an Irish terrier for many years, the dog has died, and now they must have another. If any dog fancier wants a game, lively companion and guard that loves to play and always is an alert antagonist of prowlers and vermin, he can't go wrong on the Irish terrier.

American Art

falls, the largest of which naturally was Niagara.

The trek there was so incessant that when William Dunlap, the one-eyed naturalist, reached there in 1816 he observed glumly, "This wonder of nature is exhausted." He was obviously mistaken and remained four days, taking time out from his work as assistant paymaster general for the New York militia to give his version. It, too, is in the show, the mighty scale of the falls accentuated by a few tiny figures strolling near it.

Several suggestions were made for improving the falls. David Wilkie, the English painter, dropped by in 1825 to test his skill and suggested that all attendant foliage be removed, so that nothing would "hide this sublime spectacle before us." Writers came as eagerly as artists, Nathaniel Hawthorne apparently being the first to observe, "It came like a march of destiny," but the last artist to attempt it was, by coincidence, the last artist of the Hudson River school. This was Frederick Church, whose tremendous canvas showed the stupendous body of water pouring into the abyss below. Church painted it in 1857 and took it to Europe, where it produced the comment, "Indeed, this work formed an era in the history of native landscape art from the revelation it proved to Europeans." Judges at the international exposition in Paris in 1876 were also impressed; they coughed up a second class medal.

But this, of course, was long after America began to discover itself.

America's first realization that the phrase "grandeur of nature" was no idle one came in 1817 with publication of William Cullen Bryant's "Thanatopsis." It united the interest in nature spurred by the pioneers and the stern religious fervor of the period (for 20 years the Connecticut Missionary society had been sending missionaries to Christianize the "heathen" south of Lake Ontario). His work was something of a shock. He wrote of the Berkshires rather than of Mount Olympus, of the bobolink rather than the nightingale, of the beauty of the blossoming shadbush. In his ode "To a Waterfowl" and other early poems he reflected the atmosphere and feeling of country, woods, and fields. Then four years later came Irving, writing of Rip Van Winkle and Ichabod Crane and the sleepy Hudson valley. On his heels, in 1823, came James Fenimore Cooper's first Leatherstocking tale, "The Pioneers." It dealt with forest glades and Indians and trappers, with what was then the pioneer country of New York state. Cooper's writings, known as "the American novels," were to sweep the world, translated into 24 languages and rivaling the Waverley novels. Theirs was the spirit of the American wilderness, the phenomena of nature painted scrupulously and enthusiastically, and Cooper's hero, Natty Bumppo, was to remain, in the words of Van Wyck Brooks, "the symbol of a civilization, the dawn of the new American soul."

John Trumbull

It was then that the landscape painters began to paint in earnest the American philosophy of nature which later was to be completely developed in the writings of Emerson and Thoreau. They went into the woods to sketch, as Europe did not, interpreting nature directly in its wild and untamed form, but expressed romantically. To them every scene was exciting and beautiful, and they painted it so, and altho many of them went to Europe in middle life, they brought back no European style on their return. They painted as before with meticulous detail, rich color, and a photographic edge.

Few started as landscape painters. They were engravers and lawyers and silversmiths, but they were woodsmen at heart. Thomas Doughty, who was among the first, started as a leather currier and gave up a flourishing business in 1820 to go to the woods. A great hunter and fisherman, he began to paint the scenes he had loved when trapping around Philadelphia and then branched out to the Hudson. In 1833 he went as far afield as Maine, the first artist to paint its rocky shores.

The true founder of the Hudson River school, however, was Thomas Cole, who had started out as an apprentice to a designer of calico prints. Later he became an engraver and did the engravings for John Bunyan's "Holy War." He was living in an attic in New York, and finally one bright Indian summer day could stand it no longer. Slinging a green baize bag over his shoulder, he began to trudge up the Hudson river valley and reached Rip Van Winkle's village of Catskill. He determined to stay there and paint. That was in 1826.

Much credit for his move is due the poet Bryant, who said to Cole and another young painter, Henry Inman, "Go forth and list to nature's teachings." Both did, but Cole soon exerted great influence. Many painters came to visit him, many remained as his pupils. He painted twilight glades, lost lakes, silvery birches on misty shores, and, over and over again, the Hudson, eliciting the praise of Turner in England, who remarked: "There is a young man in America named Cole who ought to do fine things. He is as much a poet as a painter." Thruout life Cole and Bryant were to be inseparable, taking walking tours together, scaling Catskill precipices, musing, dreaming—part of which was captured in one of the most amusing pictures to come from the Hudson River school. This is "Kindred Spirits," the work of Asher B. Durand. It shows a wild Catskill landscape of trees, chasms, and river. Jutting over the promontory is a great slab of rock. Standing on it are Cole and Bryant, dressed as tho they had just stepped from a hatbox. Durand, incidentally, was another who started as an engraver. He had worked on plates for banknotes, copied engravings from Scott's novels, and had been commissioned by Trumbull to make the engravings of the Declaration of Independence, a lucrative job, as engravings sold at a prodigious rate.

Doughty, Durand, Cole, and J. F. Kensett, whose work a modern critic describes cuttingly as "unemotional as a time table," were the first to sense the extraordinary beauties of pioneer America. To them the Hudson was far more beautiful than the Rhine or Tiber or Thames, and their followers were legion. Even Inness started in this school and painted his early pictures in the Catskills. Some, such as George Durrie, who painted New England farm scenes and quiet landscapes, have been anonymously extoled thru the years, for their work was reproduced, often without credit lines, in Currier & Ives' prints.

But Cole et al. were not neglected in their time. Far from it. Landscapes became tremendously popular, so much so that by the mid '50s a good landscape painter not only had every opportunity to become wealthy but special concessions were being made to artists, the most celebrated of which was the Baltimore and Ohio railroad excursion in 1858. This consisted of a six car train complete with a piano in the parlor car and darkrooms for photographers. The sole passengers were artists and writers, guests of the railroad. It was a three day jaunt over the Alleghenies, and the train stopped whenever an artist saw a spot he wished to sketch.

George Inness

Here was tardy recognition, won with difficulty. Only 20 years before Emerson had been labeled "half crazy" when in his celebrated "American Scholar" speech he declared: "Our day of dependence, our long apprenticeship to the learning of other lands, draws to a close. We have listened too long to the courtly muses of Europe! . . . We will walk on our own feet, we will work with our hands, we will speak our own minds."

• • •

But America at last was doing just that, and moving west as well, the painters in step with the pioneers, the first, George Catlin, as early as 1832, leaving behind his portraits of Gov. De Witt Clinton and Dolly Madison to follow Indian trails along the Missouri river. For eight years he lived with the Indians, painting 600 portraits and a few landscapes, three of which are in the show.

America, as James Fenimore Cooper aptly phrased it, was "passing from the gristle into the bone," and the painters went with it. One, Alfred Jacob Miller, commanded a caravan of the American Fur company and went as far as Oregon. Later, on the Stewart expedition to the Rockies in 1837, he painted 200 water colors, two of which are in the show.

Another, John Mix Stanley, did painting after painting enobling the savage and his country, while George Caleb Bingham did just the opposite—the white man deposing the red. (One of his few landscapes without figures is in the show.) Thomas Moran wandered all thru the west, painting its primeval magnificence, and Albert Bierstadt went to Yosemite to paint the giant redwoods.

The entire period culminated with a tremendous flourish in Frederick Church, who started as a pupil of Cole painting the Catskills and found no landscape too mighty for his brush. From the Catskills he went to South America to paint the Andes. From South America he went to Labrador to paint icebergs. From Labrador he went to the then obscure corners of Europe and Asia—Turkey, Palestine, Greece. And eventually, a rich man, his paintings selling for from $12,500 to $25,000, he came home to the Hudson. Here on a mountain top across from Catskill he built a great Moorish palace on a 300 acre tract of land. Its roof is a mosaic of inlaid tile, its walls are of ornamental brick set in Moorish designs, its interior is filled with Turkish rugs, Armenian embroideries, and Mexican pottery, and it stands there today aloof, incongruous, alien, above the crags of the Hudson, as probably the only monument to that condemned school of landscape painting which made it possible.

THERE'S NO OTHER PEN LIKE PARKER 51"

"Writes dry with wet ink!"

That phrase—"there's no other pen like it"—goes far to explain why Parker 51's aren't so plentiful as you—and we—would like them to be.

For this pen is built with a craftsman's care, with exacting skill born of 56 years' experience. Here is a writing instrument which no mass production methods could ever achieve. There is prestige in this "51" . . . there is pride in owning it.

In use, the "51" merits all the praise its owners bestow. Cradle this smoothly tapered beauty in your hand . . . it feels "right". Touch its enclosed, ever-moist tip to paper. It starts on contact . . . glides as effortlessly as a shadow across the page.

And look—it writes dry! Even as your words take shape they dry smudge-proof . . . without a blotter! For the "51" alone can use Parker "51" Ink—the world's fastest drying ink. This pen, of course, can also use any regular ink you desire.

You begin to see now why the Parker "51" is the "world's most wanted pen" . . . why demand for it grows ever faster.

If your dealer cannot supply you at once, place a reservation order with him. Perhaps sooner than you think, a gleaming "51" may be yours.

For Parker 51's will be more available. And you'll be glad you waited!

Colors: Black, Blue Cedar, Dove Gray, Cordovan Brown. $12.50; $15.00. Pencils, $5.00; $7.50. Vacumatic pens, $8.75. Pencils, $4.00.

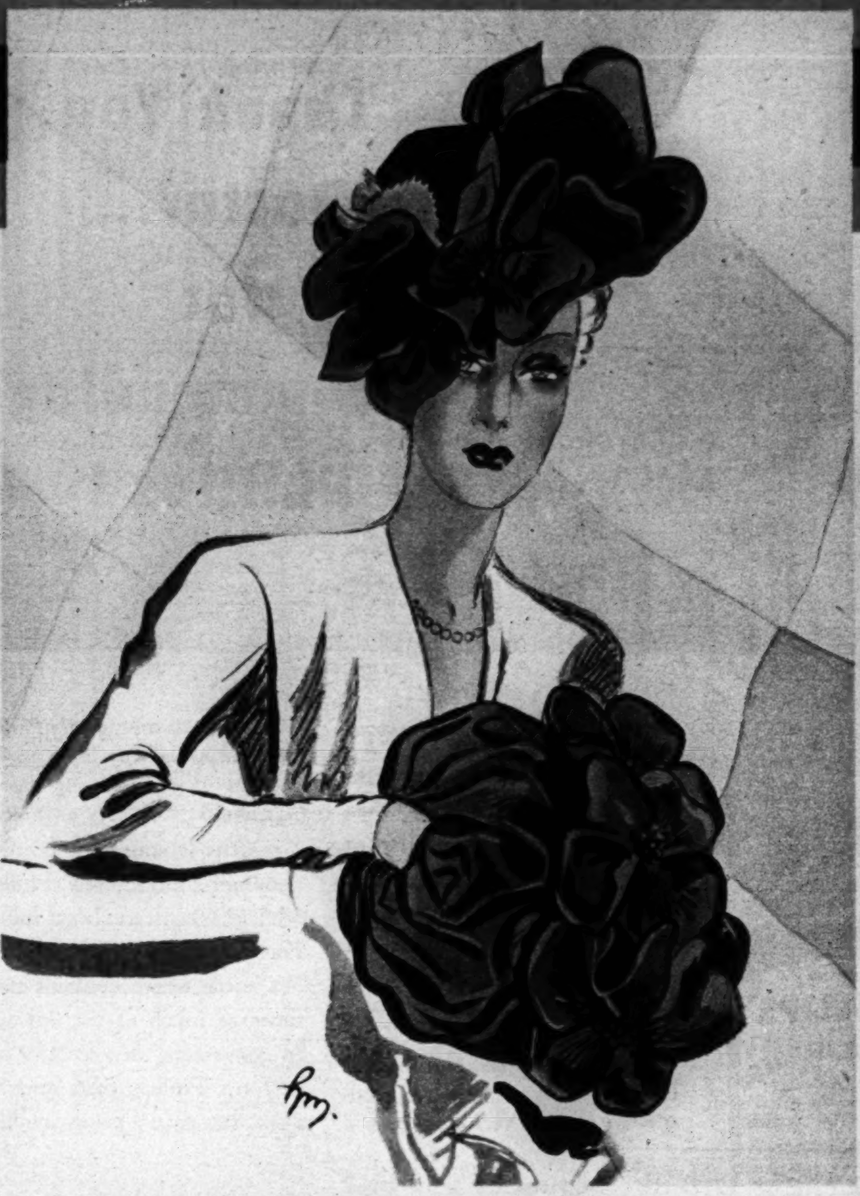
PARIS FASHIONS

OF THE HOUR

Rushed to Chicago by air mail, the color sketches reproduced here visualize three new fashions originated by Paris couturiers. The sketches were executed in the studio of Scaioni, celebrated Paris fashion artist, exclusively for the Chicago Tribune.



For cocktail parties and the theater, Paquin creates a red velvet muff encircled by huge, four-petaled flowers and worn with matching toque.

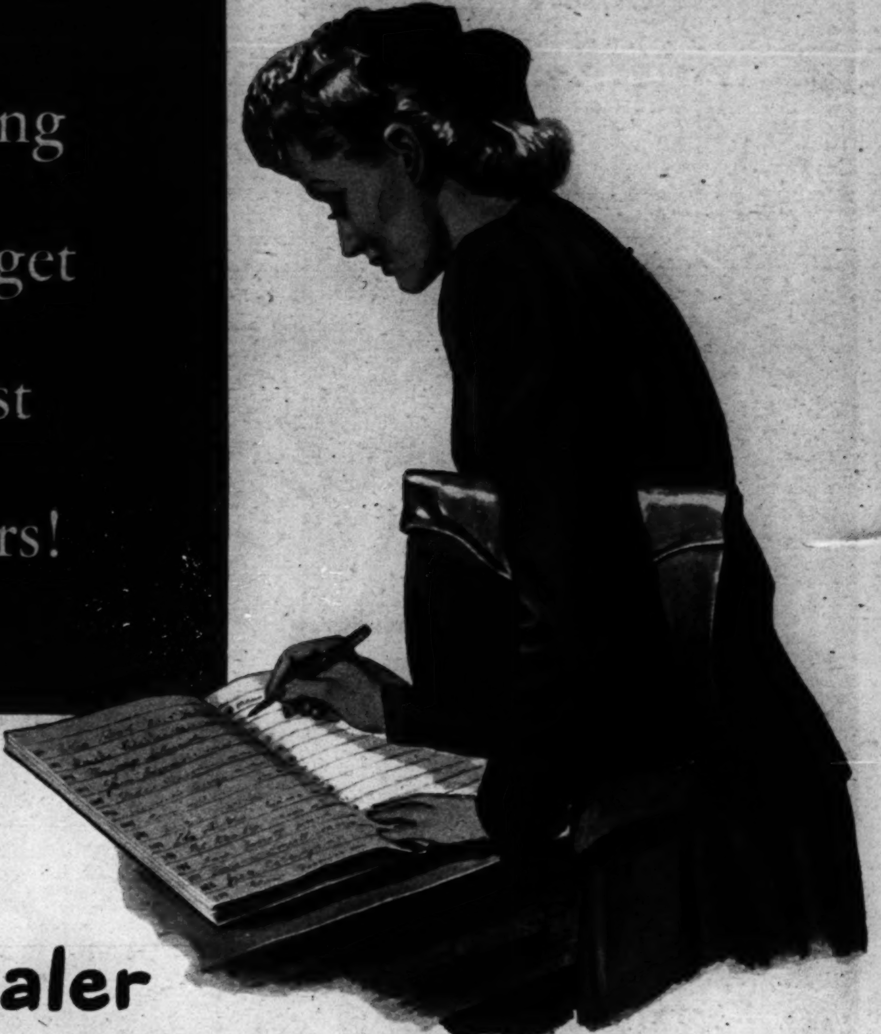
If laundry troubles have got you down . . .



Ask your THOR Dealer to let you sign his Thor Priority Register

{If you don't know his name, write us.}

Still "under wraps" is the sensational THOR Automatic Washer that washes clothes without attention from you—so gently, so thoroughly, so quietly it will amaze you. But you won't believe your eyes when you see it perform miracles that no other washer has ever done before. Watch for later announcements!

This is the great THOR Washer that the Army and Navy sent into "active service" around the world. It will be back in production for home duty when the Government says the word.

Naturally there won't be enough washers for everybody for months after manufacturing starts again.

But there will be a THOR Washer with your name on it if you take this simple step right now:

See your THOR Dealer. Ask to sign his THOR Priority Register for one of the earliest THORS to be released. You pay nothing for this privilege, and you are not obligated to buy later. But when everyone is clamoring for washers, you will be assured of preferred attention, with first call on the grandest washer of them all—a THOR.

* * *

And sign up for a THOR Gladiron, too, for ironing speed and ironing comfort you never dreamed possible. It's rightly called the Thor GLADiron, and you're sure to bless the day it entered your life. Hurry, because there won't be enough Gladirons to go around.

ACY
CHESTER GOULD
YE GODS! WHAT A GHASTLY DEATH. TURN THE MAIN VALVE, WARDEN!
YOU SAY THIS IS THE BODY OF THE MATRON?
YES-YES! I'LL CONFESS EVERYTHING.
YOU SEE WHEN WE DISCOVERED GRAVEL GERTIE WAS GOING TO SQUEAL ON US, THE MATRON DECIDED TO KILL HER BY SHOVING HER INTO THE PUMP MACHINERY.
DURING THE SCUFFLE THE MATRON SLIPPED ON SOME BRASS POLISH THAT HAD BEEN KICKED OVER. SHE DIED INSTEAD OF GRAVEL GERTIE. I GOT PANICKY AND RAN OUT.
AS I WALKED AROUND THE BACK END OF THIS TRUCK WHILE IT WAS STOPPED FOR A LIGHT—MY HAIR CAUGHT ON THE DOOR HANDLE. I HAD TO CLIMB ON.
Say it With FLOWERS
BUT I'VE BEEN RIDING FOR HALF AN HOUR. HE HASN'T STOPPED. I CAN'T HOLD ON MUCH LONGER.
WHY, YES, I LET GRAVEL GERTIE THROUGH THIS OUTER GATE ABOUT AN HOUR AGO. SHE HAD HER RELEASE PAPERS. EVERYTHING WAS IN ORDER.
YES, TECHNICALLY, GERTIE WAS NOT A PRISONER.
WARDEN, THIS CASE WILL NOT BE CLEARED UP TILL WE HAVE FOUND THE SOURCE OF THE DOPE THAT WAS FLOWING INTO THIS PRISON.
UNDOUBTEDLY, GERTIE COULD HAVE HELPED US DO THAT.
HE'S TURNING IN! WE'RE GOING TO STOP!
Say it With FLOWERS
SHALL I PUT THE TRUCK AWAY FOR THE NIGHT, ED?
HUH? WHAT HAVE YOU GOT THERE?
YOU WON'T BE ABLE TO QUESTION THE GUARD ANY FURTHER, MR. TRACY. HE JUST SHOT HIMSELF.
THE DRAWER! MY GUN!
MY NAME'S GRAVEL GERTIE. I'M LOOKING FOR WORK. YOU SEE, WHEN MY HAIR—
A HOT HOUSE.
IN MY GRAVEL-PIT HOME I COULD NEVER RAISE FLOWERS. I LOVE THEM—LOVE THEM! I WAS MEANT TO BE AMONG THEM.
SISTER, WITH THE HELP SHORTAGE THE WAY IT IS—YOU'VE GOT A JOB.

Nice teeth + this "PRESCRIPTION FOR YOUR TEETH!" = A smile packed with Personality!

Why don't you, too, start using Listerine Tooth Paste . . . that cleansing "prescription for your teeth" so many glamour people choose?

See how it helps bring out the sparkling highlights on enamel . . . how naturally it makes it flash . . . how it helps bring out the personality of your smile!

And, most important of all—watch how it gets after and helps clean many of those "pin-point" cavities in enamel . . . the very danger spots where so much ugly decay begins . . . more than 75%, say some authorities.

Such wonderful cleaning is a "plus" value you simply must not overlook. All Tooth Pastes do not have it to equal degree.

LAMBERT PHARMACAL CO., St. Louis, Mo.

Listerine Tooth Paste specially created to get after many of the "PIN POINT" cracks in enamel.

KEEP 'EM SHINING WITH SHINOLA!

Like it or not, shoes don't shine themselves—and once shined, they don't stay that way. Aside from the fact that unshined shoes are a glaring grooming error, the care you give them has a lot to do with the wear you get from them.

Shinola provides a thin, pliable, protective film for your shoes . . . helps hold in and replenish the normal oils . . . helps maintain the flexibility of your shoes. And that means longer wear. It's easy to apply, economical to buy. Remember—a shine is the sign of a healthy shoe. Better keep 'em shining with SHINOLA.

NO MORE DOUGHNUTS

"SAY!" When are we going to get some more doughnuts?" asked the Dunce, who had strolled into the Teenie Weenie kitchen.

The Cook set down the cherry seed jar of spice with which he had been seasoning a stuffed raisin, wiped his hands on his Teenie Weenie apron, and picked up the thimble in which he kept the Teenie Weenie supply of doughnuts. He turned the thimble upside down and glared at the Dunce.

"Thanks to you, it's empty," said the Cook, "and it's going to be empty until I get some fat to fry more. We are nearly out of fat and I can't spare any for frying doughnuts. If you want doughnuts you'll have to find some fat to fry 'em in."

Now the Dunce is especially fond of doughnuts, and he set out at once in search of walnuts, for doughnuts are best when fried in black walnut oil. There had been a poor crop of walnuts last fall and the Dunce soon discovered he could not get walnut oil. For days he hunted thru all the neighborhood looking for peanuts or anything which would supply frying fat. Finally several of the Teenie Weenies found a strip of bacon from which enough fat could be taken to fry all the doughnuts the little people could eat.

They found the bacon late one afternoon quite a distance from the Teenie Weenie village, and so the little men carried it thru the big woods, which was a much shorter way than along the regular road. There was some snow on the ground, but the weather was not cold, and the little chaps sang as they worked.

"Say!" said the Dunce. "I smell skunk."

"Land sakes!" grunted Gogo. "Ole man skunk still snoozin'. He won't come on out of his hole till it's wahm weathah."

"Well, sometimes they do come out before spring when the weather is mild," put in the Cowboy.

"If there is a skunk around here I hope he doesn't smell this bacon," said the Dunce, and as he said it the little men came face to face with a skunk. He stepped out from behind a big rock right in the Teenie Weenies' path.

"RUN FOR YOUR LIVES!" screamed the Dunce.

In times of danger Teenie Weenies can move mighty fast. They simply vanished from the spot. The next morning several of the little men cautiously returned to the place where they had met the skunk, but the bacon was gone and the doughnut thimble is still as empty as Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard.

WHEW! AM I GLAD THAT'S OVER.
FOR A WHILE I FELT LIKE I WAS IN HOT WATER
YES, LUCKY, IF THAT WATCH WASN'T FOUND I KNOW WHO DUDLEY WOULD BLAME.

TRIES TO CORNER VALENTINE MART OF 1823 TO 1860

BY RUTH LOGAN.

The force that makes the world go round and Feb. 14 a red letter date also has made possible one of the most interesting hobbies of Mrs. Birch H. Baker, the collecting of valentines, preferably of a pre-1860 vintage.

Tho the display proves that a valentine is a valentine, whether brought by the messenger or a gallant in great-grandmother's day or dispatched via air mail by a 1945 paratrooper, it also indicates that love notes were fashioned with more attention to detail a century ago.

Things Changed in 1860.

"The industrial revolution must have hit the valentine business around 1860," Mrs. Baker, who lives at 836 Lakeside pl., remarked. "The ones made since then are cheaper and gaudier, practically an assembly line product." Early samples in the group, now numbering 200, are of English make, with hand painted landscapes or bouquets of flowers and a fine lace edging. They are usually a single sheet about 8 by 10 inches.

There are Biblical, historical, and French valentines, and a few comics, included chiefly for the fashions, Mrs. Baker said. The oldest valentine is dated 1823, and consists of four quatrains, probably composed by the writer, written in ink on ruled paper. It is one of two or three in the collection written for a man.

"The Science of Courtship."

Mrs. Baker also owns seven thin volumes called valentine writers, published more than a century ago in England. One is entitled "The Turtle Dove, or Cupid's Artillery Levelled Against Human Hearts." The title page of another, printed in 1808, reads: "The Lover's Guide, or Universal Valentine Writer for the Present Year, containing valentines for many professions and trades and a number of humorous and satirical valentines, the whole forming a complete tutor to the science of courtship."

The hobby stems partly from Mrs. Baker's long experience as an antiques collector and partly from her trips about the country with her husband on business. Among other antiques she buys furniture and Lacy Sandwich glass, of which she has one of the finest collections in the United States.

When Mrs. Baker bought an old book at an auction several years ago and found a small purple and white valentine left in it as a bookmark, her collector's eye was pleased by its dainty handwork. She studied its history and began her hobby.

"Shopkeepers thought I was crazy," she said laughing. "I would enter a shop full of fine old pieces and ask for valentines. But they remembered me and would keep an eye open for anything they thought I'd like. I've paid from 35 cents up to about $20 for a valentine."

Granddad, 71, Comes Off Liberty Ship.

Christmas was celebrated a few weeks late in the Smith home in Milwaukee, Wis., this winter, but every one was too busy to look at the calendar, because three generations of fighting men were home from overseas for the first complete family reunion in three years.

Warrant Officer Robert P. Smith, 71, who has been serving aboard a Liberty ship in the Mediterranean and Atlantic, returned for the first time in more than two years. Three sons and a grandson were at home from war zones, and a fourth son who has served in the merchant marine and the army transport service completed the family group.

Sons from Many Fronts.

The eldest son, Harold, whose home is in Wilmette, is war correspondent for THE TRIBUNE in the Central Pacific. Lt. Howard, an engineering officer in the merchant marine, and Ray E., a merchant marine deck engineer, have been on duty in the Atlantic. Quentin has been employed in a war plant since he returned last summer from sea duty after being wounded twice.

Representing the third generation was Pvt. Ray Jr., 19, who was wounded in action in New Britain last March. He was in a hospital overseas seven months and is now in a military hospital in Tuscaloosa, Ala., for further treatment.

Mrs. Cora Smith, wife of the warrant officer, prepared "Christmas" dinner for 22 persons, including daughters-in-law and grandchildren. There was a reunion Dec. 25 when Howard returned from the Persian gulf, Mrs. Smith said, but her husband was not present and the second gathering was planned for him.

Leaves Retirement at 71.

The 71 year old sailor left retirement early in 1943 when the need for seamen became acute. He shipped on the Great Lakes until the shipping season closed and then signed with the merchant marine as an able bodied seaman, asking for transocean duty.

Smith first went to the sea in 1889 when he shipped as cabin boy on a Great Lakes' cargo boat. After the first World war, during which he served as wheelman on several vessels sailing the lakes, Smith turned to farming and then to carpentry, with only occasional voyages.

The Fighting Smiths Hold Happy Family Reunion

SHOUTS OF TWO BROTHERS RENT HOSPITAL CALM

Pvt. Stenstrom.

Sgt. Stenstrom.

When G. I. brothers meet for the first time in two years, it must strain the nerves of Britishers and Yanks alike. Especially if the brothers are the Stenstrom boys, Bob and Bill, who have called each other by the same nickname since childhood—Smorg, tho it's really Smorg 1 and Smorg 2, Bob being two years older.

"Bill yelled so loudly when he saw me that he frightened the fellows in the ward half to death," Staff Sgt. Robert W. Stenstrom, 23, wrote their mother, Mrs. Grace Stenstrom, 2044 Arthur av. His brother, Pvt. William John, is in a hospital in England recovering from wounds received Oct. 29 for which he has been awarded the Purple Heart.

"Every One Looked."

"I just started into the ward and Bill saw me at the door," Bob continued. "He yelled 'Smorg!' and I shouted the same name back and rushed over to his bed. Everybody turned to look. I stayed at the hospital with him all night."

"When Bill was moved to England he wrote to Bob because he knew his brother was stationed somewhere near. Bob began to look for Bill, and I guess he was lucky to find him so quickly," Mrs. Stenstrom said. "The nicknames? I don't know why they started using them. Maybe both the boys like smorgasbord."

Bob a Gunner.

The brothers have been overseas since last September. Bob, a tail gunner on a Liberator, has completed 26 missions and has received the air medal and cluster. He is a former football player of Lake View High school.

Bill was a basketball star at Amundsen school. He attended Knox college, Galesburg, Ill., before entering service. The fighters have a brother, Richard, 15, and a sister, Mary Lou, 14.

GLENVIEW AIR STATION HOST TO BENNY COMPANY

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Jack Benny and company, who arrived last Tuesday for appearances at hospitals, the Navy pier, and servicemen's centers, will do their broadcast at 6 o'clock tonight over WMAQ-NBC from the Glenview Naval Air station theater. Mary Livingstone, Rochester, Don Wilson, Larry Stevens, and Phil Harris will all be on hand for the show. Immediately after the Benny broadcast Harris will climb aboard the Bandwagon, which follows the Benny show on NBC, joining Dick Powell, the conductor. The Bandwagon show will be presented for the same navy audience.

Larry Stevens.

◆

Another visiting show today is the Hour of Charm, with Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra. They will broadcast from local NBC studios thru WMAQ tonight. The featured performers are Evelyn, violinist; Francine and Katherine, singers; Viola, drums, and the Mack Sisters, singing triplets. Four Stephen Collins Foster selections will be featured. The "Battle Hymn of the Republic" also is scheduled.

Evelyn.

Ed Wynn, who is concluding his 26 week series on the Blue network on Feb. 26, expects to do further broadcasting soon. Meanwhile, he expects to spend several weeks on another tour of service hospitals. Wynn indicated that when he comes back to the air he will abandon his "Bubbles" fantasy and go back to something more nearly like his old "Fire Chief" pattern.

◆

When Bing Crosby altered the format of his radio show at the beginning of this season to make it almost wholly musical there were skeptics. Bing was told that his ratings would start slipping. Instead they began climbing. In the current Hooper rating Bing is in third place, with Bob Hope and Fibber McGee second. Bing is reported slightly upset because of the climb. He has told friends he would never want to have top rating because then he would start worrying about staying there.

Gloria Swanson on W-G-N.

Gloria Swanson will be a guest on the Earl Wilson program over W-G-N-Mutual at 9 o'clock tonight.

W-G-N TO TELL WAR STORY OF REPUBLIC STEEL

The story of Republic Steel corporation's contributions to the war and their problems of obtaining sufficient man power will be told on the second broadcast of America Unlimited over W-G-N at 9 p. m. tomorrow. This series of broadcasts is devoted to showing how Chicagoland can help shorten the war and save lives if the man power needs of the great war plants in this region are met.

A highlight of tonight's broadcast will be "Pistol Pete," a story from the army's files about the kind of a gun the men at the front feel good about. It emphasizes the mighty role of steel in the war and the contributions of Republic Steel toward providing it. Vivid portrayals of electric furnaces in action, and graphic descriptions of manufacturing processes will be included in the broadcast.

Sherman Dryer has written and will produce this program. Robert Trendler has composed an original musical setting and will conduct the orchestra and chorus. The program is presented in coöperation with the army, navy, No. 1 priority war plants, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and W-G-N.

Walt Whitman Essay Topic of Radio Forum

Walt Whitman's essay, "Democratic Vistas," will be discussed on Invitation to Learning over WBBM-CBS at 11 o'clock tonight.

LINCOLN CENTER TO MARK 40TH SERVICE YEAR

Dinner Guests Will Review Work.

BY RAY ELLIS.

Abraham Lincoln center, 700 Oakwood blvd., which is committed to service regardless of race or creed, will celebrate its 40th anniversary with a dinner tomorrow. The six story building, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright and later modified by Dwight Perkins, has been the center's home since its founding. Upwards of 120,000 children and adults annually participate in its activities.

A review of the center's history will be presented for the staff, contributors, and directors. Mrs. Helen Rosenfels, treasurer, will discuss its early history; Mrs. Julia Abrahamson, trustee, will tell of more recent years, and Dr. Curtis W. Reese, dean, will present a summary. Other speakers will include the Rev. Leslie Pennington of the First Unitarian church, Miss Marguerite Sylla of the University of Chicago settlement, and the Rev. Archibald Carey of Woodlawn A. M. E. church.

Will Display Heirloom.

A candleholder belonging to Abraham Lincoln will be exhibited. It was presented to the center in 1909 by the Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, who received it from Dennis Hanks with the assurance that "the first piece that was ever writ by Abe to speak was writ by the light of a candle in this candlestick."

Founded by the late Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, uncle of Frank Lloyd Wright and pastor of the All Souls Unitarian church which was located across the street from the center, the center's original program ran the gamut of service activities with athletics, handicrafts, and dramatics.

Thru the years the program has been modified gradually to avoid overlapping work of similar agencies and to promote the best use of the building. Today emphasis is placed on cultural arts, adult education, child guidance, social service, and similar activities.

Child Care Offered.

For mothers engaged in war work a nursery school for children 2 and 5 and an out-of-school unit for children 6 to 12 is maintained from 7:30 a. m. to 6 p. m. Most other activities begin at 3:40 p. m. after school. Group classes in instrumental and vocal music head the list, with private lessons at a small charge available.

Other arts classes include ballet, tap, and modern dancing, music appreciation, art, dramatics, and a rhythm band. The latest music appreciation class, whose members last fall knew little about music, now has a representation of 20 to 30 at each Saturday night pop concert of the Chicago symphony. From November thru March Sunday afternoon concerts are held once a month at the center.

Many Classes Offered.

Adult education includes beginning and advanced classes in music and art, the Henry George school, a parents' club, Spanish study group, a mother's club, and dancing, dramatic, and discussion groups.

A child guidance clinic with psychiatrist and social worker assists parents and children. Social service and planned parenthood conferences are also available. Every Friday night during fall and winter months a forum is held.

The center maintains a summer camp at Milton Junction, Wis., for boys and girls 6 to 14. The public library has a branch on the first floor of the building where a children's story hour is held every Saturday at 11 a. m. Other activities include two teen age clubs for boys and girls and a puppet club.

Give Monthly Concerts.

Dr. Jones was head resident of the center from its founding until his death in 1918. At that time the church and center were separated. In 1923 Dr. Reese, dean, came to the center.

The center has a staff of 43 persons, colored, white, Jew, and gentile. Mrs. Edna Hansen is in charge of the social service section, which includes the camp, John Greene heads the cultural arts department, and Morris Topchevsky is director of art.

Judge Holly Heads Board.

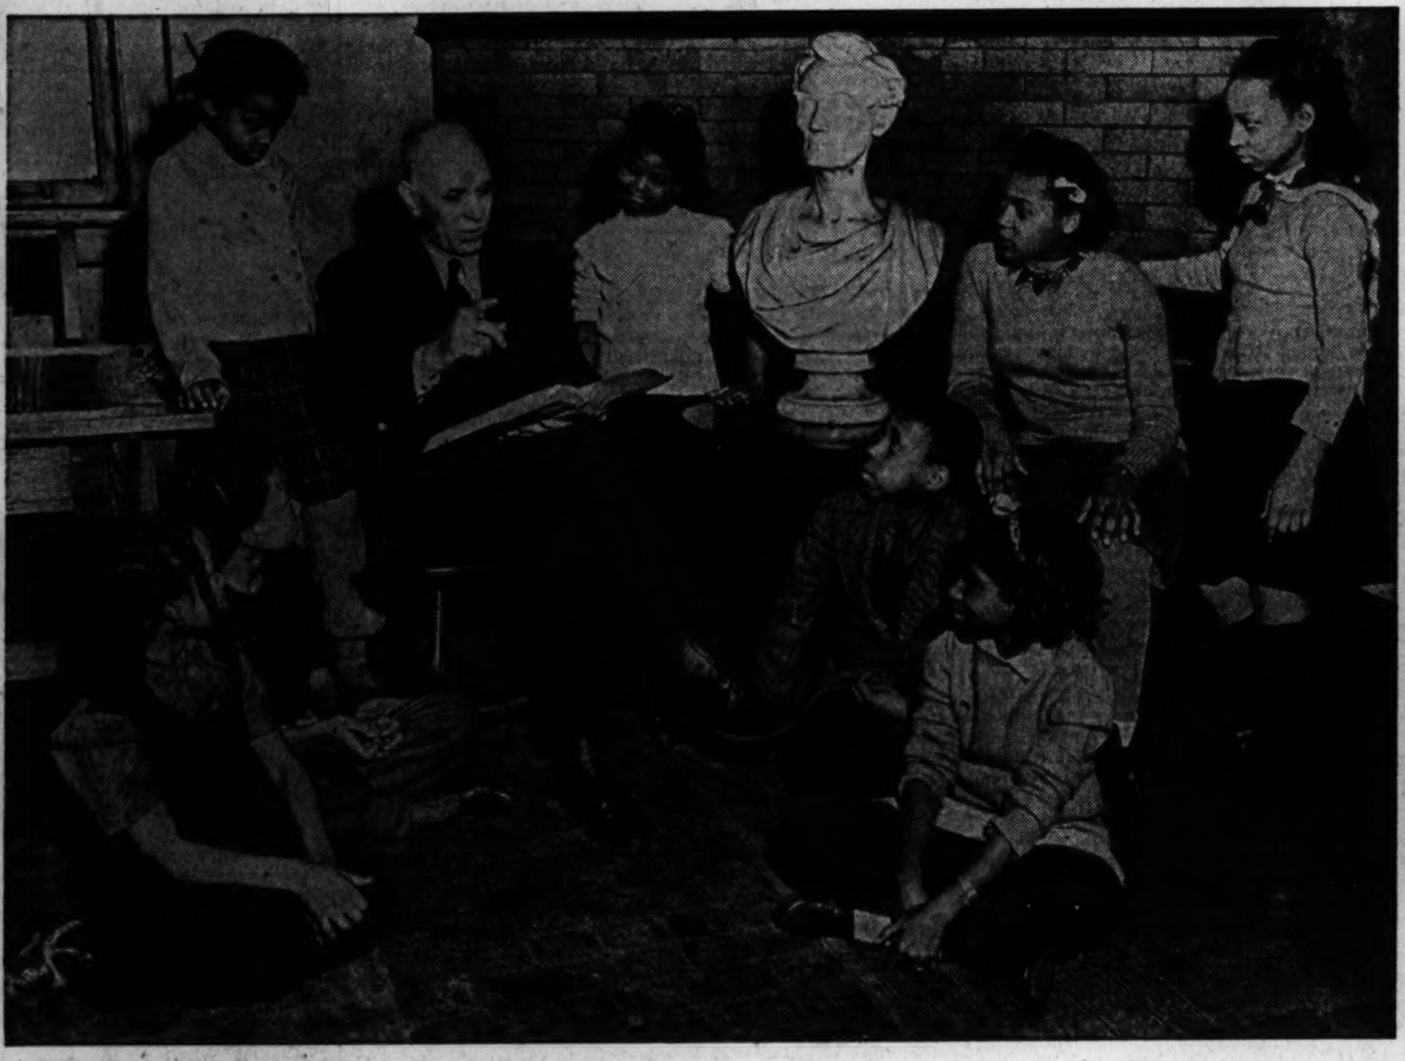
Federal Judge Holly is president of the board of trustees, Mrs. Dorothy Cole is vice president, and Mrs. Meda Z. Steele, secretary. Trustees include Dr. Reese, C. W. Balch, Col. M. O. Bousfield, director of health education for the Rosenwald Fund and now commanding officer of station hospital No. 1 at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Marine Capt. Paul Douglas, formerly of the University of Chicago; Louis Wirth, professor of sociology of the University of Chicago; Mrs. S. O. Levinson, Mrs. E. L. Lobdell, Oswald G. Treadway, Mrs. James Luther Adams, and Mrs. Marian L. Fogelson.

Community Center Board Names L. M. Tolman Head

At the annual directors' meeting of the South Chicago community center, 9135 Brandon av., the following officers were elected: L. M. Tolman, president; the Rev. C. Hubert Stem, vice president; Miss Polly Fisher and the Rev. S. Lawrence Johnson, secretaries, and James A. Black, treasurer. Conrad B. Rheiner, executive director, presented the annual report. The treasurer's report showed a slight deficit. The meeting was attended by members of the advisory committee and staff representatives.

Abraham Lincoln Center Will Celebrate 40th Anniversary Tomorrow



Dedicated to service without regard to race, creed, or color, the Abraham Lincoln center, 700 Oakwood blvd., will celebrate its 40th anniversary tomorrow. Dr. Curtis W. Reese, dean, reads about the Great Emancipator's first election to the Presidency to a group of children, who are a few of several hundred who daily participate in the center's cultural arts program. Foreground seated, left to right, are Barbara Dye and Alice Watkins. Immediately behind are Cornelia Dawkins and Leon Williams, and in the rear are Irene Dawkins, Dr. Reese, Gloria Harris, Mary West, and Wilma Bryson.

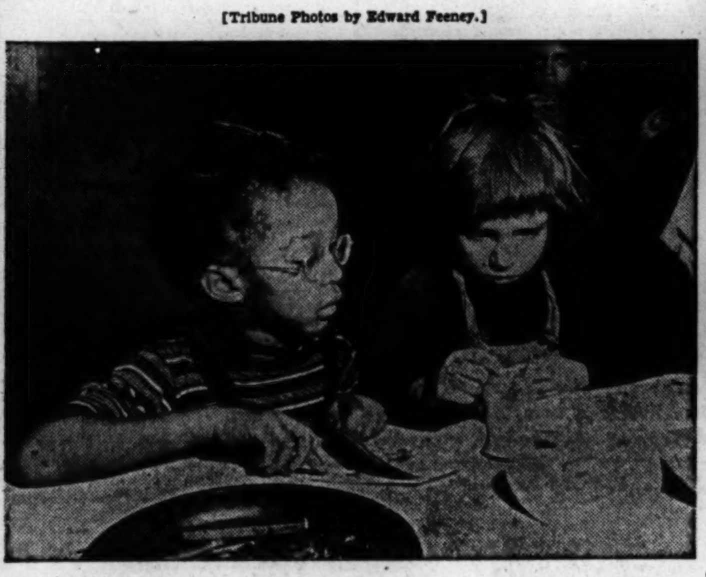
Altho music lessons, both instrumental and vocal, are taught, piano is by far the most popular. Lessons are given either to groups without charge, or privately for a small fee. Mrs. Blanch Smith Walton, instructor, gives a private lesson on one of the center's 18 pianos to Shyrlei Nickerson.



For the benefit of mothers engaged in war work the center maintains a nursery school for children from 2 to 5 years old and an out of school unit for children from 6 to 12 years. Bobby Jean Whitfield, 4 (left), and Marcette Gunn, 5, make valentines while their mothers are away.

GLENVIEW AIR STATION HOST TO BENNY COMPANY

Hour of Charm Will Be Aired in Chicago.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Larry Stevens.

Jack Benny and company, who arrived last Tuesday for appearances at hospitals, the Navy pier, and servicemen's centers, will do their broadcast at 6 o'clock tonight over WMAQ-NBC from the Glenview Naval Air station theater. Mary Livingstone, Rochester, Don Wilson, Larry Stevens, and Phil Harris will all be on hand for the show. Immediately after the Benny broadcast Harris will climb aboard the Bandwagon, which follows the Benny show on NBC, joining Dick Powell, the conductor. The Bandwagon show will be presented for the same navy audience.

◆

Evelyn.

Another visiting show today is the Hour of Charm, with Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra. They will broadcast from local NBC studios thru WMAQ tonight. The featured performers are Evelyn, violinist; Francine and Katherine, singers; Viola, drums, and the Mack Sisters, singing triplets. Four Stephen Collins Foster selections will be featured. The "Battle Hymn of the Republic" also is scheduled.

◆

Ed Wynn, who is concluding his 26 week series on the Blue network on Feb. 26, expects to do further broadcasting soon. Meanwhile, he expects to spend several weeks on another tour of service hospitals. Wynn indicated that when he comes back to the air he will abandon his "Bubbles" fantasy and go back to something more nearly like his old "Fire Chief" pattern.

◆

When Bing Crosby altered the format of his radio show at the beginning of this season to make it almost wholly musical there were skeptics. Bing was told that his ratings would start slipping. Instead they began climbing. In the current Hooper rating Bing is in third place, with Bob Hope and Fibber McGee second. Bing is reported slightly upset because of the climb. He has told friends he would never want to have top rating because then he would start worrying about staying there.

Gloria Swanson on W-G-N.

Gloria Swanson will be a guest on the Earl Wilson program over W-G-N-Mutual at 9 o'clock tonight. Wilson devotes his show to an interview and patter about stage and screen stars.

TELLS OF JOYS IN 40 YEARS OF LAKES CAREER

Walter Greenebaum Is a Boat Enthusiast.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

W. K. Greenebaum.

The Great Lakes have meant much to Walter K. Greenebaum, 5433 Cornell av. For more than four decades he was connected with business ventures whose scenes of activity were the largest bodies of fresh water in the world. Today, he prizes most of all his able seaman's certificate indicating his ability as a mariner for almost 40 years.

Mr. Greenebaum's contact with people has given him a fund of marine experiences, and in his talks before neighborhood clubs he enjoys talking about freight and passenger ships which have plied the inland seas.

He's Lake Enthusiast.

With enthusiasm, Mr. Greenebaum lauds the lakes for the commerce they carry, for the cities that have arisen along their shores, for the health giving qualities their clean ozone provides, for the scenic attractiveness they offer, and for the mineral wealth adjacent to their shore line which is essential to manufacturing and life in the midwestern states.

Mr. Greenebaum tells his audiences that Lake Michigan is responsible for affecting the temperature in Chicago and the close-by suburban area so that this section is about 8 to 10 degrees cooler in summer and several degrees warmer in winter than the weather may be 100 to 200 miles inland.

Within the five lakes and their tributaries there is practically one-half the fresh water in the world. Their shore line is 8,300 miles. Almost three-fourths of the iron ore of the United States is located in the hills adjacent to Lake Superior.

Great Tonnage at Locks.

Thru the Soo locks there passes in eight months of the year more tonnage than goes annually thru the Panama, Suez, Manchester, and Kiel canals combined.

"My interest in the lakes," relates Mr. Greenebaum, "began back in 1896 when I started working during vacations as an office boy for the Lake Michigan and Lake Superior Boat line. There was glamor in watching schooners loaded with lumber as they were towed up the Chicago river while the old swing bridges opened to pass them thru."

Came the days of the steeple compound engines, later the fore and aft compound machinery that gave way to the triple expansion; then the electric driven ships and the Diesel and turbine propelled crafts.

Starts Fruit Line.

In 1898 Mr. Greenebaum started a year around service operating fruit ships between Saugatuck, Douglas, Glen Pier, and Chicago. Later he began to build excursion ships that included the Indianapolis in 1904, the first ship on the Great Lakes to be equipped with wireless. The Theodore Roosevelt, built in 1906, is still in operation.

The steamer, United States, built by Mr. Greenebaum in 1910, boasted a map made of wood from every state in the union. The wood was furnished by governors of the states. The map now adorns a wall of the Michigan City High school.

During World War I. Mr. Greenebaum arranged for 18 lake ships for France. These were taken across the Atlantic and operated on the English channel. His steamer, Indianapolis, was sold in 1906 and went thru the Magellan straights to Seattle, a port which also received his Iroquois and Chippewa.

Reminiscences about the lakes are given in talks by Mr. Greenebaum as agent for the Chicago, Duluth, and Georgian Bay Transit company. He tells of the lakes in their many moods. It is the lighter side of his 40 years as a mariner that he likes to remember. He likes to recall the remark of a little girl he once met on the lake beach:

"O, look!" she exclaimed, pointing to ripples in the water. "I threw a pebble into the lake and it smiled back at me."

SONG SALUTES MacARTHUR ON MANILA VICTORY

John F. Keeley, 4621 Ellis av., assistant to Probate Judge O'Connell, spends his days poring over intricacies of property settlements and kindred matters. But after working hours he writes songs as a hobby. He has scores of 40 songs he has written over a period of several years.

Keeley also is a great admirer of Gen. MacArthur, and with confidence that his song would be timely, jotted down what he thinks is one of his best numbers. It's called "Douglas MacArthur Took Manila" and is a stirring march, full of rich chords, he says.

The words describe "drums a-rolling, trumpets blowing" and the jubilation of the Filipinos at the freeing of their queen city. Ideas for tunes materialize in moments of relaxation, he says, and he picks them out on the piano while they are fresh in his mind. Then he works them up into complete scores.

Keeley is a bachelor who served in World War I. Afterward he studied law at De Paul university and studied singing. He gave up his dreams of becoming a great baritone when he found he could not keep up with both pursuits. He was a charter member of Chicago's famous Paulist choir as a boy soprano and sang with the choir when it won first place in an international competition in Paris.

He is now spending a 21 day furlough at home, after which he will go to the redistribution center at Miami Beach, Fla.

A JAP GRENADE GETS RIFLEMAN 'GOOD AND MAD'

Pvt. Bernard Wisniewski, 8329 Burnham av., who was rescued by a medical aid corpsman from under enemy machine gun fire, recalled recently in Letterman General hospital, San Francisco, Cal., how angry he was when he was wounded by a Jap grenade on Bloody Nose ridge, Peleliu Island.

He had helped knock out two Jap pillboxes and was advancing on a third when the grenade wounded him in the side. "I was good and mad because I had been put out of action," said Pvt. Wisniewski, a Browning automatic rifleman. The medic crawled to him, patched him up, and dragged him to safety as bullets whizzed overhead.

He and his outfit had participated in the mopping up of Anguar before proceeding to Peleliu. Pvt. Wisniewski, whose wife, Eleanor, lives at the Burnam av. address, holds the Purple Heart and combat infantryman badge. He entered service in June, 1942.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 12.

Indoor garden activities are becoming much more intensive as the season advances. Seeds sown last month will have germinated and developed sufficiently to need transplanting into flats or other containers.

Tuesday, Feb. 13.

Plant nut trees in sections where they will respond to soil and climatic conditions. There are fine varieties of walnuts that will succeed in the rich soil of the middle west. The paper shell pecans do well only when hardy northern varieties, such as the major, posey, Indiana, and Green River, are planted. It is best to plant more than one variety to insure cross-pollination.

Wednesday, Feb. 14.

If the shrimp plant has grown large and the stems leggy, cut them back this spring and use the material for cuttings to obtain new plants. Cuttings root easily in sandy soil or sand. This is a good house plants, requires full sun, plenty of water, and is comparatively free from insect attacks.

Thursday, Feb. 15.

To supplement the vegetable crops, plant strawberries for home consumption. They are easily grown. Any well drained soil that is retentive of moisture will be sufficient. Commercial fertilizer incorporated in the soil before planting will keep the plants growing rapidly.

Friday, Feb. 16.

When succession crops are mentioned it means that when a crop is off the ground another crop that can have time to mature should occupy the vacancy. This is important, for it means that every foot of ground will be occupied at all times so that the small area will show a heavy crop.

Saturday, Feb. 17.

Make arrangements to obtain topdressing materials for use on the lawn just as soon as growth starts. Screened topsoil to which is added decayed manure, leafmold, or peatmoss forms the basis for the topdressing.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

TWELVE CADETS ARE PRESENTED TRIBUNE MEDALS

MEMO TO WAR GARDENERS: IT'S TIME TO PLAN

OCD, Park Advisers Already Busy.

Despite harrying winter winds, many west side residents already are making plans for their spring war gardens. With point rationing of canned vegetables restored, hundreds of new requests for garden space have been received by the war garden department of the OCD, Frank K. Balthis, west side war garden chairman, announced.

Working in coöperation with the park district, the garden department is prepared to assist prospective gardeners by furnishing helpful literature, and by plowing suitable garden space for them.

Plots Must Qualify.

Leaders of groups within the city who wish plowing done should make certain that their project qualifies for this free service. The following requisites have been set up by the garden department and the park district:

No project can be plowed unless at least four families are coöperating. Also, written permission of the owner must be secured in advance of the plowing.

If garden space was used last year, it cannot be plowed again this year due to limited man power.

Size of Plot Given.

Ground must be reasonably level, free from holes, stones, glass, or other objects that would cut or ruin the tires of the tractors. Tall weeds and other rubbish must be removed. Also, the plot must be at least 75 by 100 feet.

West siders who are eager to begin their gardening as soon as the frost is out of the ground should make arrangements with their local war garden chairman as early as possible, Chairman Balthis said.

If space is not available in any given locality, garden advisers will assist in obtaining areas in near-by communities accessible by street car, elevated, or bus lines.

List Garden Chairmen.

Community war garden chairmen in west side areas are: Mrs. W. F. Conlon, 1938 Adams st., Near West side; Joseph de Fallo, 715 S. Miller st., Central West side; Philip L. Culbertson, 2233 S. Bell av., Lower West side; Mrs. Marie Melberg, 4126 24th pl., South Lawndale; Mrs. Ethel Butterfield, 614 N. Drake av., West Town; Michael C. Sullivan, 3945 Polk st., West Garfield; E. F. Downey, 5360 Washington blvd., South Austin; Frank L. Bennett, 5438 Ferdinand st., Central Austin, and Charles Glaser, 5352 Iowa st., North Austin.

Mrs. W. R. Stephens, 236 Wesley av., Oak Park, is war garden chairman for division 11 and Michael F. Lies, Wheaton, is chairman of division 12.

WEST SIDE GIRL SCOUTS TO AID FINANCE DRIVE

West side Girl Scouts will participate in a city-wide finance campaign which opens tomorrow with a goal of $40,000. The 1945 budget is based upon the needs of a metropolitan membership of 15,000 girls.

The financial needs of the organization are met partially by the Community Fund, income from the Girl Scout shop, and an annual cookie sale, but the remainder must be raised by contributions.

Frank M. Kraman, La Grange, is chairman of the central district. Mrs. Violet Lewis, 3037 Washington blvd. is vice chairman. Members of their advisory council include Rabbi Samuel Schwartz of the Washington blvd. temple; the Rev. Frederick Stamm of the First Congregational church; and the Rev. John F. Henry, S. J.

William Kriz, Chicago figure skating champion and former member of the Sonja Henie ice troupe, will perform as a special attraction on the All-Berwyn Ice Derby program to be held this afternoon at 28th st. and East av., Berwyn. Kriz also will lead a group of his proteges from the Berwyn Ice Skating club thru several numbers.

Harold Collier, director of recreation in Berwyn, is in charge of ice Derby plans. Members of the committee include Mayor Fred J. Mraz; Clare Vynalek, Berwyn business man and former top notch skater in A. A. U. competition; Ed Stundl, another business man who was an outstanding skater in the Silver Skates meet a few years ago; Frank Terdina, Otto Johnske, Frank Duda, Robert Slater, and Edward Fortner of the Berwyn playground and recreation commission; Warren E. Scaman, announcer; William Vojta, Emil Dulla, and Norm Ziebell, Morton High school athletic director.

Cites Last Year's Records.

The Berwyn playground and recreation commission which is sponsoring the ice Derby recently issued its annual report showing that there were 36,200 participants in events held by the commission last year and that there was an attendance at the events of 102,800.

Director Collier in his survey pointed out that, while Berwyn's recreational facilities are not comparable to those of some other communities in the state, the program compares favorably. Mr. Collier added:

"Rental of the premises at 6450 W. Cermak rd. for a temporary recreation center has been a helpful move and has shown our people the need for such a community meeting place, particularly for the young folk. Perhaps the day is not too far hence when Berwyn will be able to build its own central community house.

Other Advantages Listed.

"Despite the fact that we are not located near natural facilities for swimming, boating, and fishing, we have the advantages of being close to such places of interest as the Brookfield zoo, the Planetarium, and the Art institute. Berwyn is in dire need of a lighted field for softball during the summer months and for ice skating in the winter. Plans are now under consideration for the installation of arc lights at 28th st. and East av.

"Berwyn needs a community gymnasium to increase its indoor athletic program, particularly since the cost of rental for school gymnasiums was too high to permit reorganization of the boys' basketball leagues for the 1944-'45 season."

CHURCHES OPEN 4TH WAR LENT ON WEDNESDAY

See Larger Throngs at Devotions.

Marking the beginning of the fourth war time Lenten season, members of west side churches will observe Ash Wednesday with more than usual devotion, according to pastors in the area. Increased attendance is expected. War time has brought added significance to the traditional Lenten admonition, "Remember man that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shalt return," which in many churches accompanies the distribution of ashes.

Thousands of communicants of Episcopal churches will observe the first day of Lent by attending the early service of holy communion. In keeping with the church's suggestion that Lent this year be observed with greater than usual devotion, the churches have scheduled additional midweek services for prayer and study.

Plan Children's Service.

The Rev. H. Theodore Reis will be the preacher at the evening service, scheduled for 8 p. m. Ash Wednesday at the Church of the Epiphany, 201 S. Ashland blvd. Other services will be held at 7 and 8 a. m., and at 12:10 p. m. There will be a children's service in the chapel at 3 p. m.

At the Friday evening services at Epiphany church during Lent the following will be the guest preachers: The Rev. Walter S. Pond, the Rev. Daniel C. Hinton, the Very Rev. Dudley Stark, the Very Rev. Samuel W. Vose, and the Rev. Joseph F. Higgins. The Rev. Canon David E. Gibson is priest in charge of the Church of the Epiphany and the Cathedral shelter.

Dr. Harold Holt, rector, will use "Down Peacock Feathers" by D. R. Davies as the basis of Lenten study classes at 8 p. m. every Wednesday at Grace church, Oak Park. The children's mission will be at 4 p. m. every Wednesday, and the women's auxiliary study class at 11 a. m., Tuesdays, with Mrs. J. B. Johnson as leader. The services on Ash Wednesday will be at 7:15 and 10 a. m., and at 8 p. m.

Classes at Glen Ellyn.

An inquirer's class will be conducted at 7:45 p. m. every Tuesday during Lent by the Rev. Gowan C. Williams, rector, in St. Mark's church, Glen Ellyn. Dean Williams' Sunday sermon topics will be on the theme, "Knowing God." Ash Wednesday services will be held at 7 and 10 a. m., and at 7:45 p. m.

At Holy Family church, 1080 W. Roosevelt rd., one of the oldest Catholic parishes on the west side, ashes will be blessed Wednesday morning before the 8:30 mass and distributed at its conclusion. They will also be distributed after the noon mass and after the 7:30 p. m. services.

The evening services at Holy Family church will consist of the rosary, stations, a Lenten talk by the Rev. Charles Rust, S. J., and benediction. A noon mass will be celebrated every day during Lent at the church.

Services at St. Adalbert's.

Ash Wednesday observances will begin at St. Aadalbert's church, 1650 W. 17th st., with the blessing of ashes before the 8 o'clock mass. At 7:15 p. m. the Tre Ore, a three hour service, will be held. The ceremonies will consist of prayers, a sermon, and benediction. The congregation will join in the singing of hymns during the services. Distribution of ashes will conclude the ceremonies.

At St. Charles Borromeo church, 2060 Roosevelt rd., ashes will be distributed after the 8 a. m. mass, at 3 p. m., and after the 8 p. m. services. The evening Ash Wednesday ceremonies will consist of the rosary, a sermon by the pastor, the Rev. J. A. McMahon, and benediction. Thruout Lent services will be held at 8 p. m. on Tuesdays.

Lutherans Plan Service.

At Christ Lutheran church, 1501 N. Long av., evening communion services will be held at 8 p. m. on Ash Wednesday. The Rev. Warner H. Grothman, pastor, will deliver the sermon. Liturgical music will be furnished by the senior choir under the direction of Erwin Laus.

A portion of the history of the Passion of Christ will be the theme of the Ash Wednesday services to be held at 7 and 8 p. m. at Grace Lutheran church, 2751 S. Karlov av. The Rev. G. G. Elbert, pastor, will speak on "The Suffering Savior as Prophet." The women's choir, directed by Daniel Toenies, will furnish Lenten music.

"God's Ways Are Always Right" has been chosen as the motto for the observance of Lent at St. John's Lutheran church, Circle av., one block north of Madison st., Forest Park. The Rev. Alvin Wagner will be the preacher.

Plan Midweek Rites.

A special series of midweek evangelistic services will be initiated as follows: Ash Wednesday, "The Outdoor Trial of Jesus"; Feb. 21, "The Double Warning to Pilate"; Feb. 28, "The Strange Fortunes of Barabbas"; March 7, "The Sarcastic Superscription on the Cross"; March 14, "The Timely Ministry of Joseph"; March 21, "The Hostile Watch of the Tomb."

At the 10:30 o'clock service this morning at St. John's the speaker will be the Rev. O. H. Schmidt, executive secretary of foreign missions of the Lutheran church, who recently returned from a survey of the foreign field.

"The Truth About 'The More Abundant Life'" will be the topic at 7:30 o'clock tonight at a Christian Liberty service.

GLENVIEW AIR STATION HOST TO BENNY COMPANY

Hour of Charm Will Be Aired in Chicago.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Larry Stevens.

Jack Benny and company, who arrived last Tuesday for appearances at hospitals, the Navy pier, and servicemen's centers, will do their broadcast at 6 o'clock tonight over WMAQ-NBC from the Glenview Naval Air station theater. Mary Livingstone, Rochester, Don Wilson, Larry Stevens, and Phil Harris will all be on hand for the show. Immediately after the Benny broadcast Harris will climb aboard the Bandwagon, which follows the Benny show on NBC, joining Dick Powell, the conductor. The Bandwagon show will be presented for the same navy audience.

Evelyn.

Another visiting show today is the Hour of Charm, with Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra. They will broadcast from local NBC studios thru WMAQ tonight. The featured performers are Evelyn, violinist; Francine and Katherine, singers; Viola, drums, and the Mack Sisters, singing triplets. Four Stephen Collins Foster selections will be featured. The "Battle Hymn of the Republic" also is scheduled.

Ed Wynn, who is concluding his 26 week series on the Blue network on Feb. 26, expects to do further broadcasting soon. Meanwhile, he expects to spend several weeks on another tour of service hospitals. Wynn indicated that when he comes back to the air he will abandon his "Bubbles" fantasy and go back to something more nearly like his old "Fire Chief" pattern.

When Bing Crosby altered the format of his radio show at the beginning of this season to make it almost wholly musical there were skeptics. Bing was told that his ratings would start slipping. Instead they began climbing. In the current Hooper rating Bing is in third place, with Bob Hope and Fibber McGee second. Bing is reported slightly upset because of the climb. He has told friends he would never want to have top rating because then he would start worrying about staying there.

Valentines

W-G-N TO TELL WAR STORY OF REPUBLIC STEEL

The story of Republic Steel corporation's contributions to the war and their problems of obtaining sufficient man power will be told on the second broadcast of America Unlimited over W-G-N at 9 p. m. tomorrow. This series of broadcasts is devoted to showing how Chicagoland can help shorten the war and save lives if the man power needs of the great war plants in this region are met.

A highlight of tonight's broadcast will be "Pistol Pete," a story from the army's files about the kind of a gun the men at the front feel good about. It emphasizes the mighty role of steel in the war and the contributions of Republic Steel toward providing it. Vivid portrayals of electric furnaces in action, and graphic descriptions of manufacturing processes will be included in the broadcast.

Sherman Dryer has written and will produce this program. Robert Trendler has composed an original musical setting and will conduct the orchestra and chorus. The program is presented in coöperation with the army, navy, No. 1 priority war plants, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and W-G-N.

"Desert Song" Is Next on W-G-N Air Theater

Sigmund Romberg's familiar "Desert Song" will be presented on the Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and Mutual at 9 p. m. next Saturday from Medinah Temple auditorium before an audience of 4,500 persons. Marion Claire will sing the starring part of Margot; Bruce Foote, the Red Shadow, and Earl Wilkie, Ali. The W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus will be directed by Henry Weber.

Dorothy Lamour Is Guest.

When the Bergen-McCarthy show, with Don Ameche as master of ceremonies, is aired from the army air base at March field, Cal., Dorothy Lamour will be a guest.

OAK PARK LASS SKIPS TO STAGE AND FILM FAME

Comes Home to Play in 'Glass Menagerie.'

BY AGNES LYNCH.

Not so many years ago Julie Haydon was a fair haired younster skipping along Euclid on her way to kindergarten classes in Oak Park. This season, as one of Broadway's most promising young actresses, she has come back to her native city to play one of the leading roles in "The Glass Menagerine," and she loves it.

Julie Haydon.

"Chicago audiences are so quick and responsive," she says, "that it would give ony one a lift to play for them."

Took Name in Movies.

During her Oak Park days, however, the theater was the thing forthest removed from her thoughts. Her classmates remember her as Donella Donaldson. When she went to Hollywood she adopted Julie Haydon as her professional name.

A serious minded youngster, she liked to figure things out for herself without asking unnecessary questions. A problem she used to ponder concerned the man next door whose name was Storm. Julie, with a child's literal interpretation of words, assumed that he had charge of all the storms.

Father an Editor.

Julie feels that she was ushered into the world somewhat under literary auspices, since the family doctor, who officiated at the event, was Dr. Clarence Hemingway, father of the novelist, Ernest Hemingway.

Julie's father, Orren Donaldson, was well known in Oak Park as the founder and first editor of the suburban newspaper, Oak Leaves. One of the most discriminating things her father did as editor, Julie says, was to give Charlie MacArthur, the playwright and husband of Helen Hayes, his first job as a reporter.

Father's Friend Helps.

She was rewarded richly for that in Hollywood, she says, when she was being tested for the lead in "The Scoundrel." She hardly dared hope she would get the part. But one day on the set MacArthur came up to her and asked her what her real name was. She told him Donella Donaldson.

"I thought you looked like Orren Donaldson's little girl," he said. "Your father let me work for him, so now you can work for me."

Moves to California.

When Julie was 7 her mother's frail health necessitated a move to a warmer climate. Her father sold his paper, and the family went to live in California. Julie was 12 when she saw her first play, and from that time was fascinated by the theater. The acting bug really bit her at 15, however, when she took the part of one of the ugly sisters in a high school production of "Cinderella."

From that time on her sole ambition was to be an actress. She put herself thru dramatic school by working during the day to defray expenses of night classes.

Breaks with Hollywood.

The legitimate stage was her real ambition, however, and a few years ago she decided to make a clean break with Hollywood.

"It took a lot of courage," she says, "but I've never regretted it."

With three friends, who were also ambitious to crash Broadway, she set out on the cross-country trip in her Ford. "We were all expecting to starve in New York for a while," she says, "so we made the trip as economically as possible. We cut down on our food bills by eating a lot of fruit and not much else. When we got to New York and figured out our expenses, we found that the trip had cost us just $13 apiece,"

Barry Gives Her Break.

For a time Broadway turned a Philip Barry, the playwright, who had seen her in "The Scoundrel," recommended her for the leading role in "Bright Star." Afterward came "Shadow and Substance," with Cedric Hardwicke, in which she won wide fame in the role of Bridgid.

Since that time she has appeared in a number of successful plays, one of the most outstanding being William Saroyan's Pulitzer prize drama, "Time of Your Life."

Advises Stage Struck.

Julie's ambition is to continue in vehicles like "The Glass Menagerie," which she finds satisfying deaf ear to her aspirations. Then because it is "so beautifully written."

Her advice to any one who wants to go on the stage is, "Follow your heart—and go ahead." There are bound to be heartaches and disappointments on the way, she says, but she herself would feel cheated if she hadn't gone thru such a period. She feels that having to cope with hardship adds to one's stature as a person, and gives one a depth of understanding that is necessary for creative work of any kind.

Tells of Wedding

Mrs. Edmund Gratkowski.
[Nemecek Photo.]

Mrs. Louis Duller, 2241 S. Wolcott av., has announced the marriage of her daughter, Antoinette Marie, to Edmund Gratkowski, formerly of 2532 S. Harvey av., Berwyn. The couple, married at St. Stephen's church, is residing with Mrs. Duller at the Wolcott av. address.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 12.

Indoor garden activities are becoming much more intensive as the season advances. Seeds sown last month will have germinated and developed sufficiently to need transplanting into flats or other containers.

Tuesday, Feb. 13.

Plant nut trees in sections where they will respond to soil and climatic conditions. There are fine varieties of walnuts that will succeed in the rich soil of the middle west. The paper shell pecans do well only when hardy northern varieties, such as the major, posey, Indiana, and Green River, are planted. It is best to plant more than one variety to insure cross-pollination.

Wednesday, Feb. 14.

If the shrimp plant has grown large and the stems leggy, cut them back this spring and use the material for cuttings to obtain new plants. Cuttings root easily in sandy soil or sand. This is a good house plants, requires full sun, plenty of water, and is comparatively free from insect attacks.

Thursday, Feb. 15.

To supplement the vegetable crops, plant strawberries for home consumption. They are easily grown. Any well drained soil that is retentive of moisture will be sufficient. Commercial fertilizer incorporated in the soil before planting will keep the plants growing rapidly.

Friday, Feb. 16.

When succession crops are mentioned it means that when a crop is off the ground another crop that can have time to mature should occupy the vacancy. This is important, for it means that every foot of ground will be occupied at all times so that the small area will show a heavy crop.

Saturday, Feb. 17.

Make arrangements to obtain top-dressing materials for use on the lawn just as soon as growth starts. Screened topsoil to which is added decayed manure, leafmold, or peatmoss forms the basis for the top-dressing.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

DANCE FESTIVAL IN OAK PARK TO BE HELD FRIDAY

Nearly 500 boys and girls, ranging in age from 2 to 18, will participate in the annual dance festival of the Oak Park playgrounds at 8 p. m. Friday in the Oak Park High school auditorium.

The performance, "The Emperor's Newest Clothes," was written and will be directed by Miss Josephine Blackstock, director of playgrounds. It is an adaptation in dramatic form of the Hans Christian Andersen fairy tale of the same name.

Five Playgrounds to Take Part.

The five coöperating playgrounds are Robert Louis Stevenson, Hans Christian Andersen, Eugene Field, James Barrie, and Lewis Carroll.

The story is about a vain emperor and his courtiers who are swindled by a pair of scheming weavers. The charlatans pretend to weavé a wonderful material which will remain invisible to fools or to persons unfit for office. Since no one is willing to admit that he belongs in either category, the swindlers are able to carry out their ruse until a child's candid comments prick the bubble of their subterfuge.

List Cast of Players.

Lou Sauer, a member of the Stevenson Players, will enact the role of emperor. Other leading roles will be played by Bill Laughlin, Patsy Howe, Eleanor McGee, Richard Christiansen, Jack James, Joan Desmond, Frederick Weiser, Kay Desmond, Janet Lindblad, Warren Buckmaster, Wallace Schauer, Robert Hoberg, Diane Gilmore, Roberta Sullivan.

Also Barbara Wilcox, Gwendolyn Manning, Bob James, Janet Cobain, James Piotter, Wayne Swanson, Marilyn Kerns, Marjorie Wellington, Marie Watts, Alice Ross, Marianne Weber, Lois and Carol Frase, Penny Panzenhagen, Verna Sandberg, Nancy Buckmaster, Marcia Neal, Norman De Young, Wallace Schauer, Gwetholyn Baker, and Lejeune Conley.

Production Aids Named.

Working with Miss Blackstock in producing the play are Miss Lilly Ruth Hanson, dramatic director, and Mrs. Lane Johnston, Miss Dorothy Fuhlage, Mrs. Harold Van Every, and Miss Bertha Malapanis, dance directors.

Miss Anne Peterson will furnish musical accompaniment for the production. Costumes were designed by Bernice Desmond. Dr. Theodore M. Nelson, chairman of the Oak Park playground board, will be host at the Friday festival.

Beth-El Sisters.

The Beth-El sisterhood will meet at 1 p. m. Tuesday in Beth-El temple, 3230 Palmer st. Mrs. Milton Vogel is president, and Mrs. George Rieger is program chairman.

PROPOSED YOUTH CENTER WILL BE NAMED BIG TOP

SCULPTOR GAINS SUCCESS USING DENTISTS' TOOLS

"Sculpturing Is Fun" will be the subject of an informal talk and demonstration by Hye Zussman, professionally known as Clyde Ruskin, at 8:15 p. m. Thursday at the Legler library, 115 S. Pulaski rd. His talk will initiate a series of hobby meetings which will be held at the library thruout the spring.

Ruskin, whose studio is at 3151 Roosevelt rd., became an artist by a rather circuitous route. Despite the fact that he has been interested in art as long as he can remember, and in his school days won various scholarships in art, he was unable to give time to his chosen profession until recently. He was too busy earning a living.

Has Hands of Sculptor.

Some years ago he was told by an artist that he had the hands of a sculptor, but as he had never gone into this field, he did not take the words seriously. His initial attempt at sculpturing was a pair of figurines, an old man and woman, which he made at the request of a friend.

His success with his initial effort surprised even himself. In two and a half years he developed his hobby into a career. In his Roosevelt rd. studio he models book ends and a wide variety of figurines, which have made a commercial as well as an artistic success.

So Do Dentists!

For tools Ruskin may use kitchen knives, toothpicks, or converted dental instruments. What he has lacked in formal education in art, he has made up in experience. He was born in Minnesota and lived there until he reached teen-age, but during the last 13 years he has resided in Chicago. He has traveled thruout the United States and has worked at various jobs such as bus boy, waiter, motorcycle rider, parachute jumper, and traveling salesman.

His works will be on display in the Legler library Wednesday, Feb. 28. They may be seen daily from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Whiler Mothers.

Th Mothers' club of Whiler Pre-kindergarten school will meet at 8 p. m. Friday at the Austin town hall, 5610 Lake st.

Scout officials of the Berwyn-Stickney district will meet at 10 a. m., Tuesday, at the Berwyn city hall for a civic day program.

COMMONS FAIR MAKES ANNUAL BOW TUESDAY

Benefit to Be Staged on Grand Av.

Chicago Commons' annual fair, which will start at 7:15 p. m. Tuesday at 955 Grand av., promises to be a gala event, according to Miss Lea D. Taylor, head resident. Many attractions have been planned by various groups at the house to entertain the 900 or more who usually attend.

Miss Lea Taylor.

The one benefit event of the year, proceeds from the fair will go toward making the Commons a second home to youngsters in the neighborhood—a second home where groups meet for discussions, where children and adults learn the crafts, and where a score of activities keep the young folks off the streets.

Will Show Movies.

Movies will be shown by the adult education department, and guests will be invited to test their skill at competitive games in the woman's clubroom or to view basketball games in the gymnasium. Glenford Lawrence, Casey Tristano, and Dominic Di Matteo, staff members, are in charge of these activities.

There will be dancing in the auditorium starting at 8:30 p. m. Swing music, waltzes, and square dancing are on the schedule with John Dolce as caller. Dance chairmen include Frances Amadei, Georgana Braglia, Eleanor Cozzo, Rachel Gentile, Julia Leone, Lillian Marchione, and Annie Meglio. Mrs. Marion Barkwell and Miss Helen Irwin, also of the Commons staff, will assist the Friday Night club in serving punch.

Hundreds of Rosettes.

The day before the fair nursery mothers will bake hundreds of rosettas for which the fair is becoming famous. These will be served with coffee by the Chicago Commons Mothers' club. Assisted by the Full of Fun group, the mothers will hold a koffee klache in the neighborhood parlor. Mrs. Mary Albergo, 2258 Erie st.; Mrs. Rose Rano, 820 Ohio st.; and Mrs. Irene Merino, 1307 N. Greenview av., are chairmen.

Visitors may be sketched by Miss Juliette Maggio, Mrs. Elsa Englander, and Miss Mary Stone if they choose. This project is sponsored by the A's and O's club, whose members include Mrs. Ethel Griseto, Mrs. Rose Guarini, Miss Grace and Miss Mayme La Rocca, Mrs. Grace Maggio, Miss Margaret Page, and Mrs. Della Savalio.

"Streets of Grand Avenue."

A bazar, the Streets of Grand Avenue, will occupy a prominent place with various articles, some handmade, for sale. In charge will be the chairmen of the white elephant division, Mrs. Florence Motto, 1411 Grand av., and Mrs. Collette Falone, 1318 Grand av. Women on the committee include Mrs. Anna Addante, Mrs. Margaret Bavaro, Mrs. Marie Rivo, and Mrs. Mildred Uhl.

Mrs. Thaddeus Niemiec, 5357 Agatite av., and former members of her Girl Scout troops will take charge of candy booths. Mrs. Clara Cassettarri Azzaro and Miss Catherine Mercurio are in charge of tickets.

Climax of the evening will be an auction. Merchandise left from the bazar will augment items which have been donated especially for the auction.

Even Fashions in Valentines Reflect the So-Called March of Progress

Part of the old valentine collection owned by Mrs. Ethel Janssen, 4218 N. Pulaski rd., top left, is a blue satin job, trimmed with blue and pink cord and delicate pink flowers. Next to it, a valentine of the "short snorter" type popular in 1897 sends the recipient various messages such as "Love's Sincere Token" and "Sincere and Best Wishes." Holding it together is light blue ribbon. The greeting shaped like a three leaf clover and dated 1893 is a series of blotters. A fan shaped shell is fastened on a light blue cover with yellow daisy painted on it. The small greeting at bottom right was received by Mrs. Janssen when she was 8 years old.

My Valentine, I greet thee.

Altar and Rosary.

The Altar and Rosary society of St. Philomena church will hold a party at 8 p. m. today in the school hall, Cortland st. and Kedvale av.

Mrs. Janssen, admittedly sentimental, says she enjoys looking over her collection anew each year. She has some 75, most of which she received as a girl from her beaux. One of her favorites is this elaborate three dimensional "symphony in paper." The verse is as sentimental as the decorations.

VALENTINES RING BELLE'S HEART WITH MEMORIES

Modern Cards Wring Out Shudders.

BY JANET PECK.

"Valentines don't come from the heart like they used to," regretfully sighed Mrs. Ethel Janssen, 4218 N. Pulaski rd. "There seems to have been a change in sentiment."

But the casual and sophisticated modern might add, "and perhaps it's just as well." Especially after receiving a lavishly laced three dimensional affair which reads:

> There may be other smiles as sweet
> And other eyes that brightly shine;
> But none for me can ever be
> So bright, so sweet, so dear as thine.

Had 16 Boy Friends.

Judging from Mrs. Janssen's collection of some 75 valentines, most of which were received as a girl from various beaux, she must have been a belle who rang the chords of many a swain's heart. One year she recalls receiving valentines from 16 boy friends. Altho now 68 years old she remembers vividly that particular Valentine's day . . . and what girl wouldn't with a score like that.

One dainty white satin affair she has saved thru the years reads:

> The little white moth fluttered in with the love you had sent;
> My heart in that minute could tell just the words you had meant.
> I knew we were so far apart, I was tired and sad,
> But the little white moth brought me your love and then I was glad.

All this, to the accompaniment of "little white moths" embossed in gold!

Give and Run Type.

Admittedly sentimental, Mrs. Janssen confesses saving the first valentine given her. "I was 8 years old," she recalled, "and a little boy shoved it in my hand and darted away." Oddly enough the valentine shows a little boy doing just that.

Forehead wrinkled, Mrs. Janssen tried to recall who gave her a simple and sincere card with a message relative to its forget-me-not decorations. "From the date on the back I must have been 10 years old, but by now I've forgotten who it was I wasn't to forget," she said.

Or a Diamond Ring.

"When I was a girl, we hung our more decorative valentines on our dressers," she said. "Like this one . . ." She pointed to a large card trimmed in pink satin ribbon, cupids, butterflies, and white organdy. In golden letters it modestly states that it is "Love's Token."

Mrs. Janssen's collection is currently on exhibit at the Hild branch library where, according to Miss Helen Zetterburg, secretary of the Ravenswood-Lakeview historical association, modern youth shows a satisfying, but slightly supercilious, interest in it.

CORPORAL COMPOSES FOUR SONGS AFTER A YEAR IN SOUTH SEAS

More than a year in the South Seas has inspired Corp. James Moore to write songs, he recently confessed. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moore, 6725 Leroy st., and an army bandsman, he has composed four songs to date.

Corp. James Moore.

One, "A Million Years Go By," was played recently over a Chicago radio station. The same number has been recorded by a radioman touring New Caledonia who has promised it would be used in a nation-wide broadcast. The corporal says he tries to portray some of the nostalgia and faith felt by soldiers away from home.

Moore is a guitarist but in order to play in the headquarters band had to learn drums. However, he plays his guitar in an orchestra recruited from the band for concerts, dances, and hospital shows. A Taft High school graduate, Corp. Moore hopes to follow a professional song writing career after the war.

SEEK $100,000 FOR EXPANSION OF CHILD HOME

Daughters of Zion Stress Need.

"To know, love, and serve childhood. . . ." Such is the purpose of the Daughters of Zion Infant Home and Day nursery at 1401 N. California av.

In order to do this to the best of their ability, directors of the home have opened a drive to raise $100,000 to finance the completion of two much needed floors. "When the home was built 18 years ago," said Mrs. Aaron Ader, president, "it was planned to use the first two of the four stories for nurses' quarters and administrative purposes, but failure to complete the building necessitated their use for child care.

Present Space Crowded.

"In addition present quarters now are crowded because of the increase of children needing our care. Dr. Maurice L. Blatt, staff consulting pediatrician, has asked that one of the two upper floors be set aside for care of convalescent children released from hospitals."

At present the home includes about 50 day nursery pupils who are cared for from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. and about 45 permanent child residents. The resident youngsters, who are kept separate from the day nursery, come from temporarily broken homes and are kept from infancy until they are 6.

To "Sell" Rooms at $1,000.

The home also needs facilities to care for children of expectant mothers. "Many mothers," Mrs. Ader said, "have no one they can leave their baby with for a week or 10 days while they are in the hospital. We hope to be able to care for them too."

During the drive, which closes May 20, rooms at the home will be "sold" for $1,000. Plaques with the donor's name will be placed in the room.

Coöperating with the drive are the 15 auxiliaries which help support the nursery. Fund drive officers include Samuel A. Hoffman, chairman; Oscar Jordan, secretary; Mrs. Jack Rosen, treasurer; Richard Knight, building chairman, and Louis Simon, architect.

GLENVIEW AIR STATION HOST TO BENNY COMPANY

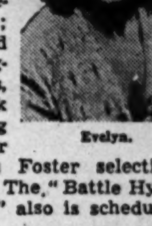
Hour of Charm Will Be Aired in Chicago.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Larry Stevens.

Jack Benny and company, who arrived last Tuesday for appearances at hospitals, the Navy pier, and servicemen's centers, will do their broadcast at 6 o'clock tonight over WMAQ-NBC from the Glenview Naval Air station theater. Mary Livingstone, Rochester, Don Wilson, Larry Stevens, and Phil Harris will all be on hand for the show. Immediately after the Benny broadcast Harris will climb aboard the Bandwagon, which follows the Benny show on NBC, joining Dick Powell, the conductor, The Bandwagon show will be presented for the same navy audience.

Another visiting show today is the Hour of Charm, with Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra. They will broadcast from local NBC studios thru WMAQ tonight. The featured performers are Evelyn, violinist; Francine and Katherine, singers; Viola, drums, and the Mack Sisters, singing triplets. Four Stephen Collins Foster selections will be featured. The "Battle Hymn of the Republic" also is scheduled.



Evelyn.

Ed Wynn, who is concluding his 26 week series on the Blue network on Feb. 26, expects to do further broadcasting soon. Meanwhile, he expects to spend several weeks on another tour of service hospitals. Wynn indicated that when he comes back to the air he will abandon his "Bubbles" fantasy and go back to something more nearly like his old "Fire Chief" pattern.

When Bing Crosby altered the format of his radio show at the beginning of this season to make it almost wholly musical there were skeptics. Bing was told that his ratings would start slipping. Instead they began climbing. In the current Hooper rating Bing is in third place, with Bob Hope and Fibber McGee second. Bing is reported slightly upset because of the climb. He has told friends he would never want to have top rating because then he would start worrying about staying there.

Dorothy Lamour Is Guest.

When the Bergen-McCarthy show, with Don Ameche as master of ceremonies, is aired from the army air base at March field, Cal., Dorothy Lamour will be a guest.

This series of broadcasts is devoted to showing how Chicagoland can help shorten the war and save lives if the man power needs of the great war plants in this region are met.

A highlight of tonight's broadcast will be "Pistol Pete," a story from the army's files about the kind of a gun the men at the front feel good about. It emphasizes the mighty role of steel in the war and the contributions of Republic Steel toward providing it. Vivid portrayals of electric furnaces in action, and graphic descriptions of manufacturing processes will be included in the broadcast.

Sherman Dryer has written and will produce this program. Robert Trendler has composed an original musical setting and will conduct the orchestra and chorus. The program is presented in coöperation with the army, navy, No. 1 priority war plants, The Chicago Tribune, and W-G-N.

Pvt. Russell A. Perkins, 20, whose mother, Mrs. Undine Perkins, lives at 1938 N. Fairfield av., routed 14 Germans from a pillbox before he was wounded during the hedgerow fighting near Brest, France.

Under cover of rifle fire, Pvt. Perkins fired a bazooka into the pillbox, routing the enemy troops, and was ready to advance when he was wounded by a fragment of a shell that landed 10 yards away. He is at an army hospital in England.

Wounded by Strafers.

Pvt. Joseph Kopelson, 24, son of Mrs. Bessie Kopelson, 1329 N. Artesian av., was wounded in the wrist when a German plane strafed his truck convoy which was en route to bridges across the Seine river.

Wounded when his unit stormed a hill near Dornot, France, Pvt. Matthew H. Pelech, 26, 1103 N. Ashland av., received the Purple Heart at an army hospital in England. He suffered shrapnel wounds in both legs. His wife, Irene, and their four children live at the Ashland av. address.

Shell Fragment Hits Private.

Pvt. Stanley Zych, 31, 2126 Potomac av., was wounded in the left leg by a fragment from a mortar shell in an engagement against a German hill top position near Rennes. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zych, 1471 Erie st. Pvt. Zych's wife is the former Sophie C. Huron.

The two marines who have received the Purple Heart are Privates Joseph Duda Jr., whose parents live at 2814 N. Mason av., and Clements Cowan Jr., whose parents live at 3521 N. Keating av. Pvt. Cowan is only 16 years old, his mother said. He has been overseas 16 months and also took part in the battle of Tarawa.

CLAIMS HIS TANK INVADED FIRST FROM HOLLAND

In a letter dated Dec. 4, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Brice, 4483 Keokuk av., learned their son, Sgt. John J. Brice, that his tank was the first to enter Germany from Holland.

He wrote that the people in the liberated countries "were overjoyed to see us." Sgt. Brice, who has been overseas 26 months, is a tank sergeant in the 2d armored division. He also has seen action in Africa, Sicily, France, and Belgium.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Feb. 12.

Indoor garden activities are becoming much more intensive as the season advances. Seeds sown last month will have germinated and developed sufficiently to need transplanting into flats or other containers.

Tuesday, Feb. 13.

Plant nut trees in sections where they will respond to soil and climatic conditions. There are fine varieties of walnuts that will succeed in the rich soil of the middle west. The paper shell pecans do well only when hardy northern varieties, such as the major, posey, Indiana, and Green River, are planted. It is best to plant more than one variety to insure cross-pollination.

Wednesday, Feb. 14.

If the shrimp plant has grown large and the stems leggy, cut them back this spring and use the material for cuttings to obtain new plants. Cuttings root easily in sandy soil or sand. This is a good house plants, requires full sun, plenty of water, and is comparatively free from insect attacks.

Thursday, Feb. 15.

To supplement the vegetable crops, plant strawberries for home consumption. They are easily grown. Any well drained soil that is retentive of moisture will be sufficient. Commercial fertilizer incorporated in the soil before planting will keep the plants growing rapidly.

Friday, Feb. 16.

When succession crops are mentioned it means that when a crop is off the ground another crop that can have time to mature should occupy the vacancy. This is important, for it means that every foot of ground will be occupied at all times so that the small area will show a heavy crop.

Saturday, Feb. 17.

Make arrangements to obtain topdressing materials for use on the lawn just as soon as growth starts. Screened topsoil to which is added decayed manure, leafmold, or peatmoss forms the basis for the topdressing.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

DON'T MIND BIT OF SNOW; CHART THOSE GARDENS

Park District Will Plow Area.

Even as southwest siders shovel snow from their sidewalks and bundle up to meet the frigid blasts of winter, they are preparing for the war gardens they will cultivate next summer.

Stimulated by stricter rationing, they already are asking for gardening information from community leaders. Approximately half a million square feet of vacant lots on the southwest side have been plowed by the park district in coöperation with the International Harvester company, which furnishes the tractors.

Gardeners Ask Space.

Additional requests are coming in for space to be plowed as soon as frost is out of the ground. The park district is planning to provide this service for areas which qualify within the city limits, said George T. Donoghue, director of gardens for the Chicago metropolitan area.

Requirements for plowing are: [1] No project can be plowed unless at least four families are coöperating; [2] written permission of the owner must be secured; [3] no garden can be plowed that was used as a garden last year because of limited equipment; [4] ground must be reasonably level and free from holes, or objects which would damage tires of equipment, and [5] the plot must be at least 75 by 100 feet.

Must Secure Permission.

Those who desire a garden may cultivate on a near-by vacant lot by securing permisison of the owner or by contacting the leader of the project. Most of the communities have garden chairmen who will help to locate sites. In some localities, all suitable vacant space already is occupied. In such instances it may be possible to secure garden space in a near-by community by contacting the division garden chairman.

Chairman of division 3, which includes 19 southwest side communities, is Michael A. Redden, 5510 S. Halsted st.

List Community Chairmen.

Bridgeport—J. P. Reuter, 3139 S. Racine av.; McKinley park—Leon Glow, 3597 Archer av.; Fuller park—Harry Tures, 4541 Lowe av.; Town of Lake—no chairman, headquarters at 5100 S. RICHARD R. KANE, 1246 W. 71st st.

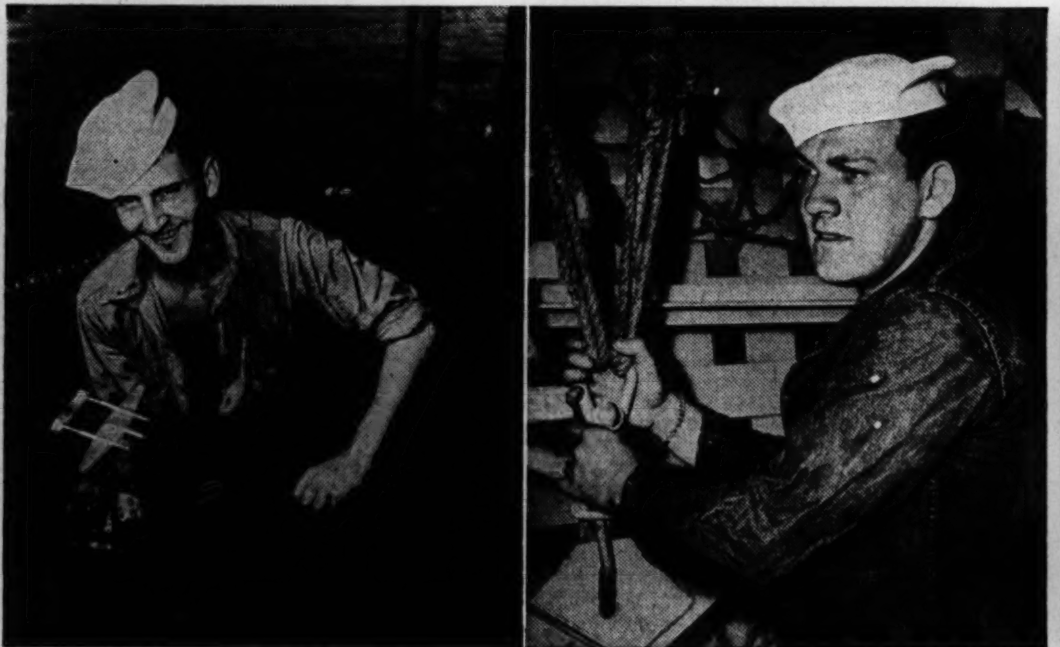
ANDREW A. STANIULUS,
6651 S. Talman av.

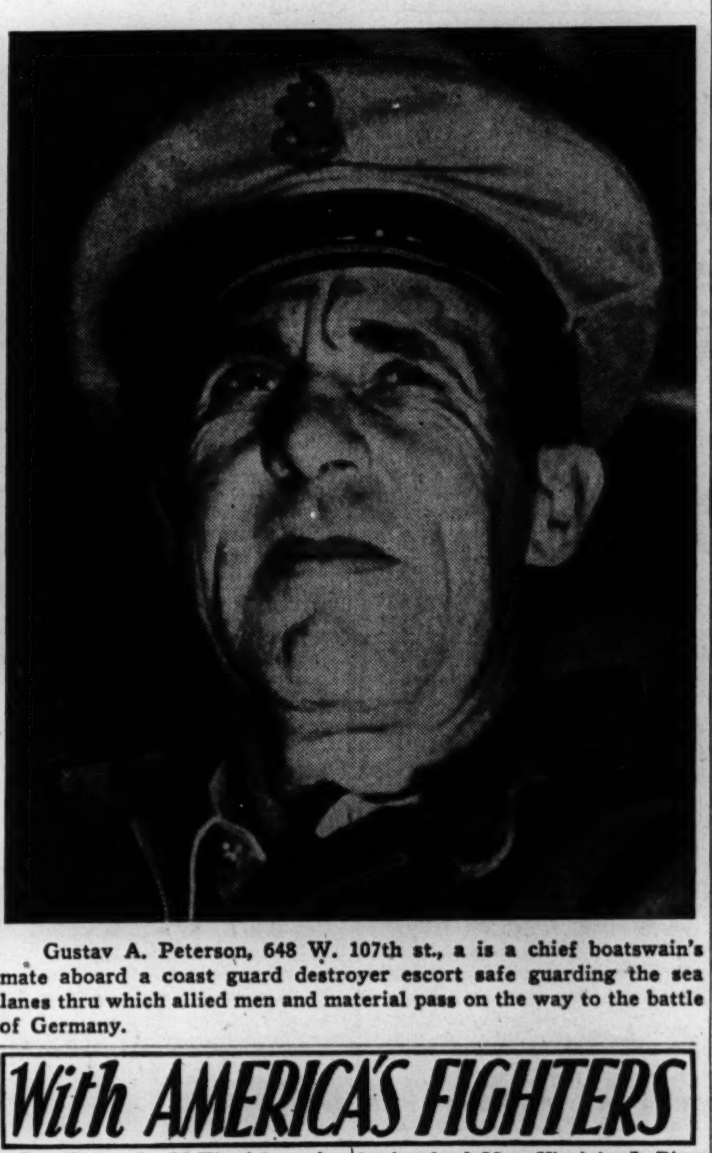
WILLIAM J. KOTTMEYER,
440 W. 63d st.

JACK LUKEY,
7313 Stewart av.

Constantly watching for enemy craft are the eyes of these four southwest side coast guardsmen shown at battle stations aboard ships in the Atlantic and Pacific. This service is now open to 17 year olds who have parental consent. Seaman Kane stands watch aboard a destroyer escort convoying men and supplies to the battle of Germany. Seaman Staniulus mans an anti-aircraft gun aboard a landing craft on which he served during the initial assaults on Luzon. He also fought at Peleliu and Leyte. Seaman Kottmeyer is a gun captain with an anti-aircraft battery aboard a landing ship tank operating in the Pacific. Gunner's Mate Lukey is responsible for the maintenance of all weapons aboard his invasion vessel. He and his brother, Herbert, enlisted the day after Pearl Harbor. Two more Lukey brothers are in the navy, Loren, a warrant officer has been in seven years, and Joseph, a boatswain's mate, has served four years.



John Hofer, left, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hofer, 1719 W. 91st st., serves as a carpenter's mate aboard an invasion transport which was one of the first vessels into the gulf of Lingayen in the Luzon campaign. He also has served in the Marshalls and at Guam, Peleliu, and Leyte. He made that P-38 model from expended shells. His brother, Robert, is in the army. John J. Ferret, right, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ferret, 2706 W. 43d st., a coxswain, is also in action in the Pacific.



Gustav A. Peterson, 648 W. 107th st., a is a chief boatswain's mate aboard a coast guard destroyer escort safe guarding the sea lanes thru which allied men and material pass on the way to the battle of Germany.

Seaman August S. Hangos, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Hangos, 4357 S. Washtenaw av., went ashore with the first assault waves to storm Luzon. He is a member of a landing boat crew and participated in several other South Pacific invasions. RE-ENTERS 6TH GRADE AT 28, IS LAWYER IN 6 YRS.

Cop Learns the Legal Whys and Hows.

George Peterson.

At 28, George E. Peterson, then a traffic policeman, thought he was still young enough to get an education. He picked up his studies at the sixth grade and in six years earned a law degree and passed the bar examination. Today, at 59, a recently retired police lieutenant, he is at work as an expediter in a war plant. When victory lessens the need for war plant workers, he plans to open his own law office.

The firm name will probably be Peterson & Peterson. The lieutenant credits Frances, his wife, with inspiring him thru the long, hard hours of study which daily followed his traffic duties.

Was a Copyboy.

Peterson, who lives at 6357 Laflin st., has been on the force 33 years. He went to work as a copyboy on a Chicago newspaper at the age of 11 and carried the news of another victory at Manila, Adm. Dewey's great naval triumph, from a telegraph station to his office. After working as a stock handler and electrician, he entered the police force on Jan. 9, 1912, as a patrolman in the Gresham district. All he remembers of the first night on a beat is it was -14 below zero.

But he remembers well his eight years as a traffic policeman at La Salle and Washington sts. when he worked from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. There were no traffic lights. His whistle and gestures were his only means of control over vehicles.

It was at this job he got the idea knowledge of the administration of law would qualify him better to enforce it. By studying after work both summer and winter for six years he earned his degree at the Hamilton College of Law.

Given Office Job.

Shortly after passing the bar examination he was complimented by Charles C. Fitzmorris, superintendent of police, and assigned to the office where for 24 years he was in charge of clerical work and assistant secretary. When the superintendent's office became the commissioner's office Peterson stayed on to serve under Morgan Collins, Michael Hughes, William F. Russell, John Alcock, and James P. Allman, present commissioner.

He has been in charge of all war bond sales from the commissioner's office, which total more than $2,000,000.

He has two daughters, Mrs. Margaret Lynch, 8611 Marshfield av., and Mrs. Lorraine Durkin, 6643 S. Mozart st., and a son, George E. Peterson Jr., 1448 W. 81st st.

SOUTH COUNCIL OPPOSES MOTOR FUND TRANSFERS

Name Group to Seek End of Diversion.

The south area council of the Chicago Motor club recently adopted resolutions opposing further diversion of motor vehicle funds in Illinois and appointed a committee to coördinate the efforts of civic organizations in a drive to prevent further diversions.

Frank X. Rydzewski, council chairman, said that members representing more than 50 south side civic groups, would send protests to senators and representatives in the 4th, 5th, 9th, 11th, and 13th senatorial districts. Albert Edgar, president of the Harrison senior class, will read interscholastic news.

GLENVIEW AIR STATION HOST TO BENNY COMPANY

Hour of Charm Will Be Aired in Chicago.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Jack Benny and company, who arrived last Tuesday for appearances at hospitals, the Navy pier, and servicemen's centers, will do their broadcast at 6 o'clock tonight over WMAQ-NBC from the Glenview Naval Air station theater. Mary Livingstone, Rochester, Don Wilson, Larry Stevens, and Phil Harris will all be on hand for the show. Immediately after the Benny broadcast Harris will climb aboard the Bandwagon, which follows the Benny show on NBC, joining Dick Powell, the conductor. The Bandwagon show will be presented for the same navy audience.

Larry Stevens.

Another visiting show today is the Hour of Charm, with Phil Spitalny and his all-girl orchestra. They will broadcast from local NBC studios thru WMAQ tonight. The featured performers are Evelyn, violinist; Francine and Katherine, singers; Viola, drums, and the Mack Sisters, singing triplets. Four Stephen Colling Foster selections will be featured. The "Battle Hymn of the Republic" also is scheduled.

Evelyn.

Ed Wynn, who is concluding his 26 week series on the Blue network on Feb. 26, expects to do further broadcasting soon. Meanwhile, he expects to spend several weeks on another tour of service hospitals. Wynn indicated that when he comes back to the air he will abandon his "Bubbles" fantasy and go back to something more nearly like his old "Fire Chief" pattern.

When Bing Crosby altered the format of his radio show at the beginning of this season to make it almost wholly musical there were skeptics. Bing was told that his ratings would start slipping. Instead they began climbing. In the current Hooper rating Bing is in third place, with Bob Hope and Fibber McGee second. Bing is reported slightly upset because of the climb. He has told friends he would never want to have top rating because then he would start worrying about staying there.

W-G-N TO TELL WAR STORY OF REPUBLIC STEEL

The story of Republic Steel corporation's contributions to the war and their problems of obtaining sufficient man power will be told on the second broadcast of America Unlimited over W-G-N at 9 p. m. tomorrow. This series of broadcasts is devoted to showing how Chicagoland can help shorten the war and save lives if the man power needs of the great war plants in this region are met.

A highlight of tonight's broadcast will be "Pistol Pete," a story from the army's files about the kind of a gun the men at the front feel good about. It emphasizes the mighty role of steel in the war and the contributions of Republic Steel toward providing it. Vivid portrayals of electric furnaces in action, and graphic descriptions of manufacturing processes will be included in the broadcast.

Sherman Dryer has written and will produce this program. Robert Trendler has composed an original musical setting and will conduct the orchestra and chorus. The program is presented in coöperation with the army, navy, No. 1 priority war plants, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and W-G-N.

FRANCESCATTI PHILHARMONIC SOLOIST TODAY

Zino Francescatti, violinist, will be a guest soloist on the New York Philharmonic program over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today. He will play Paganini's Violin Concerto in D major.

5 Reasons Why
You Had Better SAVE This Dollar

This is a wartime dollar. It looks just the same as it did before the war. But it is not the same.

5. It can't buy the quality it will later.

But you can make this wartime dollar do these things later just by saving it. Plan your spending, plan your saving. Work it out in black and white, to assure better spending control, greater saving. Saving means helping to keep the dollar sound, to maintain its buying power. And saving means buying War Bonds regularly and putting money in the bank for emergencies.

PLAN YOUR SPENDING FOR YOUR COUNTRY YOUR FAMILY YOURSELF PLAN YOUR SAVING

Help the nation's efforts to keep your living costs DOWN, the buying power of your dollar UP.

LEMONT POLICE HEAD SEARCHES FOR CRIME WAVE

'Hoods' Are Softies Now, Cop Quips Crisply.

Peter J. Kane.

Hoodlums are neither as tough nor as plentiful as they used to be, opines Peter J. Kane, police commissioner of Lemont. He thinks criminals are just as dangerous as they were when he went on the force 41 years ago, but believes that widening educational opportunities have almost obliterated young hoodlums.

"Whenever they do turn up they don't resist arrest like they used to," he said.

Hot Air Gang.

For example, there was a group in 1905 known as the Hot Air gang. Nine members attempted to beat up Kane. In the ensuing melee eight members fled and the ninth went to the hospital. That was one of the few times Kane has used his revolver since he joined the force in 1903. He prefers his fists.

Kane's parents came from Ireland and settled in Lemont, where he was born 69 years ago. At 13 he worked as a deckhand for his father, the captain of a steamboat which hauled stone from Lemont to Chicago.

One Man Department.

For 11 years Kane was a one man police force. Now he is assisted by Chief Joseph Poviask, affectionately called "Pork Chops" by Kane, and Patrolman Martin Novak. Pociask and Novak are on duty at night while Commissioner Kane walks the day beat. Lemont is a village approximately one mile square containing 600 families.

Kane believes he has an intuition which often has led, him to spot criminals. Many years ago a man telephoned that he had left his safe open at home and was afraid some one would break in and steal the $150 ond three diamonds it contained. Kane went to the home and found the money and gems gone. He suspected a youth living near-by and told the safe owner, who scoffed, "that's the best boy in the world." Yet when Kane accused the lad, saying one of the youngster's friends had seen him steal from the safe, the boy promptly confessed.

Broomstick Causes Crisis.

He always is ready to help. A 90 year old lady once excitedly summoned him with the plea that "some one was in her house." He hurried to her aid and banged on the door. The door opened slightly, then slammed shut. He shoved harder. The door swung back just as hard. He shouted "come out with your hands up or I'll come in and get you." No answer. Kane pulled his revolver, forced open the door, and swung around the room. Then the old lady remembered she had placed a broomstick against the door and left by another door she had locked.

He is proud of a compliment given by a criminal several years ago. The man, who had been causing a disturbance in a tavern, was carrying a gun and knife. Kane overpowered the man, took both weapons, and arrested him "You're the best man I ever fought," commented the thug. "If ever you're in trouble, I want to be on your side."

"He just wanted to be sure of winning," joked Kane.

BRAVE MEN

Ernie Pyle is now in the Pacific, a new theater of war for him. Just after the fall of Paris he came home to his little white cottage near Albuquerque to catch his breath after two years with his beloved GIs in Europe. His new book has been described as "first-hand reporting which will never be equalled by the stories told afterward." It is more; this is what your own boy would tell, what all the boys would tell, of what they have seen and endured, if they only could.

Sumner Welles

FOR MANY months THE TIME FOR DECISION, by Sumner Welles, has headed the non-fiction best-seller lists. His book is a searching and lucid examination both of what needs to be done, and what can be practically attempted, in restoring order over the world after the war, and then maintaining it. (Price to members, $2.75.)

Van Wyck Brooks

THE WORLD OF WASHINGTON IRVING, by Van Wyck Brooks, has been appraised by many critics as the most colorful in his series of American literary history. It is a tapestry of long-ago America, studded with exceptional pen portraits of men like Irving, Poe, Cooper, Audubon, and scores of others. (Price to members, $2.75.)

Catherine Bowen

THE IMPOSING figure of a great judge, Oliver Wendell Holmes, is rounded out in YANKEE FROM OLYMPUS, by Catherine Drinker Bowen, but here also is the boy growing up, the Civil War hero who could cuss Lincoln to his face for exposing himself carelessly in a trench, and many other facets of a great man. The Book-of-the-Month Club frequently sends its members two books in one month at a single price, and paired with Mr. Brogan's engaging study is another book by an Englishman that will astonish many by its clairvoyant understanding of things American—YOUNG 'UN, by Herbert Best. ‘The Searching Wind’ Coming to Erlanger Feb. 20

Hellman Play Covers Period of 1923 to '44

By Claudia Cassidy.

When Herman Shumlin heard that "Over Twenty-One" had to postpone its Studebaker return until the baggage car caught up with the actors, he must have heaved a sigh of relief about his decision to open "The Searching Wind" at the Erlanger Tuesday night, Feb. 20, rather than the previous Monday. This way he will know that when the audience walks into the theater, Howard Bay's four elaborate settings will be hung, and the curtain will go up on schedule. As for losing a performance, George Washington took care of that a long time ago. There will be an extra matinée Feb. 22 in honor of his birthday.

The Shumlin stamp on a play is not one to be ignored. In 17 years he has produced 17 plays, nine of them successes, and he has staged 12 of them. "The Last Mile" was one of the first to attract attention, and it gave Hollywood both Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy. "Grand Hotel" introduced a vivid technique and etched Eugenie Leontovich and Sam Jaffe on the memory of all who saw them. "The Corn Is Green" restored Ethel Barrymore to a public that had cause to be faithful. There were many more, and just now Mr. Shumlin is staging "Uncle Sugar," dramatized from Frederick Wakefield's "Shore Leave," for John Moses, son of his "Grand Hotel" partner, its co-producer. But among those "many more," the high spots were marked by the Shumlin production of plays by Lillian Hellman, who wrote "The Searching Wind."

NEW MITZI

A saucy new Mitzi is Virginia Card, who comes to the Civic Opera house Monday evening, Feb. 26, in the 25th anniversary production of "Blossom Time."

[Seymour Photo.]

• • •

At last count, Miss Hellman had written six plays. An early one, "Dear Queen," written with Louis Kronenberger, was never staged. Nor was Shumlin impressed when at a party at Ira Gershwin's she outlined the story of "The Children's Hour," the play the city fathers inexplicably banned from Chicago. Shumlin wasn't impressed, but he gave her a job as play reader. One day she gave him a completed script to read. He bought it on the spot and their partnership began. It continued with the brilliant "The Little Foxes" and the deeply moving "Watch on the Rhine." Their sole failure was with "Days to Come."

• • •

This doesn't sound like an idle life for a playwright who sees her plays right thru Hollywood, and finds time to engage in lively acrimony with Tallulah Bankhead even while making a documentary film for the British ministry of information, but Miss Hellman has moments of falling back on her heritage from New Orleans. "I'm a great thinker-upper of ways not to work," she says, "When a play is coming on I talk to myself, I wash dishes very carefully, I wash something else, stockings usually, I take a bath and I find many reasons for doing a great deal of telephoning. Once started, however, I go pretty fast, I work five or six days a week from two to 10 hours a day, always tearing up a good deal of what I write. I've written as many as nine drafts of a play."

• • •

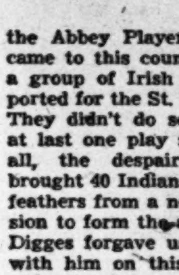
And it's worth it when you emerge with a satirical masterpiece like "The Little Foxes," which is my pet Hellman to date. Any one who saw that play, or "Watch on the Rhine," will have no illusions about "The Searching Wind" being any more cosy than it sounds. That title means business. Miss Hellman plunges right in with what she thinks of "the apathy and misguided tolerance responsible for the world crisis." Her story covers a period of 22 years, from Washington in 1944 back to the Rome of Mussolini, the Berlin of the 1923 riots, and Paris before Munich.

• • •

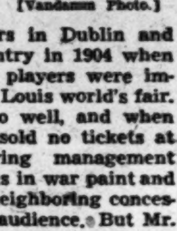
The diplomat in the play is acted by Dennis King, last here with Katharine Cornell in the stellar "The Three Sisters." Once the flaming Villon of "Vagabond King" fame, the flashing Mercutio to Jane Cowl's Juliet, and the brilliant "Richard of Bordeaux," he has come of more recent seasons in "A Doll's House," with Ruth Gordon, "Petticoat Fever," "Blithe Spirit," and "I Married an Angel."

• • •

Dudley Digges, forever beloved as Gramps who treed death in "On Borrowed Time," plays a newspaper publisher. Altho Mr. Digges has played some 3,000 performances for the Theater Guild, he began with the Abbey Players in Dublin and came to this country in 1904 when a group of Irish players were imported for the St. Louis world's fair. They didn't do so well, and when at last one play sold no tickets at all, the despairing management brought 40 Indians in war paint and feathers from a neighboring concession to form the audience. But Mr. Digges forgave us and stayed, and with him on this trip will be his wife, the former Mary Quinn, one of the founders of the Abbey theater. It was there they fell in love 43 years ago while acting the plays of Synge, Yeats, Russell, and Lady Gregory.



Dudley Digges.



Barbara O'Neil.

[Vandamm Photo.]

Cornelia Otis Skinner, who plays Digges' daughter, was born here and will spend part of her time getting material for her biography of her parents, Otis Skinner and Maud Durbin. Long known for her one woman theater, Miss Skinner recently gave Hollywood a popular version of her Emily Kimbrough collaboration, "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." "The Searching Wind" was her first Broadway play, altho she previously appeared here in "Candida" and "Theater."

• • •

Barbara O'Neil, who plays a spinster long in love with the diplomat, is probably best known on the screen from such roles as Charles Boyer's wife in "All This and Heaven Too." She comes from the West Falmouth, Mass., stock company which also graduated Margaret Sullavan, Henry Fonda, James Stewart, and Mildred Natwick. Henry Barnard, who followed Montgomery Clift as the embittered son, is said to have had his first job playing Miss Skinner's son in "Theater." Not here—that was Frederick Bradlee. He also appeared with Paul Robeson in "Othello" and with Billie Burke and Ruth Chatterton.

No chance, says Mr. Shumlin, of an extended engagement. His play has other cities to call on before it winds up the season in Washington just as the stellar contracts run out.

THE GOLDEN TOTEM

BY BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

(Copyright: 1945: By Barrett Willoughby.)

INSTALMENT VI.

LYNN forgot that she was penniless and without a job. Forgot, even, that love had failed her. Alaska was wide and beautiful, and there were a thousand ways of wonder opening up before her.

Back of Lynn, outside her line of vision, Jefferson Greer balanced his tall figure, hands deep in his breeches pockets.

They were farther up the coast in smoother water when Lynn began to talk. "Is the Golden Totem mine on an island?" she asked.

"Yes. On the west coast, which is the outer coast. It is one of Alaska's largest islands, and is crammed with scenery, trout streams, brown bears, all kinds of game. The Golden Totem is near the end of the narrow arm of salt water we call Reflection Inlet. It winds, like a still river, fifteen miles inland to the heart of the island."

"Like a still river?"

He laughed. "That's slightly misleading. The Inlet is about a mile wide the entire length—except at the mouth, where it contracts to a fourth of a mile into a sort of canyon we call the Bottleneck. The tides in the Bottleneck govern the coming and goings of all who live on Reflection Inlet. There are only four smooth periods in a 24 hour day when a boat can go thru with safety—around high-water slack, and low-water slack. At all other times the tide pours thru the narrows at terrific speed, piling up in overfalls, boiling, whirlpooling, and sending up a roar we can hear way up at the mine, when the wind's just right."

"No one's ever gone thru, then, at such a time?"

He shrugged and gave a short laugh. "Flan O'Hara claims to have brought a small cruiser thru at such a time. But no one believes him." After a short silence, he added, as tho against his will, "About a year ago a—a friend of mine tried to go thru at the wrong time."

"He didn't make it?"

"No. But now——" All at once Greer seemed eager to change the subject. "It's my trick at the wheel. I'm going off the course a little to run in behind that small island ahead. I want to show you a bit of aboriginal Alaska. We won't have time to see it in the morning on our way back to town."

He swung the Prospector in behind the island and slowed down the engine. "There it is," he said. "One of the few ancient deserted Thlinget villages left untouched by vandals."

Behind the totems crouched what was left of the village, a row of weather-whitened plank ruins thrusting up thru lush wild celery and alders. At the back a young spruce forest was already crowding the fallen timbers. To the left a stream flowed out without a sound. And everywhere was silence and a weird, lonely sense of sleep.

Greer's voice startled Lynn. "This place makes a great hit with visitors I bring down here to fish." He tooled the slow moving cruiser close to the ruins. "I make it a point to serve lunch in the chief's house, which I've cleaned up a bit. We're close enough now for you to get a look at it—the only dwelling that's left standing—there at the center of the line."

Lynn saw it, a wide, one-story communal lodge made of adz-hewn planks placed vertically. There were no windows. Flat against the middle of the front wall a totem pole rose high above the wide, almost flat roof. It was incredibly eroded and grayed with years, and the flying eagle at the top had lost the tips of its wings. Yet about the totems and the Indian house there was a primitive, battered dignity that made a deep impression on Lynn.

Greer was saying, "You can't see the door on account of the alders that have grown up in front. It's an oval opening cut thru the lower part of the totem."

He circled slowly and went out of the cove and headed up the coast.

Lynn was silent for a time, thinking about the Thlinget ruins. She kept remembering the lonely peace of the cove; the sweet wild aroma of sun warmed grasses and strange herbs that floated out from the shore. She didn't know why, but there was something compelling about the place; something of long ago that found a response in her heart.

Lynn was surrendering to the peace and beauty when a sudden sense of loss wrenched her heart. Perry! Perry should be standing beside her sharing all this. And Perry was below deck sleeping off a hangover. It was bleakly grotesque, somehow, that the world should be so lovely when she had no one to enjoy it with her. She wished the journey were over.

"Have we far to go, Mr. Greer?"

"Only about five miles more—you can see it now, the head of the inlet."

Lynn looked thru the binoculars. The end of the inlet lay in a fold between high mountains—a fan of land that rose from the water in a gentle, forested slope, then lifted steeply to a high bald topped hill. She saw nothing resembling a mine, at least not the Alaska-Taku. Up at the edge of timberline on the high hill there were two or three small vague buildings.

"Is—that the Golden Totem?" she asked.

Greer's gaze followed her pointing finger. He laughed. "Not in a million years. That's Faber's layout on Melody hill. He calls it the Apex lode. Here's his landing and warehouse."

Lynn was about to ask why Court's warehouse should be so far from his mine when Greer stepped to the open window and lifted marine glasses to his eyes. He moved them up along a trail that climbed the forested mountain back of the warehouse; then suddenly focused on something. When he stepped back to the wheel his face was without expression.

Lynn took her own glasses and went out to the deck to train them on the spot that had interested Greer.

It sprang close, the wide scar of an old landslide, now greened over with short vegetation across which a trail zigzagged. Halfway up, Court Faber was slowly ascending with a pack on his back. Behind him came Flan O'Hara. The latter carried no pack and his erratic progress gave the impression that he was not yet sober.

Court must have heard the sound of the Prospector's exhaust then, because he turned and looked down. Impulsively, Lynn jerked the blue kerchief from her neck and waved it at him. She saw him fling up his arm in acknowledgment. Then he clasped both hands together above his head, and shook them. A friendly gesture of welcome to his domain, she thought, her heart warming a little.

• • •

Lynn went back into the pilot house, her winged brows drawn together. "If Court Faber's mine is up there on that hill, why doesn't he land his boat at the head of the inlet and pack his supplies straight up to his camp? It must be a lot shorter, that way."

She was more or less wondering aloud, but Greer quickly answered, "His so-called mine is blocked off from his tide water by my property which stretches completely across the head of the inlet between mountains that rise in an almost unscalable wall."

"Oh! Then Court Faber can never get ore from his mine to a ship except over your property?"

"That's right—if he has a mine. Now, don't look at me as if I were a monster, little lady. I once offered him the use of everything I own—and more. He turned me down flat."

"Why?"

Greer shrugged his wide shoulders. "He wanted to do business in a certain way and I—well, I just couldn't lend myself to his scheme, that's all."

Again Lynn felt a curious twinge of disappointment. She didn't want to talk about Court Faber any more.

The cruiser was nearing a tiny island just large enough to accommodate the dozen fine cedars that grew on it. As the Prospector moved forward, the green islet gave the illusion of gliding out from the shore and coming to a stop on its own reflection. From the narrow beach a flock of sandpipers took the air in silver flight, zigzagging away across the inlet. A small log cabin about the beach showed dove-gray against the trees.

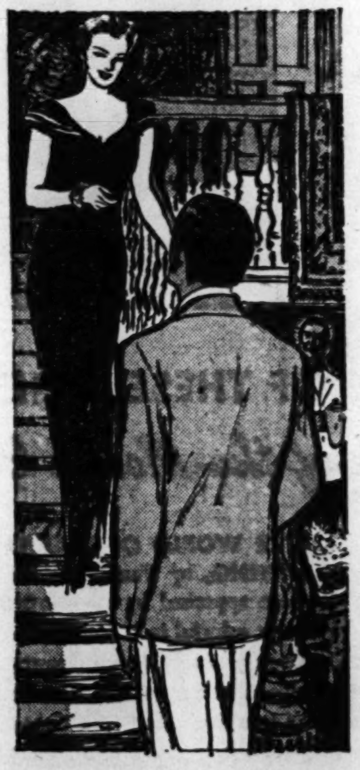
Greer looked amused. "That's Periwinkle isle, named after a little purple shellfish found there on the rocks at low tide."

Lynn kept looking about her. "But the Golden Totem—I still don't see it!"

"You won't from this point. It's back in the timber about half a mile. But my headquarters are around on the inside of the peninsula. I have a sort of lodge there—Nika Illahee, I call it. That's Chinook for 'my dear homeland' or 'my home'—something like that."

Greer threw the wheel to port. The Prospector swung sharply round the point of the peninsula which curved to half encircle a small cove. He cut off the engine. In a sudden, dramatic hush, the cruiser coasted forward.



Greer stood at the foot of the stairway, his gaze marking her slow descent as she came down dressed for dinner.

"There she is," quietly announced Greer. "My Illahee."

Lynn's eyes widened as she took in the substantial landing float with its rowboats and canoes; the dozen wide stone steps mounting thru native shrubbery to the flagged terrace; and the lodge itself, big and gracious and sun warmed against its background of trees.

Illahee was built of beach stones and peeled logs, all toned in cream and soft tans. Part of it was two stories high. Great beach stone chimneys lifted above a roof of intriguing angles and gables and dormer windows. A series of French doors opened onto the terrace where a single giant cedar stretched its boughs over a barbecue and a cluster of gay hued outdoor furniture. And the lodge in all its charm and color was doubled in the clear green water of the cove.

But what surprised Lynn more than anything else was the mellow air of years, of home, that emanated from the place, Illahee. She understood now why Greer had selected the name for his lodge. And she felt a new appreciation for the man who, in the short time he had been developing his mine, had built his business headquarters with such originality and regard for beauty.

"How do you like it, Lynn?"

"I've never before seen a place that seemed like home to me. What a shame you'll have to spoil it by building the wharves and warehouses necessary to the shipment of ore."

"None of that will touch Illahee. That work will all be done on the other side of the peninsula. The point that curves round this cove will protect the lodge from every sign of commercial activity."

Lynn drew a deep breath. "That makes it perfect," she said.

Greer laid the cruiser alongside the float, where a tall, white jacketed Indian waited to catch the line Al threw to him. Men boiled up onto the deck—most of them young, laughing, well dressed but disheveled.

Lynn turned to see the housekeeper coming up into the pilot house with MacFarlane on leash. At sight of his mistress the pup jerked clear and leaped into her arms. By the time Lynn had quieted his transports, Mrs. Strum had gone ashore and Greer had disappeared below.

In a few minutes Greer returned. "All ashore!" he said cheerily.

Lynn hesitated. "But—where's Perry? I thought——"

"I'm sorry. Perry's still below, with an ice pack on his head. We'd better let him sleep for a while, Lynn. I'll take you up to Illahee."

• • •

Lynn stepped thru the French doors into a vast living room that carried not a single hint of commercial activities. She was aware of soft mellow colors, a sort of sturdy luxury, and a feeling of home. The high, beamed ceiling, the paneled walls, the stairway leading up to a gallery which ran along two sides of the big room, were all finished in antiqued ivory. Of a deeper sand shade were the upholstered sofas, the plain handsome furniture, the thick monotone rugs and a baby grand piano. Satisfying color was introduced in other furnishings.

All this Lynn got in that first swift glance. And then she saw, at the farther end, the most remarkable feature of the room. It was a great, deep fireplace that rose, without a mantel, thru the gallery to the high beamed ceiling. And it was made of cream white quartz that was veined and studded with softly glowing gold.

Incredulous, Lynn blinked, and looked again, walking toward it . . .

"Yes, Lynn, it is gold." Greer, behind her, must have guessed her uncertainty. He was chuckling. "No one believes it at first."

She turned to face him. "Why, it's made of quartz like the sample you showed me in Juneau."

"Right. Selected pieces, of course. Jewelry rock, we call it. What you see runs over $3,000 a ton, but I know that doesn't mean anything to a little cheechako like you." He smiled indulgently. "Maybe you'll get a better idea of values when I tell you that the Alaska-Taku averages about two dollars to the ton."

Lynn shook her head. "Such figures only stymie me," she said, her eyes going back to the fireplace. She was thinking it should look like a vulgar success, a veritable monument to bad taste, yet somehow it didn't. . . . Only a man would have dared to build a fireplace of such material. A mining man. On the other hand, only a woman of rare taste could have furnished this room. Greer was a bachelor.

Her conjectures were cut short by the entrance of Mrs. Strum, already changed into a neat blue print and a white tie-around apron. Greer said, "I've been waiting for you, Mrs. Strum. Please show Miss Clonard upstairs to the Ivory room."

"Did you say the—er—Ivory room?"

"I did." Greer spoke with a peculiar emphasis. "Tonglaw will be up with the luggage in a few minutes."

The Ivory room, one of half a dozen that opened off the gallery, was beautiful and completely feminine. Lynn's feet sank deep in the white Chinese rug that covered the floor. Her eyes approved the canopied four-poster, the low, soft chairs upholstered in pastel silks and down, the chaise longue cushioned with down and covered with ivory brocade. There was another smaller gold quartz fireplace with a gold screen, and thru an open door she could see a sun flooded, cream tiled bathroom.

Lynn turned to find Mrs. Strum watching her. "This is the first time I've ever been at a mine, Mrs. Strum. I had no idea these Alaskans did themselves so well when they pioneered. Illahee looks like a rich man's country home, instead of a mining man's headquarters."

• • •

Mumbling something, the housekeeper turned quickly and began smoothing out the already smooth counterpane.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Strum. I didn't get what you said."

"I said it does seem like a rich man's country home when Mr. Greer fills it up with guests. He knows how to give them a royal time, too. Hunting, fishing, fine food, fine liquor. We had two parties here in the early part of June. Big game hunters after brown bear."

"O, I've read about Alaska brown bears. I'd like to see one—but I don't suppose I shall," she added, remembering how soon she was to leave.

"There's no chance for that right around Illahee on account of the activity at the mine. But you can see the skin of one on Mr. Greer's floor, made into a grand big rug. The guide he employs made him a present of it. The bear season's over now for hunters. Our next party—Dr. Hugh Baxter's, from Santa Barbara, is coming for the fishing."

"Mr. Greer certainly entertains a lot."

"He does."

"Am I taking some one's room tonight?" Lynn's eyes moved to the roses, the radio, the magazines.

Mrs. Strum caught the glance. "No. Mr. Greer brought those magazines and things from Juneau this trip. The minute we landed on the float——" a certain preciseness had crept into the housekeeper's diction—"he sent Tonglaw up here to arrange them. He would never put any one in the Ivory room before."

"This is the nicest room in the house," Mrs. Strum went on. "Mr. Greer's other secretary lived in the cabin back of Illahee—the one we fixed up for Mr. Holloway when we thought you and——"

"Mrs. Strum!" Lynn stiffened. "My father and Mr. Greer were old friends." She didn't think it any of the housekeeper's business that she meant to leave in the morning. "It is very thoughtful of Mr. Greer to arrange these little surprises for me—the roses and the magazines."

Mrs. Strum's eyebrows rose, her mouth opened, but before she could say anything, Tonglaw, the tall Indian, came in with Lynn's bags. Under her direction he arranged them conveniently.

"Thank you, Tonglaw," she said, when he had finished.

The Indian drew his white jacketed figure up to its full height. He looked steadily at Lynn. It was a deliberate, long look from black eyes that suddenly flared with hostility and a certain contempt. Then, turning on his heel, he stalked from the room without a word.

Lynn was so taken aback she scarcely heard Mrs. Strum's parting words: "We have dinner at seven, Miss Clonard. And Mr. Greer likes his young ladies to dress for dinner."

"Good evening," she said.

He did not speak or move until she was close; then she saw his eyes change as tho a veil had been snatched away to reveal a look so intensely masculine in its admiration that it went thru her like projected energy. She flushed to the roots of her hair.

What Has Gone Before

Lynn Clonard, alone in the world, spends her Easter vacation with one of her Aunt Julie's friends and meets Perry Holloway, gay and irresponsible, who is heading for Alaska. Perry asks her to put the Clonard motto, "When two roads open up before me I choose the more venturesome," to work—to marry him, that they may go to Alaska together to seek their fortune. They become engaged and will marry at Christmas time. Perry wires her he has a job as foreman in a mine and pleads with her to come immediately to Alaska and marry him there. Lynn has enough money for a small trousseau and a one-way passage. Court Faber, a young mining engineer, rescues Lynn and her dog from an accident on the boat. Perry is late meeting the boat, arriving with two friends—all three hopelessly drunk. At the hotel Lynn tells Perry she will not marry him. Jefferson Greer is approached by Faber and refuses to grant him a right of way to Faber's claim. Lynn finds she has less than $2. Greer tricks Lynn into asking for a job as his secretary at his mine, the Golden Totem. En route to the mine Lynn learns that Perry is aboard the boat and that Greer is Perry's boss. She demands they return at once to Juneau.

Park Board Plans Spacious New Music Court in Grant Park

PROBABLY there never was more eloquent symbol than the pipe of peace, from whose contemplative smoke so many dreams arise. Not that we are smoking it yet, but that the very whiff of it in the distance sets plans whirling like the spirits conjured by "Injun Summer." One of these dreams now taking on substance for the future concerns a music court to be erected at a central point on the Grant park lake front by the Chicago park district, under the direction of its president, Robert J. Dunham, in association with his assistant, the organization's chief engineer, Ralph Burke.

Plans are still in the model stage, but they contemplate a beautiful open air amphitheater both excavated and terraced to give the ultimate desirability in seating arrangements, a large stage suitable for both musical and theatrical production, with a huge screen for special motion picture events, underground rehearsal and dressing rooms, and a front section of seats which can be removed in winter to permit skating to music. Seating capacity of approximately 25,000 is being considered, with an overflow plaza at the rear. Some of the seats would be reserved at popular prices, but the large majority would be free.

Sounds nice, doesn't it? But you don't have to wait until dreams come true to hear more Grant park concerts. Walter Larsen has been made musical director of the concerts, and the 1945 season of eight weeks will be open Wednesday night, June 27, and continue thru Sunday night, Aug. 19. The usual free performances will be played each Wednesday, Friday, and Sunday evening in the present Grant park band shell, with Nicolai Malko conducting the first four weeks and the eighth. The intervening three will have guest conductors, not yet named. Mr. Larsen is now organizing the Grant Park Symphony orchestra for the entire season. One of his leading players will be Philip Farkas, who was first horn of the Chicago Symphony orchestra until Artur Rodzinski lured him to Cleveland. In general, the concerts will be fairly popular in character, and Sunday nights may be used to present young Chicago soloists.

Public Embraces Dowling's Plan.

Eddie Dowling has been practically engulfed in a wave of public approval of his plan to establish a Chicago producing theater at the Civic next season, so I asked him out of the maze of new plays he suggested last week to choose the four his first season subscribers would be most likely to see. He gave me three, and left the fourth open for any topflight new play or classic revival that might seem most feasible when the time comes.

This, you understand, would be for the season of 1945-'46, to open next September. Mr. Dowling would like to start with Sean O'Casey's "Purple Dust," in which he would appear with Bobby Clark, and possibly Billie Burke. Next would come George Savage's Chinese play, "Phoenix and the Dwarfs," with the best Chinese actors available, augmented by American actors, including Mr. Dowling. Third would be Henri Gehron's "The Comedian," which he says is not unlike "The Robe." It is a story of the Roman emperor, Diocletian, and the martyred patron saint of actors, Genesius. [I regret to interpolate here that Delos Avery, asked to name the saint who looks out for thespians, suggested St. Vitus.]

Diocletian [said she, profoundly, having just looked him up in the encyclopedia] was Caius Aurelius Valerius, surnamed Jovius, chosen emperor by his troops at Chalcedon, who promptly turned dictator. He wore a diadem, built up a huge burocracy dependent on himself, forced contributions of produce and labor, and issued the Diocletian edict, an attempt to stabilize prices, which promptly failed. He also persecuted Christians, which is where St. Genesius comes in.

It would be nice, one of these days, to see a fine revival of Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," which was one of Dowling's best shows, staged in collaboration with the Theater Guild. But you could scarcely reassemble that original cast. Besides Dowling and Julie Haydon, whose understudy was Dorothy McGuire, it held Celeste Holm, Gene Kelly, and Bill Bendix. However, a lot of stars have expressed a desire to appear in the Dowling troupe when, as, and if it achieves existence. Some of them are Barry Fitzgerald, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Thomas Mitchell, Jessica Tandy, and Miss McGuire. If Dowling could call on all the actors and directors who at one time or another had appeared in his productions he would have Maurice Evans and Margaret Webster from "King Richard II." and from "Honeymoon Lane" not only Kate Smith, whom he discovered in a barber shop, but Bob Hope, who was his understudy.

Anyway, the project rolls, and I hope soon to have the exact procedure of subscription ticket purchase ready for publication.

Villa-Lobos to Appear at U. of Chicago.

Heitor Villa-Lobos has postponed his return to Brazil for a few days in order to appear at the University of Chicago Feb. 27 when the third of the composers' concerts is devoted to some of his music not yet heard here. First desk men of the Chicago Symphony orchestra have been engaged for his Choros No. 7 for flute, oboe, clarinet, alto saxophone, bassoon, violin, and cello; Quartet for flute, alto saxophone, harp, celeste, and chorus of women's voices, and Trio for piano, violin, and cello. Also on the list is the Bachiana Brasileira No. 1 for eight cellos. The composer will conduct the larger ensembles. This concert replaces the one which had been scheduled for Feb. 16.

"Pagliacci" at Chanute Field.

Down at Chanute field, also the night of Feb. 27, "Pagliacci" will be presented in the sports arena by soldiers, nurses, WACs, wives of soldiers, and just plain civilians. Pvt. Johnny Alexander will sing Canio, Corp. Stuart Piggins will conduct, and the whole thing is under the direction of Lt. Morris Levine, director of music and entertainment at the field, who has been staging such unusual soldier fare as the "Messiah" and "Faust" down there since 1943.

Orchestra to Play Gershwin Work Tuesday

By Albert Goldberg.

Robert Casadesus, eminent French pianist, will be the Chicago Symphony orchestra's soloist at both the Tuesday and Thursday-Friday pair of concerts this week. This is the fourth season Mr. Casadesus has appeared on these programs. Désiré Defauw will be the conductor at all the week's concerts.

Robert Casadesus.

On the Thursday-Friday program Mr. Casadesus will perform two works new to the orchestra's repertory, Mozart's Concerto No. 26 in D major [Köchel No. 537], known as the "Coronation" concerto, and Ravel's Concerto for the Left Hand. The Mozart concerto, tho curiously not heard before on Orchestra hall programs, is one of the best known of the master's works for piano and orchestra. It was written in Vienna in 1788 and derives the title from the fact that it was played by the composer the following year at the coronation ceremonies of Leopold II.

• • •

When the work was completed Wittgenstein found some of the passages too difficult for him and altered them to suit his ability. This aroused Ravel's ire, and in retaliation he chose a young French pianist, Jacques Février, as official interpreter of the concerto and personally coached him in the exact manner he wished it performed. In spite of this, Wittgenstein succeeded in giving the first performance of the piece in Vienna in 1931, tho Février played the American première with the Boston Symphony orchestra in 1937. The concerto has been heard once previously in Chicago at a concert of the Illinois Symphony orchestra in 1941, when the solo part was played by Perry O'Neil, with Antonia Brico conducting.

At the Tuesday concert the music of George Gershwin will make its first appearance on the downtown programs of the orchestra, when Mr. Defauw prefaces a list of works by French composers with "An American in Paris." Complete programs for the week follow:

U. of Iowa Sets Up Program to Aid Veterans

Plan Adapted to Individual Student Needs

By The Rev. John Evans.

The University of Iowa has set up a special instruction program in the colleges of liberal arts and commerce which will facilitate the educational progress of discharged veterans. The program is directed by Dr. Walter R. Goetsch, formerly registrar at Fenn college, Cleveland, O.

"Qualified veterans will be admitted to these two colleges at the beginning of any calendar month," Dr. Goetsch said. "Where, however, such admission does not coincide with the opening of a regular semester the student will be registered for veterans' special instruction."

Dr. Goetsch explained that the individual needs of veterans will determine courses to be offered; that instruction would be organized on a basis where the student can progress at his own speed, and that the program had been adapted to six types of instructional activity.

These types are: Completion of courses interrupted by active service; completion of certain prerequisites; completion of courses partially studied while in service; completion of full semester or year course; completion of preparation for establishment of credit examination, and completion of "refresher" courses.

President Virgil M. Hancher reported that a building program involving 10 million dollars over a considerable period is an immediate necessity to meet post-war needs. Enrolment after the war, President Hancher estimated, would be 25 per cent above pre-war maximum.

"Major projects," he said, "are a new library, a communications center for journalism and visual education, a new pharmacy building and an auditorium. The University of Iowa, therefore, is requesting about four million dollars for the next biennium for capital improvements to begin this building program, the need for which has been expanding for the last 14 years."

• • •

The 1944 survey of Northwestern university's curricular activities discloses that 9,514 men received naval training; registration was 9 per cent over 1943, with 6,202 full time students; that 23 members were added to the faculty, and that returned veteran enrolment increased from 35 to 316.

• • •

Northwestern university has announced the retirement, as of Sept. 1, of Professors Ward V. Evans and T. Moody Campbell under the university's retirement plan. Prof. Evans, chairman of the department of chemistry, has been a faculty member since 1916. He is a national authority on explosives, and his course in that subject was used by OCD as a manual for defense instruction against aerial bombing. Prof. Campbell, dean of the graduate school, came to the university in 1934 as chairman of the German department. His best known published book is "The Life and Works of Friedrich Hebbel."

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery.

GOLLIGUBS FOR THREE.

IF for no better purpose than to find out what a golligub is, I should like to invite all you gourmets to lunch with me Friday—but there's a catch. It cannot be next Friday. In fact, it will have to be a Friday of 30 years ago. Can't make it? You have another engagement?

Next best, then, is to throw what light I can on the golligub by quoting a letter written by James Gibbons Huneker, belles-lettrist, to Henry L. Mencken, editor of the Smart Set, on Jan. 5, 1915. I found it in a volume of Huneker's correspondence published by Scribner's in 1922.

• • •

"Dear Mencken: As you suggest Thursday or Friday, let us make it Friday at 1 p. m. Where? The challenged party in the code duello has the choice of weapons; nevertheless, let me ask you—Italian, French, German, or American? If German—Luchows on 14th street [but as we drink beer later, why not begin elsewhere?]. If American—Jack's; but it's a case of coals going to Newcastle to ask a Baltimorean to eat seafood. What can Jack offer you? [yet you may have a Friday palate and there is lobster fat—pyramids—crab meat a la Jack, and other supreme golligubs]. French? Then old Martin's, cor. 9th and University pl. [The Lafayette is barred because of the "literary" crowd. I distinctly refuse to bring a sensitive newspaper man into such a circle.] Remains—Italian. I know of a place, Frank Busto's, 44 Beaver st., same block as downtown Delmonico's [you get off subway at Bowling Green and walk north two blocks]—good spaghetti, gnocchi, etc., risotto, pastas, etc. Chianti. . . . Ask Nathan* if he knows a "retreat." We must talk as well as guzzle and gobble. Let me know by Thursday. Sir to you! As ever, J. H."

[George Jean Nathan, then dramatic critic of Smart Set.]

So at least we know that crab meat a la Jack and pyramids of lobster fat are golligubs, and perhaps Mencken, high priest of the American language, can name others and explain the etymology. My guess is that Huneker coined the word as a bit of onomatopoeia to imitate the noises ecstatically emitted by persons devouring such food.

• • •

Perhaps oysters are golligubs! I am reminded of oysters by seven letters from readers who demand "more details" on Washington Irving's assertion [Knickerbocker History of New York] that the people of Communipaw, N. J., might have "turned into oysters" if he had not roused them from their perilous torpor by writing about them. Sorry I cannot be helpful, but the only authority cited by Irving [in a footnote] is: "Men by inaction degenerate into oysters.—Kaimes." I had hoped to learn more by looking up "Kaimes," but the only "Kaimes" I found was a Lord Kames [sic] who lived from 1696 to 1782. He compiled "Remarkable Decisions in the Court of Session" and wrote "Essays on the Principles of Morality and Natural Religion"—nothing about oysters, nothing about Communipaw, N. J., nothing about golligubs. Mind if we drop the subject?

• • •

TREASURE TROVE.

Somebody ought to write a scholarly piece—maybe a thesis for a doctorate—on Things Found in Second Hand Books. Here's a free start. I bought for $1.50 the other day a Bohn library copy of Propertius and found a $2 bill between the leaves. It was old style currency, the kind we had before the government reduced the size to save paper.

And in a copy of "The Terrible Siren," by Emanie Sachs, Harpers, 1928, atttacking the moral character of Henry Ward Beecher, I found this indignant couplet scribbled on a scrap of paper adorned with four pink roses:

Who touches a hair of Henry Ward Beecher
Is a low-down, pusillanimous creature.

Clarence Darrow's bookplate was pasted inside the front cover, but I certainly do not suspect him. No telling how many persons owned the book before it became mine.

THE JUNIOR BOOKSHELF

TITLE.	SUBJECT.	VERDICT.
"'WATCH ME,' SAID THE JEEP," by Helen Ferris. [Garden City, $1.]	Humorous story of a little army jeep who, with a wink to his smiling driver and a chuckle to himself, cuts all kinds of capers when the captain, the major and the colonel find their cars stuck in ruts or stranded on the river bank.	Delightful little tale with pictures and text sharing the fun with the young reader. The author is editor in chief of the Junior Literary guild.
"THE SKY BED," by Gudrun Thorne-Thomsen. Illustrated by Nedda Walker. [Scribner, $1.]	Story of a Norwegian Christmas with its Christmas cakes, wassailers and stories, and of the very special surprise which came to little Gerda and Sigrid because of great-grandmother's carved wooden bed.	A charming story for younger children by a distinguished Chicagoan.
"ROCKY MOUNTAIN RANGER," by Wm. Marshall Rush. [Longmans, $2.]	Young Kirk Douglas wanted to be a forest ranger, but low examination marks put him into the probationary service and forced him to prove himself. The story of how he did this is an absorbing and very thrilling one.	Information as well as thrilling accomplishment makes this a fine modern story for older boys and girls.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

WHEN America tomorrow celebrates the birthday anniversary of its greatest citizen, much of the observance will center in Chicago. . . . This city is headquarters for collecting books and manuscripts regarding Abraham Lincoln and the Civil war. . . . It also is the gathering place of the Civil War Round Table, a national organization that believes present day military strategists could learn many lessons from the conflict of 80 years ago.

• • •

Alfred Whital Stern is the owner of the world's largest private Lincoln collection. . . . Housed in the Drake tower, it includes such rarities as the Lincoln-to-Hooker letter—an item which Mr. Stern bought for $15,000 a few years ago. . . . Oliver R. Barrett probably owns more Lincoln manuscripts than does any museum or library in the country. . . . Among them are the President's letter to Gen. Grant, thanking him for saving the country, and the original transcripts of the Lincoln-Douglas debates. . . . Newton C. Farr, civic leader, specializes in the reconstruction period and in books relating to southerners who were responsible for the secessionist movement. . . . Monroe F. Cockrell of the Continental bank goes in for volumes that are "impossible" to find. . . . Last year he acquired Heartsill's "1,491 Days in the Confederate Army," and his copy is believed to be the only one in existence.

• • •

Henry C. Friedman's specialty is juvenile Lincolniana. . . . In his rooms at the Standard club he has shelf after shelf of books relating to the youthful Lincoln and biographies written for children. . . . Included are Beadle's "Dime Life of Lincoln" [1864], Thayer's "The Pioneer Boy" [1863], and all the newer ones, such as Foster's "Abraham Lincoln's World." . . . In his Lake Forest home Lt. Comdr. David H. Annan concentrates on the Confederacy. . . . His collection, perhaps the finest of its kind in private hands, takes in all the significant southern books and Confederate imprints. . . . In Wilmette Dr. and Mrs. Harlan H. Horner have assembled another splendid library. . . . Mrs. Horner is working on a biography of Nancy Hanks; the doctor is doing the life of Horace Greeley.

Following the Civil war an Austrian-American who had served as a captain in the Union army returned to his native land, married, and became the father of a boy who was to become a leading American chemist. . . . Today that son, Otto Eisenschiml, is considered the foremost authority on the assassination of the Emancipator, and he has a copy of virtually every book ever written on that subject. . . . Ray D. Smith, head of an aeronautical school, owns letters from all the Civil war leaders on both sides. . . . Among the other collectors are Joseph Parrish of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Lloyd Lewis and Don Russell of the Daily News, Dr. Carl B. Davis of the Presbyterian hospital, Gen. Manus McCloskey of Cook county hospital, Aaron Jones Jr. of the theatrical firm, Judge Daniel P. Trude of the Superior court, Fred C. Evers, Elmer Gertz, Lt. Col. Harry G. Hershenson, Lt. The Civil War Round Table was formed in 1940 to bring together collectors and students of "the American Trojan wars." . . . Meeting regularly ever since, it attracts guests and members from all over the country. . . . Historians, authors, and research experts have addressed the gatherings.

And Chicago even has an Abraham Lincoln book shop. . . . When Ralph G. Newman opened the store in 1933 most of his friends told him he was crazy. . . . They couldn't believe that a shop dealing almost exclusively in books and allied material concerning Lincoln and the Civil war would succeed. . . . The shop is still prospering. . . . Now in the navy, Mr. Newman has turned over the management of the business to John Valentine for the duration.

Bible Selections for Today's World

"TREASURES FROM THE BIBLE." [Essential Books, $2.50.]

These selections from the world's best seller [six million copies a year], are the result of a nation-wide poll of pastors and chaplains conducted and tabulated by the American Bible society. The society requested that passages especially helpful in days of war be chosen. Their first choice was the 14th chapter of St. John in which Jesus spoke to His disciples on the eve of His crucifixion—an inspiring and comforting passage. The 23d Psalm was the second choice, and the Sermon on the Mount, third. Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, pastor of the First Congregational church of Evanston, has written an illuminating introductory chapter, "The Bible and Life." This brief volume may perform a valuable service, if by disclosing a small number of the "mountain peaks" of the Bible it encourages one to further exploration.
LARRY WOLTERS.

Life of George Sand.

Frances Winwar has notified her publisher [Harper] that her latest biography, tentatively titled "George Sand and the Romantics," is nearly completed.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

THE publication on Tuesday of Temple Bailey's "Red Fruit," a novel about present day Washington, reminds me of a quip in "Shipmate," the United States Naval academy alumni magazine [relayed by the World Publishing company's "Counterpoints."] . . . It says: "The navy, always relishing a chance to needle its army friends, plans to erect this sign after the war in the army's mammoth Pentagon building, 'Washington Slept Here.'"

By a natural association of ideas, here are a few bits of news anent "Forever Amber." . . . To our knowledge to date three babies have been named for its caloric heroine. . . . Two were christened simply "Amber." . . . The third is legally named "Forever Amber" and will be called "Ever" for short. . . . When she grows up, she may insist on "Never." . . . Also to date the sizzling tale has been translated into Portuguese, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, German, French, Italian, and Spanish. . . . Its theme is said to be a universal language.

Esperanto Still Survives.

And speaking of universal languages, I just received an announcement of a book published by the National Institute of Esperanto . . . called "Green Star." . . . I would have thought that, since the emergence of Basic English, Esperanto might be listed among the dead languages, along with Ido [otherwise known as Esperanto Reformed], Volapuk, Universala, Novilatin, Idiom Neutral, Ro, Spartari-Radio-Code, and Angelic, the universal languages proposed since 1879.

Stevenson's Lack of Confidence.

Six years after the first proposal of Volapuk as an international language—in 1885, that is—Robert Louis Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verses" was published, to become a part of all juvenile reading in English. . . . On a recent Quiz Kids program little Joel Kupperman quoted three of the poems from it. . . . As a result of that broadcast he received a letter from California from Mrs. Salisbury Field, the poet's step-daughter, which is an illuminating bit of Stevensoniana. . . . It says:

"Dear Joel: I heard you over the radio reciting poems from 'The Child's Garden of Verses' [so she writes the title]. It may interest you to know that the author left a note for my mother [Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson] to be opened after his death. In it he advised her to have his biography published as soon as possible, adding—'for by fame will not last more than four years.'

"You, Joel Kupperman, proved him wrong when you recited his verses more than 50 years after his death. Mr. Stevenson never saw a radio. . . . Had he heard your young voice reciting his verses, he would have been amazed at that strange instrument, but even more amazed that his fame had endured so long."

Humility of the Great.

Few authors are so unsure of their future fame, but there is a true humility about all of the very great. . . . One of the most modest human beings I ever knew was Henry Hoyns, chairman of the board of the fine old publishing firm, Harper & Brothers, which is 118 years old this year. . . . When he died recently book publishing lost one of its most efficient, but gentlest, influences. . . . He was largely responsible for the National Association of Book Publishers and other means of friendly cooperation among the publishers. . . . It was as a fine friend as well as a fine publisher that hundreds of people in the book business knew him . . . authors, booksellers, reviewers. . . . He was never too busy to talk to the lowliest. . . . I was a scared young book reviewer when I first met him and he was then president of a great publishing firm, but he treated me as if I really mattered—and that quality is not only a rare but a very endearing one even in the publishing business, which has more endearing qualities, as well as endearing human elements, than any other business on earth. . . . When Henry Hoyns was alive, I could, just by talking to him for a few minutes, recharge a low voltage ego. . . . I have known many authors who felt the same way about him. . . . In his quiet, shy way, he gave one renewed confidence.

Anent a new novel, Lee Barker, clever editorial head of Doubleday, Doran, confides the following sage comment, which applies to much of present day fiction: "It may lack something as a novel, but it certainly packs a wallop. In these last two years the novel form has taken a real beating. I don't know whether it's such a bad thing or not, but I do know that half of our fiction reads like nonfiction and half of our nonfiction reads like fiction."

Thurber Calls for Thurber.

Whether it is fiction or fact, this is a good story about James Thurber, whose "The Thurber Carnival" probably went to a hundred thousand or so Book of the Month club readers. . . . They say that when he is in a blue mood, he calls up the New Yorker and asks for himself. . . . When the switchboard operator tells him that he is out, he feels better. . . . The April choice of the club will be Rosamond Lehmann's "The Ballad and the Source," the third novel by that weaver of lovely literary phrases to be thus chosen. . . . "Dusty Answer" in 1927 and "Invitation to the Waltz" in 1932 were the others.

If you can't get a ticket on it, at least you can read about the Santa Fe railroad . . . and thus learn a lot you never knew about the history of the great southwest . . . when James Marshall's fact and excitement packed book is published. . . . Those who have read parts of the MS. say it's a sure bull's, I mean a bison's, eye hit.

And since we've got our minds on the west, I offer as the most brilliantly descriptive subtitle the one which Joseph Kinsey Howard appended to his popular book of last year on "Montana" . . . published by Yale University Press. . . . He subtitles it "High, Wide, and Handsome." . . . A happy title suggested for a proposed book by Hedda [Hollywood] Hopper in a popular weekly magazine would be "Malice in Wonderland."

Soldiers Not Eligible.

The John Day company reports that its recent announcement of a Foreign Service Book contest is misunderstood by some members of the armed forces, who believe themselves eligible. The contest is not for them, but for members of the American foreign service as such—consuls, ministers, and other civilian diplomatic personnel.

Phil Regan's Songs Find Favor in Mayfair Room

Irish Singer Is Generous with His Offerings

By Will Davidson.

You can get your Phil of songs that never grow old down at the Blackstone hotel. Phil Regan, the handsome lad whose portrait adorns page one of this section today, is doing what every one considers his finest singing job in the Mayfair room. He is completely generous with his offerings, and never has he been in better voice.

With his very charming family in the room, and practically all the Irish this side of Killarney to cheer him on, Phil opened to one of the most spontaneously and genuinely affectionate welcomes any entertainer has received in the plush Mayfair room. He's holding to that pace, too, and that is what counts.

What does he sing? Name practically any song, and that's it. He even makes "The Trolley Song" sound good to me—especially with the cute twist he gives its introduction. Phil did 15 numbers during his opening show, and they ranged from "I'll Be Seeing You" to "The Same Old Shillalah." He does Bing Crosby's "Too Ra Loo Ra Loo Ral" beautifully; he includes everybody in "Dear Old Donegal"; and he stops the whole show with the country's new novelty hit—"Moitle, My Toitle.' That is a delicious song, as Phil sings it.

• • •

Bill Snyder has his innings in the Mayfair show, too. Mr. Bill is an elegant pianist and he gives his ability a full bodied outlet in a program of piano solos to open the entertainment. His serious work, such as the Warsaw concerto, is splendid, but I got the biggest lift out of his "Ridin' the Offbeat," a vital, exciting bit of fast piano technique.

Bill's orchestra continues to play the best society music in town [I'm differentiating it from sassiety rhythm, which Bill wisely avoids], both for dancing and shows.

Swing fans have a chance to get well acquainted with one of the best and friendliest young maestros in the field now, in the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman. I'm referring to Hal McIntyre, who served his name band apprenticeship with Glenn Miller, after being discovered up in a Connecticut radio studio by Benny Goodman.

Hal has been acclaimed as a leader in the sweet swing field, yet you will find more honest jazz in this band than in most of the big commercial outfits. He selects his arrangements carefully so that the full potentialities of his instrumentation are always realized, and under control—yet within that framework he gives his men an unusual amount of leeway. With good men, such as Joe Wiedman and Fred Austin, trumpets, and John Hayes, sax, Hal profits handsomely by this policy.

Wiedman usually carries the trumpet solo burden, and beautifully, but Austin offers some silvery interpolations that are elegant. Hal's own sax is the peer of any in his band, but he doesn't hog the solo spot. Practically never does he use his clarinet, of which more should be heard.

Hal's brass section is well tempered, altho at present it is—like all brass sections at the start—too loud for the Inn. But it is loud with music, not mere decibels. The rhythm section, featuring Eddie Safranski on the bass, is firm and capable. Eddie does a neat solo in the show, his own "Concerto for Bass."

Hal's vocalists are Al Nobel and Ruth Gaylor, two of whom he can be very proud. He can be proud of the whole outfit, and the band can be proud of him, for seldom do you find a more genuinely friendly fellow, or one who is wiser in his understanding of the way a good band is built.

Buddy Franklin, called in suddenly to fill a vacancy in the Walnut room of the Bismarck, has proved a find for that spot. First of all, Buddy is a charming master of ceremonies, and a generous one. He ties that excellent Walnut room show together beautifully, and presents his own share of it deftly.

Secondly, Buddy is a musician with a nice feel for a room, and is shaping his music to fit the Walnut room perfectly. He uses his excellent violin section to very good advantage, especially in the floor show. Buddy, of course, is the star fiddler of them all.

Harriet Collins, tall and blonde, is Buddy's vocalist, and the way she handles "Funny that Way" and "St. Louis Blues" is very much all right with Walnut room patrons.

The floor show at the Bismarck continues to be its best, starring as it does the vibrant dances of Talia, and the superb marionettes of Art Nelson.

A brief review of the new Blackhawk show was crowded out last Sunday, but it probably was just as well. Edward and Diane, a handsome and effective dance team, have just come back to work after his army discharge, and when viewed had not achieved the smoothness and deftness you associate with them. As for the other act in the show—Parker and Porthole—the less said, the better for Mr. Parker. For some unaccountable reason he has cheapened his material, even to the point of crudity. It spoils one of the most novel and entertaining of the "ventriloquist" acts.

Chuck Foster, Gloria and Jimmy Confer, however, carry on in fine fashion, and are one of the definite top attractions on the Blackhawk books. Del Courtney will be coming back Feb. 21, so hurry to hear Chuck, and to marvel again at Gloria's beauty and her voice.

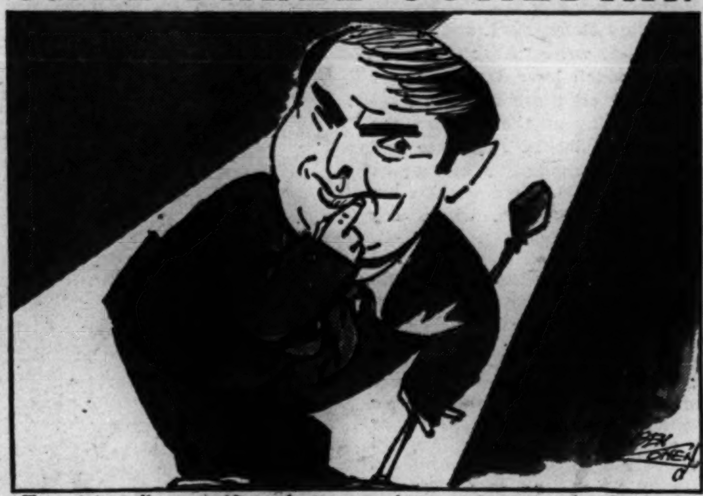
Boswelling the Bistros:

Both Henry King and Billy Bishop will be on the Aragon bandstand for the annual Valentine day dance Wednesday. It's "sweetheart night," too, so the girl gets in free. . . . A wedding invitation I'm sorry I couldn't accept came from a couple to whom I wish a lot of happiness, Catherine Collier, cashier at the Ambassador East hotel, and Joe Chesloe, formerly a waiter there, who was quite a fighter in his day.

CHEZ PAREE COMEDIAN



Zero Mostel's magnificently insane characterizations are the highlight of the Chez Paree's current show. He does everything from a coffee percolator to a bird lecturer.

Notes of the Theater

"Blossom Time" has played almost every theater in Chicago at one time or another, but it celebrates its 25th anniversary by taking over the Civic Opera house for three weeks starting Feb. 26. Virginia Card is the new Mitzi—she sang here in the original engagement of "The Waltz King"—while Earl Covert is Franz Schubert, Ruth Gillette the Bellabruna, and William Marel the tenor Baron Schober. Others include Zella Russell, Edmund Dorsay, Harry K. Morton, and Victor Morley. There is talk about augmenting the ballet for the big stage, and no one who knows the size of the opera warehouse would be surprised to see some operatic décor flourishing in operetta.

• • •

"On Whitman Avenue," a play by Maxine Wood about the Negro segregation problem, is listed for fall production by Rudolph Allen, the producer who got in a squabble with Gloria Swanson when "A Goose for the Gander" was here. He says he would like to put it on in Chicago next fall for several weeks in advance of New York. That city, as you probably know, was no kinder than Chicago to the goose and gander piece concocted by Harold J. Kennedy to return Miss Swanson to the stage. It folded fast.

• • •

Rachel Crothers' admirers have had a long wait between plays, but John Golden hopes to have "Bill Comes Back" on the New York stage the week of March 12. Victor Jory and Judith Evelyn are costarred. Miss Evelyn made her big success in "Angel Street," and Mr. Jory played the murderous husband in the Chicago duplication. More recently, he played a similarly treacherous cavalier in "The Two Mrs. Carrolls."

• • •

"Cavalcade of Stars" is the name of a benefit to be staged Thursday night, Feb. 22, at the Chicago Stadium under the auspices of the Illinois state department of the Disabled American Veterans. Proceeds will be used in the campaign to find jobs for returning disabled and wounded service men. Stars of radio, screen, and stage are being invited to appear, along with the Dorothy Byton Girls, the Six Lovely Ladies, the Singing Marines, and Bert Lynn, who plays the electric guitar.

• • •

When Gen. George Marshall saw Ruth Gordon's comedy, "Over Twenty-One," in Washington, he asked Miss Gordon and her producer, Max Gordon, to allow its presentation by two U. S. O. companies. They agreed, and it is said to be the first new play to be presented to the armed forces without royalty. The two troupes were headed by Erin O'Brien-Moore and Dorothy Gish. During her tour between the two Chicago engagements, Miss Gordon fell ill, but the show didn't close. Miss O'Brien-Moore filled in two weeks, and Miss Gish one week. Maybe her gesture didn't pay royalties, but it certainly paid dividends.

New Comedy Gets Brushoff on Broadway

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK [Special]. — Once again Broadway has proved that anything does not go, even in times like these when people yelp about not being able to get tickets to anything. An ordinary little play, "Alice in Arms," comes in and practically meets itself at the stage door going out. A flop is still a flop.

"Alice" makes a good case history for a clinical study, for its weakness was a too common one. It substituted talk for events, and was a good illustration of the practically insane tendency among playwrights to have things happen somewhere else instead upon the stage.

The Alice of "Alice in Arms" was Peggy Conklin, still an attractive ingenue after all these years and a very able comedienne. She was a WAC returned from overseas to resume civilian life in her small Pennsylvania home town. Part of this resumption of civilian life meant the obvious marriage to the obvious civilian stuffed shirt. In pursuit of her came a sergeant who had fallen in love with her in Normandy, and, of course, he finally got her. It is one of the rules of current play writing that no civilian can beat a soldier out of a girl. This same theme — soldier gets girl, confounds stuffed shirt—also is employed in a very amusing hit, "Dear Ruth."

It took three playwrights—Ladislas Bus-Fekete, who now calls himself Bush-Fekete as a help to our pronunciation; Mrs. Ladislas Bus-Fekete [Mary Helen Fay], and Sidney Sheldon—to write "Alice in Arms." They shouldn't have done it in war time. With all those dramaturgical brains beating up the problem, the comedy still lacked substance and invention. The most interesting part of the play took place offstage—in Normandy and Paris, where boy and girl fell in love.

• • •

Boy and girl tried to let the audience in the romance by talking about it. They said, "Do you remember when . . ." and "And then we did . . ." and many other things which gave them pleasure but left me cold because I hate hashed-over events. I want to be in on things when they happen whenever I go to a play or movie. Or even when I go to somebody's house. No conversation is so dull as the talk between a set of people who know something I don't know, or somebody I haven't met.

"Alice in Arms" also had the weakness of complete banality. Nobody ever spoke or behaved interestingly, and the characters of a small town household were all out of stock: The hungry boarder, the sharp kid brother, the postman who knew everybody, the mother who was dumb and fluttery but really kind of nice.

Earlier this season the Bus-Feketes failed sufficiently to enliven "Embezzled Heaven." Ethel Barrymore gave a splendid performance and made the play look better than it was, but even so it wasn't quite good enough.

VICTORIAN

Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon don Victorian garb for their latest costarring film, "Mrs. Parkington." At the United Artists.

The habit of playwrights to have things happen offstage is a bad one. They know they shouldn't do it, yet they just can't help themselves. They know it rarely succeeds yet they keep on trying.

Only one dramatist this season succeeded in convincing me that something which took place offstage was important and interesting. This was Laurence Stallings, author of the ill-fated "The Streets Are Guarded."

Mr. Stallings sent his American warriors on a raid upon a Jap island. First the boys talked it up, then they departed. Next act they were back—and they had to tell what happened because this was the meat of the play. It was tribute to Mr. Stallings' skill as a writer and to the skill of the cast as actors that this raid, which nobody was permitted to see, was real and exciting.

• • •

"The Streets Are Guarded" was a failure, but not, I believe, on account of the raid that wasn't there. Some of the reviewers appeared to be befogged by what they thought was too much mysticism and symbolism in the drama, and their lugubrious reports certainly didn't help any.

Under certain circumstances it is all right for something to take place offstage, just so long as it isn't piano-playing. Nobody should be allowed to pretend he's working on a piano while conducting a witty conversation, when all the time it is some hired hand from local 802 playing another piano in the wings.

Quite a bit takes place offstage in "The Voice of the Turtle." The breezy trollop goes helling around, and the soldier takes the girl to the theater and to a restaurant next door. But these events are appropriate and legitimate conversational fill-ins; never are they really important to the plot. Everything important to the plot takes place right in the apartment, onstage.

• • •

In "Harvey" there is an offstage event which is important, but the author, Mary Chase, gets away with it. Perhaps in an earlier draft she wrote this scene for the stage, but cut it out in the process of saving time. Anyhow, this offstage happening is when Elwood P. Dowd [Frank Fay] and his friend the Rabbit get the psychiatrist drunk. You are merely told about the event, and sort of wish you had been in on it; but the telling is very entertaining, and at least you get in on the tail end of it by watching the psychiatrist come onstage stewed—and haunted by the Rabbit.

The failure of "Rebecca" was mostly because one never had the chance to witness such important things as the discovery of Rebecca's body and the search for the doctor whose testimony was absolutely vital to the plot.

Any would-be dramatist might well paste in his hat the simplest dictionary definition of a play:

"The representation or exhibition of some action or story on the stage."

"Now there emerged

a magnificent and wonderful race of people. They were Americans, and their ages ranged from about eighteen to twenty-five or even thirty. Boys and girls. They were, perhaps, the fruit of the past ten years. Evidently they had not spent those ten years idly. These boys and girls were possessed of great dignity for their years. They were quiet and resourceful. They talked little but seriously and well. They had risen out of the gaudy 1920s and the desperate 1930s. They were, I thought, the best generation that America had produced since the old covered wagon pioneer days."—Edna Ferber.

GREAT SON is Edna Ferber's story of the Melendys of Seattle. But it is especially the story of Mike Melendy, clear-eyed, sharp-visioned representative of the new generation.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

CHICAGO has produced no more distinguished literary figure than Henry Blake Fuller. Approximately 15 years after his death, he appears to be the one "Chicago author," if we except a poet or two, whose reputation is secure. It is slight, but sufficient. A "writer's writer," his fine books are still unknown to the thundering herd and are likely to remain so; but critics give him high rating as an artist and collectors purchase his slim volumes with satisfaction. It is not a bad fate.

His importance in the story of our local culture is, of course, considerable. His larger importance has not yet been assessed; but obviously he is a "little master" who refused to compromise with public taste and paid the penalty of public neglect. He is worth a biography or, better still, he might be made the pivotal figure in a history of Chicago's two literary "movements," in both of which he participated. He is the subject of a valuable chapter in Hamlin Garland's "Roadside Meetings of a Literary Nomad" and of an appreciative essay in Carl van Vechten's "Excavations." After his death, in 1929, Anna Morgan edited and Ralph Fletcher Seymour published a volume of "Tributes to Henry B." which also will be useful to the memorialist of literary Chicago.

Library Acquires Fuller MSS.

This department is happy to report that Fuller's manuscripts and other "papers" have now been acquired by the Newberry library, a notable acquisition. They are the records of an interesting and devoted literary life, beginning with Harry Fuller's report cards at Moseley school in the 1870s. He got 100 in geography, 70 in arithmetic, 92 in grammar, 88 in history, and 95 in reading and writing; sometimes he got 100 in everything. He started many diaries but seldom kept them going. One of the earliest, written at the age of 12, is a "Private Diary of 1869." It contains an essay on the leopard, essays on trees and autumn, a play—"Blanch and Rosalinda"—and a poem beginning, "Summer we welcome thee, we welcome thee back, old friend." There are later schoolboy diaries, one called "A Legacy to Posterity," and a long journal of a European tour [1879-'80], apparently written for publication but never published.

Historically important items in the collection are the original manuscripts of a number of his books, among them "The Chatelaine of La Trinité," "With the Procession," and "The Puppet Booth." Unpublished manuscripts are numerous; one called "Chicago" compares the city to mediaeval France, and another, "Near the Bright Lights," is described as a "two man story of club life in Chicago and factory life in South Bend."

Rejected by Van Wyck Brooks.

Rejection slips are attached to many of the unpublished pieces. It is interesting to note that Van Wyck Brooks politely declined "The Big Show at Camberra," when it was offered to the Freeman, and that the Delineator returned "The Rented Madonna" because, in the editor's opinion, the frequent allusion to artists in the story would be lost on a majority of the magazine's readers!

The collection also contains the words and music of two unpublished and unproduced light operas—"Mariquita" and "Pipistrello"—to remind us that Fuller was an accomplished musician. Altogether a fascinating and remarkably complete dossier on one of Chicago's most mysterious and remarkable men of letters.

Was Tennyson Third Rank?

Of Alfred Tennyson, most famous of Victorian poets, an anonymous English critic wrote in the Temple Bar Magazine of May, 1869: "Our proposition is that he is not a great poet, unquestionably not a poet of the first rank, all but unquestionably not a poet of the second rank, and probably—tho no contemporary perhaps can settle that—not even at the head of the poets of the third rank, among whom he must ultimately take his place."

That is almost precisely the proposition of W. H. Auden, the English modernist poet, whose "Selections from the Poems of Alfred Lord Tennyson" has just been published by Doubleday, 75 years after the criticism just quoted. His introduction to the book is a searching critical analysis of one of the great, bearded prodigies of poetry; and it may be that he has done the ol dpoet a considerable service in editing him for modern readers. At any rate he has reduced the vast bulk of the overstuffed classic known as "Tennyson's Poems" to the pleasing dimensions of a pocket volume with, I think, surgical intelligence. Unless you believe Tennyson's high water marks as a poet are his "Enoch Arden," the "Idylls of the King," and "The Charge of the Light Brigade," you will probably approve the benevolent mayhem practiced on him by his latest editor.

As an example of Auden's vigorous approach to his task, I quote his startling portrait of the poet: "He had a large, loose-limbed body, a swarthy complexion, a high, narrow forehead, and huge bricklayer's hands; in youth he looked like a gypsy; in age like a dirty old monk; he had the finest ear, perhaps, of any English poet; he was also undoubtedly the stupidest; there was little about melancholia that he didn't know; there was little else that he did." There is a paragraph for another editor, 75 years hence.

How Egypt Got Its Name.

In the "memoirs" of Daniel Harmon Brush, one of the founders of Carbondale, just published, a new explanation is offered of the origin of the term "Egypt," as applied to the southern extremity of Illinois. Speaking of shipping corn in 1833, this old timer writes: "I was engaged in receiving and measuring that purchased at our town by parties who came down into 'Egypt' to buy. I believe this fact was the cause of the appellation 'Egypt' having been given to southern Illinois. The people of the north had to go down into Egypt for their seed corn."

Various other explanations have been advanced, at one time and another, adds the editor in a footnote; "such as the deltalike character of the Cairo region, the presence in the area of a number of place names taken from ancient Egypt, etc."

Col. Brush's autobiography, now called "Growing Up with Southern Illinois," is the latest addition to R. R. Donnelley & Sons' Lakeside Classics, and is the first of the famous series to be printed from a hitherto unpublished manuscript. It is edited by Milo M. Quaife. Col. Brush died in 1890. His recollections cover the period 1820-'61.

F.P.A. Tells Pretty Near Everything

"NODS AND BECKS," by Franklin P. Adams. [Whittlesey House, $2.]

Reviewed by Delos Avery.

Mr. Adams knows, if you will take his word for it, "almost everything"; and he tells, if you will take mine, almost everything he knows—including the inside story of how he makes a living, such as it is, and pretty good at that, by working 30 minutes a week as an Information Pleaser.

Most readers of "Nods and Becks" will, I am sure, begin by reading the Information Please chapter straight thru, then skip around thru the book, nibbling poems and anecdotes. I quote a poem:

Once E. A. Poe
Drank H2O.

That, I think, is one of the most satisfying horror poems in our language, perfect in rhyme and meter, vivid in imagery; and it is distinguished by a verbal economy which would have been quite impossible if the subject's name had chanced to be Rabindranath Tagore.

Mr. Adams sometimes writes longer poems, especially when he is translating the odes of Horace, one of which [Book I, Ode 22] will be found on page 28. But as a translator he is far from trustworthy, as even the most casual reader must perceive when he finds the last Latin line of this ode rendered as "Franklin D. Roosevelt," an obvious overestimate of the period covered by the present tenancy of the White House.

Much of the book is made up of excerpts from what Mr. Adams calls "The Diary of Our Own Samuel Pepys."

Kip Farrington Jr., Van Campen Heilner, and many other writers well known to sportsmen are represented in this collection of top notch stories and essays of dogs, horses, hunting, fishing, mountain climbing, and other sports. The author has made such a splendid selection of material that the book has a very definite appeal to lovers of sporting literature.

THE MURDER CHART

By Drexel Drake.

ENTRY.	PERFORMANCE.	PAYOFF.
"REMEMBERED DEATH," by Agatha Christie. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]	It had been accepted that Rosemary Barton, wealthy young wife, had committed suicide when she died of poisoned wine at a small party. Anonymous notes hinting murder caused the husband a year later to invite the same guests to a party. His intended trap led to spectacular results.	Wealth of dramatic substance in lives of principal characters, cleverly interwoven in plot that presents thoroly interesting puzzle,
"THEY NEVER SAY WHEN," by Peter Cheyney. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]	Charming young women of various temperaments and divergent interests are involved in theft of Denys Coronet, and murder it leads to, so Slim Callaghan, London sleuth, has fertile field for his peculiar talents while digging thru to facts in complex puzzle.	This detective is still in high gear when it comes to dealing with enigmatic women, absorbing whisky, and outguessing Scotland Yard. Story moves swiftly, affording thrills, excitement, and amusement.
"APPLEBY'S END," by Michael Innes. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]	Detective-Inspector Appleby is tossed among some queer members of the Raven family, and runs against a spooky mixture of legend and fact recorded by old Ranulph Raven in his mystery novels, when he unravels some complicated snarls of family history and provides the answer to a baffling puzzle.	Persons, names, places, and episodes in this story are a deliciously diverting concoction. Plot is a brilliant conception, lavishly unrolled in subtly humorous vein, altho writing often is heavy and will frighten hit-and-run readers.

Poland Seen Moderately, Objectively

"POLAND," edited by Bernadotte E. Schmitt. [University of California Press, $5.]

Reviewed by Hans J. Morgenthau.

In the current controversy over the future of Poland, people will take their stand either on certain abstract principles of justice or upon considerations of political expediency. The object of the controversy, the people and the civilization of Poland, is generally lost sight of.

This book, beautifully printed and illustrated, speaks of Poland itself, its geography, anthropology, constitution, political parties, domestic and foreign policies, minorities, agriculture, religion, education, and culture. It speaks of these things thru eminent experts, Polish and non-Polish, and its spirit of objectivity and moderation is symbolized by its dedication to Gen. Sikorski, whose death in 1943 as prime minister of Poland will be recorded by future historians as a major tragedy for Poland and Europe alike.

It would have been forgivable if the authors, who, of course, are favorably inclined toward the political aspirations of the Polish people, would have glossed over some of the more glaring deficiencies of Polish policies of the past to which some of the Polish difficulties of the present can be traced. Thus one might perhaps have understood it if the nefarious role of Mr. Beck, the foreign minister of Poland in the thirties, had been minimized. That this has not been done shows the unusual degree of objectivity which the authors under the guidance of Prof. Bernadotte E. Schmitt, the eminent historian of the University of Chicago, have achieved. This objectivity is such that the book could be read with equal advantage by the adherents of the Polish government in exile and by the followers of the Lublin government. No higher praise can be given to a book of this kind.

Peace Problems Viewed by Group of Specialists

"NEW PERSPECTIVES ON PEACE," edited by George B. de Huszar. [University of Chicago, $2.50.]

Reviewed by John Randolph.

Peace, among nations, is more than the absence of armed conflict. In fact, peace is more complicated than war. Indeed, it might be said that when peace becomes too complicated war follows to clear up the mess.

Just how complicated the problems of peace are is told in outline in a very handy manner in this introduction to the subject. The plural is used advisedly, for it is not one but many problems. Ten specialists at the University of Chicago each contribute a chapter on peace in their field. Charles Colby covers the geographical aspect; Avery Craven, the historical; Robert Redfield, the ethnological; Jacob Viner, the economic; William Fielding Ogburn, the sociological; Quincy Wright, the legal; Robert J. Havighurst, the educational; David Slight, the psychological; Richard McKeon, the philosophic, and James Luther Adams, the religious.

In a brilliant introductory essay, de Huszar, the editor of the volume, discusses the subject in perspective. His thesis is that peace has not been studied enough. War has received far more attention, he says. What thinking there has been on peace has been far too loose. He deplores, especially, the tendency to think about it in legal terms. He advocates a rounded study, with emphasis on the human, sociological, and psychological factors.

The book should be required reading for all who want to talk about peace. The conclusion it leaves in this reader's mind is that there is enough knowledge to eradicate war, but mankind is not ready to use the knowledge.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Yehudi Menuhin, appearing at the Civic Opera house this afternoon at 3:30 on the History and Enjoyment of Music series, will play his "Khevenhueller" Stradivarius violin, valued at more than $100,000. The instrument was made for the Princess Khevenhueller of Vienna in 1733 and during its entire history is said to have been played by only four other violinists. It was presented to Menuhin on his 12th birthday by a New York music patron who obtained it from Prof. Popoff, former musician at the court of the last czar of Russia. Before that the Strad had belonged to the Hungarian violinist Josef Boh, who permitted only one of his pupils, Joseph Joachim, to play it. Menuhin also will give a recital in the Sinai Temple Forum, at Hyde Park High school, 6200 Stony Island av., tomorrow night at 8:15.

The Royal Air Force Symphonic band of 108 pieces will give a concert to promote the sale of war bonds in Medinah temple on Wednesday at 8:30. The group has been touring A. A. F. installations in the United States under an exchange agreement with the A. A. F. band which is visiting R. A. F. installations in England. The organization is under the direction of Wing Comdr. R. P. O'Donnell, and is composed of two units, a military band and a symphony orchestra, which play separately and together. The assistant conductor is 28 year old Pilot Officer John Hollingsworth, reported to be the youngest English conductor to have directed leading British orchestras. Soloist with the R. A. F. musicians will be Leading Aircraftman Denis Matthews, said to be, at 23, one of England's leading pianists.

Not many debutantes in the concert halls have the varied background of Florence Korsak, a soprano who will make her recital debut in Kimball hall on Wednesday at 8:20. After graduating from Northwestern university law school Miss Korsak was encouraged to become a professional singer by George Czaplicki, noted baritone, and has since pursued her studies with such operatic notables as Astolfo Pescia of New York, Maria Kurenko, Rosa Raisa, and Bianca Saroya. With William Whitaker at the piano, Miss Korsak will sing an aria from "Il Trovatore" and groups of songs by ancient Italian, modern Spanish and Russian, and contemporary American composers.

Lucky holders of tickets probably need no reminder, but Vladimir Horowitz' postponed piano recital is scheduled for Orchestra hall tomorrow night at 8:15.

The Budapest Quartet's final 1945 appearance in these parts—the group will not be at Ravinia next summer—will take place at Kimball hall on Tuesday at 8:15. The event is the third in the chamber music series sponsored by the Howard Will management. The program consists of Debussy's Quartet in G minor, a Quartet in E flat written by Hindemith in 1943 and dedicated to the Budapest Quartet, and Schubert's Quartet in D minor, the one with variations based on "Death and the Maiden."

BOOK NEWS AND REVIEWS

Readers of Romance Get Two Tidbits

"BURNED FINGERS," by Kathleen Norris. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]

"RED FRUIT," by Temple Bailey. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

Here they are, those large eyed, innocent, appealing, exquisite, capable, sympathetic, and incredibly thin young heroines who make strong men want to take care of them. With hardly a thought beyond humble goodness in their pretty heads, they wend their self-effacing ways thru life, and inevitably land the catch of the town.

• • •

Kathleen Norris, being so well acquainted with her particular type of frail-and-lovely, writes a convincing story of a beautiful, tawny haired creature who "always done right," altho her heart yearned over a worthless so-and-so. At last she recovered, but not until the reader has followed her thru one hazard after another.

An expert on the sentimental, Mrs. Norris writes credible tales of misspent loves, and makes them sound as tho they actually happened. She has varied her pattern in this case by putting most of her characters in uniform, which lends excitement to the course of true love that runs so unevenly thruout her stories.

• • •

"Red Fruit" is about a lovely innocent on her way to New York to hunt a job, and a wealthy young lieutenant on his way to his mother's vast mansion and blooming apple orchard in Maryland. They meet on a train, and she offers him a piece of cake, out of her lunch box. She has made it herself. It bowls him over. But everything dangerous happens before he discovers that she is THE ONE.

Both these stories are entirely concerned with youth. Not the youth of the city streets, but the rare and exotic flowers that grow out of drab surroundings. Thus neither touches reality for more than a moment, tho Mrs. Norris is so eloquent that at times we think she does. And for both writers the end of all doubts and difficulties is marriage.

Beauty Is Found in Georgetown's Fine Old Houses

"GEORGETOWN HOUSES OF THE FEDERAL PERIOD: 1780-1830," by Deering Davis, Stephen P. Dorsey, and Ralph Cole Hall. [Architectural Book Publishing Co., $5.]

Reviewed by Rexford Newcomb.

This book, beautifully illustrated with photographs, mainly by Harris & Ewing, sets forth the architectural charms of Georgetown, D. C., where today dozens of venerable houses front pleasantly shaded streets that once knew Washington and Jefferson.

No one who visits the national capital can afford to miss this fine old city, now a part of Washington, which, settled in the late 17th century, was laid out as a town forty years in advance of the capital. This volume, with its accurate map of the street plan, its plentiful exterior and interior photographs of the many important houses and its copious notes on those houses, forms a splendid introduction and an admirable guide.

There are chapters on the historical backgrounds, on the federal architecture of Georgetown, on Dr. William Thornton, the brilliant physician-architect of the period, and on each of the more important houses, like Dumbarton [Bellevue] and Tudor Place. Attention is paid to President Washington's holdings on Capitol hill and to the pre-Revolutionary dwellings. Finally there is a street-by-street guide to the fine "old masters" still standing. Nancy McClelland writes an informative foreword.

Huge Printings Are Planned for Armed Service Editions

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

OVER 85,000,000 copies of good books—classics, best-sellers, westerns, and timely works just off the press—will be printed this year by the Council on Books in War Time for the Armed Services editions that go to the soldiers and sailors everywhere. This estimate was announced by Philip Van Doren Stern, manager of the editions, at the annual meeting of the council, which is an organization of all publishers coöperating in this gigantic war work. The total printings for last year reached 50,000,000 copies and books are coming from the presses at a rate of 7,000,000 a month; by July it will be 8,000,000. A total of 534 titles is available and 600 titles are in production.

We heard plenty about the remarkable welcome that these little books are getting at the front. The only complaint is that there are not enough. Lewis Gannett, book critic, who has been a correspondent in France for six months, came back with the word of one officer that next to the invention of penicillin the books of the Armed Services editions are the most useful innovation of this war. He said that no one realizes what long, boresome hours fall to the lot of the soldier. He pictured a man in an outpost, whose sole duty is to be ready to answer the field telephone, and to whom these little books are a blessing. In camp and in hospitals the books help fill the long hours. Similar testimony was brought from France by Lt. Col. Ray L. Trautman of the library section of the special services division of the armed forces. He said men were so eager to get the books that in one place where they were rare soldiers paid one another as high as $10 a copy. In another place no soldier was allowed to have a book unless he promised to read it aloud to his buddies. Col. Trautman saw one copy in a hospital with the pages bloodstained for the first third of the book; then the stains stopped suddenly.. Books are carefully hoarded, but because of their light construction they don't last long. Comdr. Walter Karig, one of the authors of "Battle Report," and associated with the naval public relations division, gave an enthusiastic report on the usefulness of the books to the navy.

Army and Navy Agree on Titles.

Titles for the books are chosen by a committee in New York and are then passed on separately by the army and navy representatives in Washington. Unless both services agree a book is not printed, for there is not enough help to make separate editions. Two books go to press at the same time and on the same presses in a number of cities, including Chicago. The committee of selection has just added two new members to replace Miss Jennie Flexner, who died recently, and Edward Aswell, resigned; they are Lewis Gannett and Miss Beatrice Libarre of the New York Public library.

But the Armed Service editions are not the only books going to men in the armed services. Pocket Books, Penguin Books, magazines in miniature editions, and donated books are also in use. Never before has an army been served so generously. In France the British soldiers envy the American for his books and try to barter for them. The other day Wallis J. Howe, vice president of Pocket Books, Inc., returned from Washington with an order for 1,660,000 copies of his books, given by one of the service organizations—name withheld because that is its traditional policy, nobody knows why. The next day the organization added another order for 400,000 copies. Unfortunately for the civilian trade, these amounts go out of the regular paper quotas, with the result that distribution has to be curtailed. If Pocket Books could supply the regular trade, too, it would probably mean a great increase of the book reading habit thruout the country. But publishers also believe that the books they send abroad may give some of the boys the reading habit—just as the popularity of Zane Grey's stories was laid among the men in the last war.

Alluring M-G-M Award.

It's on again, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer novel award, for the second year. Last year a number of authors wrote me asking if they could submit outlines for novels or manuscripts; the answer is that outlines are not wanted and manuscripts may be submitted only if a publisher has contracted to publish it at his own expense on a royalty basis. Unless a publisher has accepted your book, it cannot qualify. The award is the same as 1944: A minimum of $125,000 to the author when the book is chosen; if the book sells up to 300,000 then $50,000 is added, so that the author gets a maximum of $175,000. The publisher gets $25,000 on publication, making a maximum possible of $200,000. This is the amount garnered by Elizabeth Goudge and her publisher, Coward-McCann, for "Green Dolphin Street," which had sold 525,000 copies by Jan. 1 with the help of the Literary Guild, and had printing orders for 100,000 more in January. Novels may be submitted between June 15 and July 7, 1945, and must be published in the twelve months following Aug. 15, 1945. The judges will be Miss Amy Loveman, Sidney Franklin, and myself. One of the minor amusements at New York's luncheon tables is played by authors who figure out how much money they could really retain, after taxes, if the M-G-M wealth descended on them.

Sumner Welles Cooperates.

Sumner Welles is one of the most coöperative of authors—and when publishers use that phrase they mean he is friendly to their efforts at book promotion. He was the guest at a reception at the Waldorf given by Dryden Press, Inc., which published "An Intelligent American's Guide to the Peace," for which he wrote the introduction and which he edited. Dorothy Thompson greeted him and his book, and Mr. Welles spoke in behalf of wider publicity for the steps our government is taking in world affairs.

John Gunther's novel, "The Troubled Midnight," is having a mixed press, most of the critics adopting a friendly tone, but agreeing that it is light. It is surprising to see how many assume that this is his first novel. The house of Harper did not mention his earlier novels in this book, altho it published them.

Many Notables Come to Dinner.

These are busy days for diners-out. Seen at the dinner for Mrs. V. L. Pandit, sister of Nehru: James Farley sitting between Elsa Maxwell and Pearl Buck on the dais. William Shirer saying: "The hope of freedom for India is in India itself. She must take her freedom." Lin Yutang there; readers not quite agreed on his new book, "The Vigil of a Nation," because he makes both parties in China seem undemocratic.

STORM JAMESON OPENS TREASURE TROVE

Rich Hoard of Thoughts Pours Forth

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

Storm Jameson is at the same time a miser of experiences and impressions and one of the most generous sharers of her thoughts. No minute expression of a national psychology, no fleeting picture of a village square in the moonlight, no swiftly spoken words of comment on poetry, or on the waging of the eternal war of the sexes, or on modern art, or on either objective or subjective life has been tossed out of her memory as it is usually cast out of most minds. She has hoarded experiences, sights, sounds, even impressions of experiences [her own and others'] as a miser hoards his gold. But, unlike the miser who hides his treasure from the world, Storm Jameson lavishly shares hers.

• • •

This latest, of an impressive list of more than 30 books, is labeled "The Journal of Mary Hervey Russell," granddaughter of the domineering matriarch of Miss Jameson's memorable trilogy of a shipbuilding family, "The Lovely Ship," "Voyage Home," and "A Richer Dust," but that is the only fiction in it. It comes straight out of that miser-trove of Storm Jameson's experience and vivid memory. It is a mirror of the years just before the war and during the blitz in England.

It is, however, a very special kind of mirror—like those fabulous old French ones which not only reflected an image but thru which a person in the dark could see whatever was in the light.

• • •

No book of recent years, except G. B. Stern's amorphous autobiography, has had less form than this journal. It has chronology neither of event nor of thought.

Places are described with Miss Jameson's genius for feeling their soul as well as describing their physical selves. But places are always springboards for her spirit's leaps into the past, or into the future, or into the metaphysics of the present, People, named, populate some of the pages. Others, unnamed, stand beside them. And walking among them, with a strange reality, is the chronicler's mother.

• • •

It is a confusing book, but a tremendously rewarding one. It is confusing because convention says that a book begins, progresses, and ends; that even an autobiographical record conforms thus.

Its reward—if one reads it with no gun of time between one's ribs—is an intimate acquaintance with not only the thoughts, but the method of thought of a beautifully articulate person. In it one sees reflected, as one never did in "Mrs. Miniver," for instance, the growing British terror of war and its corollary, stolid psychological resistance to that terror. One feels, with the author, the accelerating pulse of the world's sickness with war. One sees a Europe which one will never see again either physically or spiritually, for, however rapid her convalescence, the scars will always remain.

This is a book for the intelligent reader, for the reader who not only can but wants to think. It differs from Storm Jameson's earlier, more vivid, autobiography, "No Time Like the Present," in that it makes no pretense to speak with such power, as that did, for a generation. It speaks only for Storm Jameson, who has, as few today have, the power of speech.

Novel Pictures Life as It May Be When Peace Is Made

"RETURN TO THE VINEYARD," by Mary Loos and Walter Duranty. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

This is a study of what happens when a small group of survivors from a wine making village in a European country go back to it after the Nazi occupation. They refuse to work in town at factories set up by the repatriation board, and this is the theme of the book—the refusal of the people to accept any further dictation. Not even for security, jobs, food, shelter will they lead the ordered life of the town. They prefer the risky and hungry life of the desolated village. Here is the story of their efforts to make a new community, to raise a harvest, to marry and raise children.

The story is adequate enough, altho the pattern of post-war life it describes seems totally unreal to me. It seems hard to believe that any relief board would refuse food to the survivors of a village who wanted to build it up again, in order to make them take made-work in a factory, for surely the rural areas will have to be put back into production even faster than the urban, for the ancient reason that a man can live without pants but not without bread.

The people themselves have a certain individuality, but they never seem to act and talk like people who have endured the long agony of occupation and prison. They talk about their suffering, but except for one girl, Anna, we don't see evidence of it.

The writing itself is stilted, full of phrases like "bade fair" and "all made a scene of warm joy." And there is a grotesquely unbelievable little boy named Mark, who understands the loves of adults better than they do, and urges men to marry the women who secretly love them. The daily life of the people is spry and interesting, and in particular the wine making.

Another Historical.

England in the time of George II. is the scene of a new novel by Edison Marshall, "The Upstart," to be published by Farrar & Rinehart in April.

Spies, Jungles, and Ships Make Thrilling Story

"ASSIGNMENT WITHOUT GLORY," by Marcos Spinelli. [Lippincott, $2.]

Come the day when there are no longer international spies, the E. Phillips Oppenheim school of fiction will be hard set for plots. These hush-hush jobs that accomplish so much for the home government make exciting reading, and this story of such a task concerns Brazil.

A Brazilian-born American is assigned to the by no means easy task of discovering how news of our shipping leaks out of South America, and he runs into some sadistic Nazis who give him the works, and is driven into some jungle scenery that makes his story read like "Green Mansions."

Brazil has been particularly prominent in movies, music, and literature lately, and is well depicted in this exciting, intriguing, and highly probable whodunit.

Story of Men Who Plotted to Destroy Jesus Christ

"THE INNOVATOR," by John Brett Robey. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht.

"'The Innovator'" is a story not of Christ but of the men who planned to destroy Him." They were little men; and I fear that the novel which the British vice-consul at St. Louis wrote about them while he was interned by the Japanese in Hankow is a rather dull one.

I do not quite see why this should have been so. The forces which brought Jesus to Golgotha are still strong in our world; we often find them dominant even in the lives of those who call themselves His followers. Henry Sloane Coffin made a powerful analysis of them some years ago in his book, "The Meaning of the Cross." And Leila Avery Rothenburger asks disturbing questions:

Who builds the cross on Calvary
  Stark against the sky?
Who laughs at pain and want?
  Can it be you?—or I?

All this might be powerfully dramatized in terms of fiction, and its validity for our time shown; but, for me at least, Mr. Robey, despite all his contemporaneity of idiom and the evident pains he has taken to differentiate his councilors, has not achieved it. Some of this differentiation, indeed, may be lost upon the reader. He may well become insufficiently interested in the councilors, in their official capacity at least, to care to trace all the shadings.

Their private lives, insofar as we are permitted to glimpse them, are more interesting. There is Ramoth, for instance, the one member of the Sanhedrim who really understands the Nazarene and sympathizes with Him. And there is the ill-starred Nennius, with his touching passion for his wife. But much of this background material fails of perfect integration.

In short, one must report of this obviously sincere and earnest book that, tho it has many admirable qualities, they do not quite add up to an absorbing novel.

New Writing Team Makes Good Debut

"THE FLAGS WERE THREE," by Leo Margulies and Sam Merwin Jr. [Samuel Curl, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil.

Leo Margulies, a veteran magazine editor, and Sam Merwin Jr., son of the well known author of the same name, have teamed up to write a lush historical novel of New Orleans. If they continue as collaborators, the reading public will have another source of delightful entertainment.

One outstanding merit [and at the same time a weakness] of "The Flags Were Three" is that the story covers no fewer than four generations of French and Spanish in New Orleans, yet keeps attention centered, most of the time, on a French woman and her three half Spanish children. This keeps the story from becoming too bulky and involved—the usual fault of novels covering more than one generation—but it also creates a curious foreshortening of the years that makes the coming of the first steamboat to New Orleans seem but a few years after the early French settlement.

The authors have neatly succeeded, too, in packing in all that is significant in the history of Louisiana under the rule of France and Spain, and finally of the United States. But the historical setting serves chiefly as exotic background for some turbulent love affairs, and does not burden the reader with details more fit for textbooks.

It's a large canvas on which the authors chose to paint, and the colors they use are strong and vivid. If you like piquant love stories with a "foreign" background this ought to please you. It's well done; not mushy or overloaded with romantic extravagances—altogether a good specimen of its kind.

Basic Dictionary for 10 Languages

"TEN-IN-ONE DICTIONARY," compiled by Marcel Rodd. [Ackerman, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.50.]

What to this avid, if fairly limited, traveler has always seemed an obvious necessity is a simple dictionary offering a basic vocabulary of words and phrases, with phonetic pronunciation and a necessary minimum of grammar, in a parallel compilation of several languages. The phrases should be slightly more useful than the old "Where could I get my rapier sharpened Saturday?" type. Marcel Rodd has attempted such a dictionary and it comes off rather successfully. He covers French, German, Spanish, Italian, Russian, Japanese, Portugese, Chinese, Arabic, and Esperanto, and divides each section into word groups that facilitate quick discovery of specific information.

Chinese Writing Shows Character of Its Culture

"CHINESE WIT, WISDOM, AND WRITTEN CHARACTERS," by Rose Quong. [Pantheon, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Will Davidson.

Linking wit, wisdom, and written characters in an exquisite little book about the Chinese language is by no means merely an alliterative device. Chinese wisdom is so often expressed wittily, its wit is so wise, and its written characters convey so logically the natural thoughts behind them that they inevitably fall together. Rose Quong has told the story of the development of some of the more basic Chinese picture-characters, and her telling is a gem of wit and wisdom in itself. Her aim is to "show how thought and form have combined to make of the Chinese written character—further than a symbol of meaning—an expression of philosophy, as well as of art." With the help of Dr. Kinn Wei Siiaw's beautiful calligraphy, she succeeds admirably.

Pantheon Books has, as usual, done a superb job of book designing. With its physical beauty, and its charming insight into the Chinese mind as well as its written language, this is a treasure for any one who loves books—and especially for a book lover who thinks the Chinese are a little bit of all right.

Fashion Show Entries Pour Into Tribune

By Norma Lee Browning.

Entries in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S sixth annual American Fashions contest have already started pouring in, according to the director of THE TRIBUNE'S contest department.

This is the first year finished sketches have arrived so early. The contest does not close until May 1.

Early response to this year's competition has been stimulated by the offer of a special prize of $500 for the best costume for teen-agers, in addition to the prizes in the general contest, and by a determination on the part of American designers to hold the place they have gained in the fashion world during the last five years.

• • •

"Now that Paris is sending designs over here again, we American designers need more than ever the continued help and support of THE TRIBUNE," writes J. Terry Wilson from New York.

Mr. Wilson won first prize in both the 1942 and 1944 American Fashions contest.

"I personally owe a very great deal to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE," he adds, "and I fully realize the wonderful work it has done and is doing for our own designers here in America. May the good work continue!"

Mrs. Grace Pickering of Chicago, who has acted as director of THE TRIBUNE'S fashion contests for the last five years, recently attended a fashion show in New York's Waldorf Astoria, where many well known designers showed their advance spring models.

• • •

Mrs. Pickering reported that one fashion conscious woman who has also attended THE TRIBUNE'S fashion shows, remarked to her:

"This [the New York show] is a good exhibit, well presented, but purely local, whereas the contests held by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE which I have attended have the advantage over all other shows in being national and showing the ideas of so many designers."

"In this New York show, elaborate as it is," Mrs. Pickering explained, "the models are selected from about 45 designers, whereas in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S unique contest the selection is made from sketches submitted by from 10,000 to 15,000 professional and amateur designers from every part of the United States."

All designs submitted must be sketched or drawn on white illustrating board, 14" x 20", or drawn on white paper and mounted on cardboard of the same size. They may be done in black and white or in color and must show both front and back views.

Any citizen of the United States, any man or woman in the armed services, or any resident of the United States since Dec. 5, 1944, is eligible to compete. There is no age limit—either for the general or the teen-age contest. Purpose of the teen-age contest is to stimulate the creation of designs especially for teen-age girls, but it should be emphasized that the designer need not be a teen-ager.

Grand prizes in the general contest are $2,000, $1,000 and $500. There will also be approximately 40 prizes of $50 each.

Details of the contest may be obtained by filling in the coupon on page 4.

Mme. Tartiere, 'Flyers' Angel,' Stirs Chicago

By Thalia.

One of the dramatic personalities of our day was a visitor in our town last week, Mme. Drue Tartiere, who won for herself the name of the "Flyers' Angel." She was personally responsible for getting almost 200 American and British aviators safely out of France thru the underground. She worked with the intelligence services of both countries and with the Free French. She was, I think, the first American woman to leave France after its liberation and was brought home by the American government where, under the auspices of the United States army air force and the treasury department, she is on a lecture tour with two young American aviators whom she helped save, Lt. Alfred Richter of our town and Aviation Student Willis E. Spellman of Jeffersonville, Ind. They make a dramatic trio.

Mme. Tartiere is a beautiful, willowy blonde [once as Drue Leyton, a movie actress in Hollywood in the Charlie Chan pictures]. She is as intelligent as she is beautiful, and as fearless in both spirit and action as a General Sherman tank. She enchanted and thrilled and shook two audiences on Wednesday, in the afternoon when she spoke before the Chicago chapter of France Forever at a tea given in her honor at the Casino, and in the evening when the Medinah club was filled with the many national groups of volunteer workers in the treasury department, whose zeal has resulted in selling 75 million dollars' worth of bonds and the outfitting of hospital ships and hospital trains.

Many a usually nonweeping dowager unashamedly wiped her streaming eyes as Mme. Tartiere talked and the two young aviators with her told of their miraculous rescues. The courage of simple French peasants, tiny children and aged women who helped in those rescues and hid the allied aviators tore one's heart strings. There was a home town dramatic moment in the afternoon when Mme. Tartiere told of greeting the first American boy in her village, Charley Whipple Jr. "And I was thrilled," she said, "to see Charley's father this afternoon. Mr. Whipple, stand up."

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster gave a buffet supper in honor of Mme. Tartiere and she captivated every one present. It was like meeting the heroine of "Escape." That novel did not record more drama than has her life during the war. With all Americans under 60 she was put into a concentration camp when we entered the war. A half hour after she handed Marshal Petain the script of his surrender speech in Bordeaux [she was an executive in the radio station there] the underground was organized, she said, and she went to work.

• • •

At incredible risk for both herself and the French Jewish doctor who helped her, mortal illness was feigned almost miraculously, and she was finally released as a victim of hopeless cancer and sent back to her home in Barbizon to die before the Germans' eyes. What she did, literally before their eyes, for the Gestapo headquarters was only six doors away, was fantastic. By day she was an invalid awaiting death. By night she tilled a farm, trapped game, met, hid, fed, rerouted flyers shot down or escaped from the

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ON these winter days when the bare hickory trees look like black etchings against the gray sky, the Ozark countryside seems deserted. Look at those little houses snuggled deep in the woods or crouching far back at the end of wiggling lanes and probably the only sign of life is a straggling washing whipping on the line, or Mom getting ready for supper by picking up [or possibly chopping] the wood with which the biscuits will be baked. Rarely are the houses within shouting distance of each other, and there are no companionable telephone lines. Possibly you would shudder at this isolation, and maybe you'd say:

And possibly he couldn't. But just holler "Auction sale," and brother, you'd better stand back out of the way!

Auction sales are the Mardi Gras and the Rose Festival of the Ozarks! In winter's chilly rain or snow, as in summer's broiling heat, an auction sale always gets its crowd. On foot, on horseback, even in a squat wagon built on an automobile chassis, in milk trucks, in carefully polished automobiles, they come out of the woods from all directions. In fact, any one with even a nodding acquaintance with the seller-outer considers his presence at the sale a social obligation. If a calamity keeps his family away, a letter of regret is sent:

"We was sorry we couldn't get to your sale, but we had a sick cow. . . ."

• • •

Sales come under three classes, live stock sales, which occur when a farmer is drafted and his wife can't take care of all the cows and sheep; household goods sales, when a town family is moving away; and sales where everything goes! These are the favorites, as you could tell by the crowds.

When the customers arrive, the household goods are lined up in the front yard, tables, chairs, sofa, chests, and beds [with which the mattresses are always thrown in, due to legal restrictions on selling used bedding]. Sometimes this lineup is imposing, with excellent pieces. I saw a nearly new nonelectric sewing machine sell for $86 one day recently. But mainly, the pieces are simple and none too sturdy. Dishes, too, are there, usually broken sets with odd cups, assorted glass sauce dishes and always a wide platter, with a nick out of one side. On a kitchen table, still wearing its water-soaked, scorched oilcloth of pre-war vintage, are thick iron skillets, old fashioned pans, and scarred, stained aluminum, flanked by a welter of knives, forks, and spoons. Sometimes there are treasures in this collection, like the old fashioned corn stick pans I bought at one sale for 90 cents, and the iron rabbit for which I paid $1. "A buck for a buck," quipped the auctioneer as he handed it to me.

Milk separators, milk buckets, 10 gallon crocks, food grinders, lidless Mason jars, boxes of rubbish that have been dumped from cupboard drawers, all of these are out for sale, and in the glaring light of day tell their story of years of hard use. Only once have I found any efforts at gilding the lily. That time I bought a shiny ice cream freezer which smeared fresh green paint over my good dress and which didn't work. At many sales, heaps of clothing are lying out in the open. They're scrupulously clean, of course, but it's none the less embarrassing when the auctioneer holds up an old fashioned corset or dangling long underwear and asks for a bid.

The household goods are sold in the forenoon, mainly to women. And altho the bidding goes fast, the women buy cautiously. The housewife who bids on a pillow knows to the last fluff whether the feathers came from geese or hens. And the cream separator with the torn place in the strainer will go begging until a man buys it. While the women do their buying, the menfolks gather around the corn planter, cultivator, and other farm implements in the back yard. Another masculine group looks over the cows, pigs, and horses that will go up for sale after lunch. If the weather is chilly, the men build great bonfires and stand around them with backs to the warmth as they talk. Each animal that will go up for sale gets a thoro going over. The mule that looks so fat and well fed will be scorned. "Legs too long! He won't pull worth a durn!" The Jersey cow, with anxious eyes on the tiny newborn red calf by her side, is judged too thin, and any how it's a bull calf! [Later cow and calf bring only $76.] By the time those interested in buying live stock get around to opening the horses' mouths to count teeth, the auctioneer is getting upset over the low bids on the farm implements.

"Only $17.50 for this corn planter! Why, you'd give a hundred for it next spring and it won't eat a mouthful between now and then."

And his jokes are hearty: "Look at this axe! Ain't she a beaut? Reckon I ought to get this for my wife. She's been wantin' a new axe. She wore the old one plumb out!" The crowd laughs easily. And the best laugh of all was enjoyed the day a fast talking auctioneer got me so confused I raised my own bid, paying 35 cents for a chair that should have been mine for a quarter. Col. Jack Hornbuckle of Mountain Home, Ark., enlivens his sales by offering to give $5 to any one who has lived in the community 60 days or more, if he can't tell his name and where he lives.

While all this is going on outdoors, inside the kitchen, with a wood-burning cookstove and a cluttered table for equipment, the women of a club or church are working frantically to get lunch ready for the hungry horde that will surge to the door in the noon intermission. Often, the club to which I belong, the Trask Colonial Dames, serves lunch to make money for charity. While Ivy Dowell, president of the club, is frying hamburgers [40 pounds of ground beef mixed with four slices of bread to the pound] the other club members are cutting buns, slicing pickles and onions, opening mustard pots, making coffee [ground coffee in cloth sacks is boiled in large enameled pots], and cutting the homemade pies which each of us has brought. One of Viney Piper's famous sour cream pies is always set back for ourselves, but if we lose pie sales by clinging to it, we have to pay a dime a cut. Ivy keeps the oven filled with firewood, for toasted firewood will keep the fire brisk under the hamburgers. Each thick, juicy pat of meat is put inside a bun as it is cooked, and the sandwiches are stacked in dishpans, with clean tea towels over them. As lunch time draws near, a table is set across the back door and used as a serving counter. A washbench, or something else large, is pulled across the inner door of the kitchen. This shuts out the hot stove huggers who flock into the "front room" during the intermission.

Crowding and pushing are unknown during this lunch period, even tho the intermission is short, even tho the pies may run out before every one is fed. The dignity and innate good manners of an Ozark country crowd never fail to amaze me. Coffee is served in large tin cups [a nickel a cup], the pie and sandwiches [a dime each] are put on paper plates. Only rarely does some one ask for one of the battered tin forks which are part of our serving equipment. Usually the pie is eaten out of hand. Mince, apple, dewberry, lemon, raisin, sour cream, and pumpkin are the varieties sold, and there are no favorites. All the club members work at the serving, with one member detailed as "cashier." She makes change for every one from the bank, a handfull of small coins in one of the tin cups. At one sale the cashier misplaced her bank and the whole lunch hour was filled with excitement and suspicion. Some one, we were sure, had found a handful of money at the bottom of his coffee cup and hadn't returned it to us. The cad! But all was well when we emptied the last of the cream. We found our 80 cents in the bottom of the cup that had held the coffee cream.

The nonchalance with which Ozarkians can part with household goods and live stock leaves me open mouthed. The fuss I raise when a pet paring knife gets thrown out with the chicken scraps is greater than any heard at a sale, even when Grandpa's framed picture, or Maw's ironstone bowl and pitcher are sold. When I bought a milk glass lamp, encircled with garlands of yellow roses, for 40 cents, I went to the seller and told her she could have it back any time she was "settled" again.

"O, I'll never want it," she said airly. "Mom picked it up some'rs!"

Even Mrs. Minerva McKay, widow of Col. McKay, sat like a tearless queen in her rocking chair while the treasures of her 92 years were sold by the auctioneer. Col. McKay was much older than the vivacious, lovely Minerva, and his profession as a corporation lawyer took them from their eastern home to Mexico and many foreign lands before they settled in the Ozarks. Here a fanciful railroad and mining scheme failed, the Col. had long since passed on, and the widow was 92 and alone. Everything must go. The McKay sale handbills brought out treasured gas coupons, for foreign silver and china are rarely seen in these parts. The item I coveted was a Bible with large print [I'm far-sighted] and great was my disappointment when I found it would be sold with a whole wall full of old law books and other dry, dull volumes. However, I gamely started bidding, and to my surprise they became mine for $6. After taking out my Bible and as many of the less dull books as I could put into the back of my car, I presented the remainder to a teacher of the West Plains school, who happened to be present.

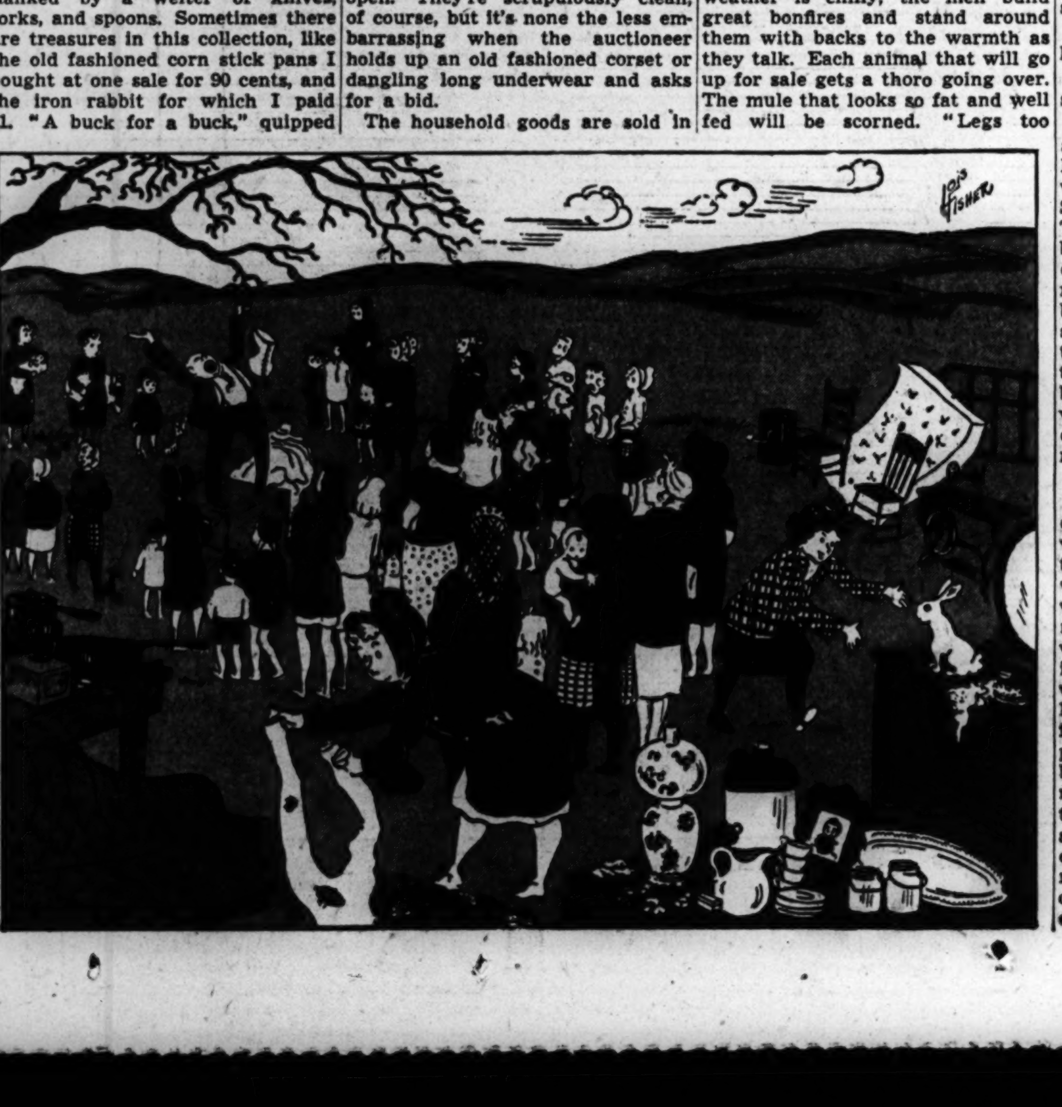
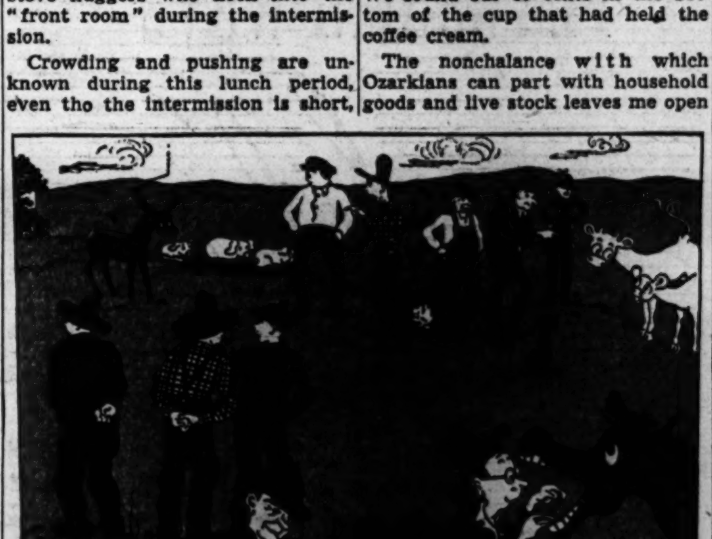
That night when I examined my loot, I found that I was the owner of a number of delightful books, and the prize of the lot was a fine old plush album complete with photographs of beauties in hoop skirts, men with flowing ties and mustaches, and even a four starred Union general. One by one I turned the pages, studying each face, and suddenly I came to the photograph of a tall gentleman who seemed strangely out of place with brides and cuties with Civil war hair-dos. I turned the photograph over and found that the gentleman who had given Col. McKay his picture had inscribed his name upon it. It was Abraham Lincoln.

Well, I should wash tomorrow. But it will have to wait until Tuesday. The folks who live in the stone house yon side of the Columbia schoolhouse are having a sale.





Mme. Tartiere, 'Flyers' Angel,' Stirs Chicago

Some of Mrs. Brewster's guests were old friends of Miss Katherine Dudley, distinguished American artist, who was born in Chicago and lived here until she went to Paris to settle. They were eager for news of her. Mme. Tartiere told us that Miss Dudley had helped her shelter American flyers [one of the two boys who were with Mme. Tartiere was hidden there] and had painted furiously during the brief periods when she was not in the concentration camp in Vittel, and that she was the same invincible and chic Katherine.

Characteristic of her, said Mme. Tartiere, and of the kind of "wonderful clothes" that Parisian women were said to be wearing when the Americans arrived was Miss Dudley's arrival at Mme. Tartiere's door in Barbizon one afternoon. She had arrayed herself magnificently in a new hat made by the famous Mme. Reboux and in a shining new pair of shoes. It began to rain on the way out. The sabots, which were only pasted together, came apart. The hat, ingeniously contrived of stitched pieces of cellucotton and a veil, began to melt. The indestructibly elegant Miss Dudley arrived in her stocking feet with the peeling sabots under her arms and the sadly soggy millinery masterpiece disintegrating in her hand.

Mme. Tartiere's husband, Lt. Jacques Tartiere, who was killed in the war lived briefly in Chicago. He was the stepson of Mme. Raymond Tartiere, the laughter of Mrs. Benjamin Rosenthal of the Ambassador hotel with whom young Mme. Tartiere stayed while she was in Chicago.

Another charming woman married to a Frenchman was a recent visitor—Mme. Pierre Matisse. Her husband is the only son of the great modern French painter, Henri Matisse. "Teenie" Matisse, as her friends call her, had never been in Chicago before and in the two days of her stay here she visited with excitement the great collection at the Art institute and the fine art collections of the Brewsters and the Chauncey McCormicks, and discovered the Racquet, Casino, and Arts clubs. At the Arts club she lunched with a few of Chicago's art-minded women, whom she surprised by being utterly and delightfully American and as young and pretty as a college girl.

To launch a membership campaign to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Chicago Maternity center Mrs. John Andrews King, chairman of the center's board of directors, invited to luncheon at the Casino the 75 women who will, between now and March 2, add 750 members to the auxiliary. Centering the speakers' table were Mrs. King, Mrs. Howard Linn, chairman of the extension committee, and Mrs. Philip D. Armour Jr., chairman of the membership enrollment committee.

The Casino has exchanged [of necessity] its well trained waiters for waitresses. Democracy was at work in the service at the speaker's table. An unusually nice, friendly looking waitress with graying hair said to Mrs. Byron Harvey Sr. [a grandmother], "Where's my big girl who wants another helping?" When she reached Mrs. Linn the friendly waitress said with the utmost naturalness, "I should have passed this sooner, but I was too interested in what that girl [nodding at a dowager] was saying about her two boys in the Pacific. I've got a son in the Atlantic myself."

The most fundamental work of a democracy is done in the Maternity center, insuring the safe birth of its future citizens — a fact which Mrs. Linn brought out in her interesting talk. She said that the drive for membership was taking the place of the customary elaborate benefit because "we think our world has come of age. We no longer have to bribe people to give to charity." The center provides wonderful free maternity care for the city's poor.

Mrs. Linn was followed by Dr. Henry Benaron, the associate medical director of the center, who explained the work of the center. Then lovely young Mrs. Armour told the roomful of women how to go about getting funds to carry on the work with which all were proud to be associated.

Tuesday was a busy day for the Chicagoans who go everywhere. At noon they went to the Council on Foreign Relations, where they heard an unusually interesting talk on "What to Do with Japan" by George K. C. Yeh, representative of the Chinese ministry of information in Great Britain and liberated Europe, who pointed out that the Chinese have had since 1894 to think about what to do with Japan!—and they think that there must be a complete military victory over Japan and a complete uprooting of the emperor system.

That afternoon a tea at the Arts club opened exhibitions of the work of the Bulgarian-born painter, Jules Pascin, and three contemporary Americans, Ralston Crawford, Stuart Davis, and Karl Zerbe. And many of the Arts club guests also attended the tea which the English Speaking union gave in honor of the wife of Lt. Gen. William Dobbie, who spoke on "Women under Fire."

Those of us who are Princeton wives had a lonely dinner last week unless we persuaded other deserted spouses to dine with us. The annual dinner of the Princeton club lured every alumnus in town, with its brilliant triumvirate of speakers. There was Dean Hermance, beloved by two generations of freshmen [and feared by entrants], and Prof. Hugh S. Taylor, chairman of the department of chemistry, who told of the unusual and important scientific contribution which Princeton has made to the war effort. And, finally, Ralph Bard, undersecretary of the navy [Princeton, 1906], who showed his fellow alumni dramatic official motion pictures of the navy in action and talked everything over with them. With most of the younger men in service the attendance of nearly 200 was remarkable. But I have always claimed that Princeton isn't only a college, it's a family circle. Every Princeton wife agrees that when she took her vows to love, honor, and obey, they were made to the Princeton Alumni association.

And speaking of marriages, the recent wedding of Miss Virginia Waller and Flight Officer John Barber Hill of the A. A. F. seems to me charmingly characteristic of the moment. Miss Waller is a member of one of Chicago's old families and in normal times would have been married with pomp and circumstance. But today man proposes, but war disposes. A wedding happens when and where the war dictates. A telegram announcing Flight Officer Hill's return from his overseas mission and an immediate transfer for further training [destination unknown] gave only enough time for the young people to be married at the groom's air base, the 33d ferry group command in Kansas City.

It was a romantic ceremony, with the flying chaplain uniting two ardent flyers. Miss Waller was a skilled instructor and tow pilot. Her mother, Mrs. William Waller; her sister, Mrs. Fred Ford Thatcher II. [whose husband, a lieutenant in the air forces, is overseas], and her aunt, Mrs. Howard Vincent O'Brien, managed to get to the wedding by driving with the bride in the car she took to her new home. Neither the bride's father, who was in Palm Beach planting the family garden, nor the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Hill of Dundee, could get railroad or plane accommodations and all missed the ceremony.

ENGAGED.

Miss Gertrude Weinstock, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Weinstock of Wilmette, have announced her engagement to Pvt. David E. Shoch, of the army specialized program, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Shoch of New York. Miss Weinstock, a graduate of Connecticut college for women, is doing post-graduate work at Northwestern university. Pvt. Shoch is a senior in the medical school of Northwestern university, from which he received his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd, of New York.

Chicago, Feb. 11, 1897.

Mrs. Bradley Martin.

Dear Julia: I was pleased when you wrote me that you had sent regrets to the Bradley Martins on receiving an invitation to their fancy dress ball. More frivolous minded than you, I don't know that I could have brought myself to decline, but you, being so good a churchwoman, decided at once what was your duty.

Your rector, Dr. William S. Rainsford, has been brave, I feel, in advising his parishioners not to attend. I like his counsel and I believe he is right in saying that, in this time, when there is so much suffering among the poor, a ball where money is so lavishly spent will tend to rouse resentment among those who haven't even the necessities of life. As rector of St. George's and the close friend of your family, you could hardly have done otherwise than regard his counsel. But many of the Bradley Martin guests were his parishioners, according to the papers.

Will points out that there's another side to the question—the fact that the ball has given employment to dressmakers, tailors, and livery men, and business to florists, merchants, and indeed many others. He asks if that doesn't in some sense justify the frivolity. I say no. For the money, if given to charity, would also have gone into trade channels, only the humbler sort of merchants, those who sell coal, food, and cheap clothing to the poor, would have profited. I'm convinced that Dr. Rainsford is right.

But O, I should have liked to be a mouse in a corner to see the entrance of all those gorgeously attired New Yorkers, wearing luscious silks, satins, and velvets and adorned with all those precious jewels. I saw in an account of the ball that it would hardly seem possible for Mrs. Astor to have found place on her dress for all the diamonds she is supposed to have worn. It must have been a superb spectacle, one never to be surpassed in the annals of American society, the result of months of preparation and the outlay of hundreds of thousands of dollars, all for five hours of pleasure. I should have liked hearing Victor Herbert's band, for I do enjoy his music. And it would have been delightful to have seen the minuet and quadrille danced by those richly attired people.

Perhaps just as interesting would have been their presentation to Mrs. Bradley Martin as she stood on her dais receiving them. Just hearing the names, as they were pronounced by the master of ceremonies, would have been like attending a pageant. It would have sounded like a roll call of grandees of the time of Lorenzo the Magnificent. How every neck must have craned to see John Jacob Astor as he was introduced, representing Henry of Navarre; or Mrs. George De Forest, as Titian's daughter. I read in our morning TRIBUNE that Louis XV. was the monarch most often represented by the men. I think there were fifty of him; and that Marie Antoinette was deposited at the door of the Waldorf many times during the evening. Most of the guests seem to have preferred to depict French monarchs, not English or Americans. Chicago was represented, as you may have read in your own paper, by young Honoré Palmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer.

One thing puzzled me a good deal in the accounts of the ball—it is always referred to as Mrs. Bradley Martin's ball. Her husband is mentioned, but not as if he really counted. I suppose she has all the money, yet he does seem to be entitled to a bit more space in the newspapers. She is the daughter of the late Isaac Sherman, isn't she? The papers speak of her receiving a legacy of 4 million dollars from him. That, however, isn't on a par with the Astor or Vanderbilt fortunes, and I wonder that she felt she could spend $125,000 on a single evening's entertainment.

It was, of course, a tribute to one's social standing to be invited, and I'm glad you were on the list, but I doff my hat to you, dear old friend, for declining the invitation. Your loving

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

The Bradley Martin ball of 1897 has never been eclipsed in lavish splendor, and, it may be added, in bad taste. But those who believed the poor would rise up against the rich who flaunted their wealth were disappointed. The poor only congregated in front of the Waldorf to see and admire the display. A son of Bradley Martin, with the same name, lives in New York and is interested in charities of that city, according to Who's Who.

He Wrote a Million-Copy Song.

Some weeks ago the writer of "Ole Shady" was mentioned in this column. Lewis E. Myers, 55 W. North av., Chicago, gave the name of the composer [B. R. Hanby] and added that he also wrote "Darling Nelly Gray." Your editor was interested, but did not look up the life of this man and was much intrigued when she received a letter from Earl R. Hoover, Cleveland lawyer, whose hobby is Hanby and who knows more about him probably than any other person in America. Here are a few items Mr. Hoover sends about the writer of "Ole Shady" and "Darling Nelly Gray": Hanby wrote the last named song in 1856 when he was a student at Otterbein college, Westerville, O. It swept 'round the world, sold millions of copies—more copies than any previous song, except Stephen C. Foster's "Old Folks at Home"—and was translated into foreign tongues. Tho it was an anti-slavery song, sometimes called "The Uncle Tom's Cabin of Song," it was equally popular in the south, sung by Confederate soldiers around camp fires. It has been officially named "Ohio's Folk Song." We hope to tell you more in next week's column about this rival of Stephen C. Foster, and about two contemporaries of his, who wrote their songs in Chicago.

Hudson River Exhibit Opens on Wednesday

By Eleanor Jewett.

The first important exhibition of the new year at the Art institute is that which opens with a formal preview to members and guests next Wednesday evening, and to the public the following morning. The exhibition is installed in the east wing galleries. It is a comprehensive showing of the work of the Hudson River school, a group of painters of the early and middle 19th century who, because many of them first painted in the neighborhood of the river are spoken of roughly as the Hudson River school.

When facts are more carefully sifted, it is found that a great many of the group expanded their territory and painted Lake George, the White mountains, Niagara falls, and points much farther west. Altho they did paint the west they must not be mistaken for such thrilling historians as Remington. Theirs was always a placid and rather trim school of painting, tinged more than a little with Currier and Ives' complacent satisfaction.

Albert Bierstadt, for example, and Thomas Moran went to the Rockies to paint the beauty of their rugged grandeur. Frederick E. Church traveled to South America for certain of his ambitious canvases. Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, is counted among the Hudson River group. So are John Trumbull, Washington Allston, Thomas Cole, and Asher B. Durand, all of them men with a practical view of painting and a dexterous ability with the brush. If some of the pictures are less good than others, it is only natural. Even today a chromo may be found in a contemporary show. No generation is entirely free from dabbling in novelty, nor from ignorance parading as culture. The Hudson River school knew its wilder moments when tides swirled and waves dashed. The present exhibition gives proof of both the excellent qualities and the weaker features of last century's artists.

The exhibit consists of 164 paintings, water colors, and drawings by 50 painters. One of the surprising things about the exhibit is the huge size of some of the pictures. Among those who have lent works to the Art institute are Mrs. Florence Vincent [granddaughter of Thomas Cole], William Church Osborn, Nelson C. White, Mrs. Meredith Hare, and numerous museums—the Metropolitan, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and the Pennsylvania academy among them.

The exhibition will remain on view to March 25 and will be shown at the Whitney museum in New York from April 17 to May 18.

The Boston Museum of Fine Arts will have an April exhibit of gorgeous costumes collected by a Chicagoan, Miss Elizabeth Day McCormick. Miss McCormick gathered many of her costumes on trips to Europe before the war. Some of them represent what may be a lost civilization. Countries that have been overrun and despoiled by the Nazis will not, perhaps, soon be able to give their peoples the brilliant, richly woven, sparkling native dress that was, before 1939, often an indication of the traveler that a new boundary had been crossed. The dances of various lands were noted for their costumes. Sundays, holidays and market days were identified by costumes. Miss McCormick collected all sorts of peasant costumes and a number of more aristocratic costumes, including an exquisitely embroidered dress which belonged to Queen Elizabeth. The exhibit opens in Boston about April 11 and will continue for two weeks.

• • •

Another Chicagoan [or should we say Winnetkan], Helen Balfour Morrison, noted for her distinguished photography, is having a one-man show of recent prints at the Layton Art gallery in Milwaukee. Charlotte Partridge is director of the museum. The exhibit will run thru Feb. 20. Mrs. Morrison is showing 50 portraits in addition to her group of portraits of Chicago artists which was so popular when it was shown at the Art institute last spring. Among her new portraits, each a uniquely personal reading, are those of Thomas Mann, Theodore Dreiser, Sherwood Anderson, Artur Rodzinski, Eugene Ormandy, Izler Solomon, Thornton Wilder, and Alexander Archipenko. Mrs. Morrison combines philosophy and photography and just to get a likeness is the smallest of stepping stones on her journey to reach the inner self of her sitter and to present him as an entity of soul, heart, mind, and body, a figure instinct with life.

• • •

The Cordon club is busy now preparing for a March exhibition of portraits of members by members. This promises to be a really joyful occasion with compliments and criticism [dulled] riding high.

• • •

Emil Armin, well known member of the Chicago Society of Artists, has a one-man show of recent oils and water colors in the Tea Room gallery, Mandel Brothers.

• • •

An exhibit of contemporary illustrated books is on view at 108 Goodspeed hall, 1010 E. 59th st., under the auspices of the Renaissance society of the University of Chicago.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

Mrs. George A. Kelly.

Since transportation difficulties have discouraged unnecessary travel, the Arts club's teas to mark the openings of new exhibits seldom are distinguished by the presence of the artists whose works are being shown. Neither Ralston Crawford, Stuart Davis, nor Karl Zerbe, contemporary American artists whose paintings went on display at the club recently along with those of the late Jules Pascin, could come from their eastern homes for the opening, but the tea was by no means without its share of celebrities. The Albright twins, Ivan Le Lorraine and Malvin Marr, who signs his paintings "Zsissly," dropped in for tea, having recently returned from Hollywood, Cal., where they were commissioned to do the paintings for the Oscar Wilde movie. Just back from a flying visit to Washington, D. C., to see her son-in-law, Lt. John Irving, who is expecting to return to overseas duty soon, Mrs. George Arthur Kelly came to the party in a tobacco brown crepe dress with three jeweled gold flowers pinned to the top of the black grosgrain panel that ran down the side of the gown. Her putty-colored sailor was banded in matching grosgain.

Mrs. John Sanders and Mrs. Ashley M. Brand appeared unexpectedly wearing identical copies of the same dress, but the hats with which they completed their ensembles were entirely different. Mrs. Sanders' was a twist of white ermine which matched the fur ascot at the throat of her black caracul coat. Over her little hat was tossed a black veil starred in red and green sequins. Mrs. Brand, one of the lucky women who often calls upon her ingenuity and nimble fingers to whip up a little hat at home, was wearing a bewitching bonnet of her own creation, a quaint black sailor set well back on her head and looped at the nape of the neck with wide cerise satin ribbon, which appeared from the front to resemble the hairbows worn by the belles of the gay '90s.

• • •

Two more unusual hats were worn to the tea by Mrs. Carl A. Moore Jr. and Mrs. Grier Patterson, who came directly from a "tour of duty" at Gardiner General hospital. Mrs. Moore's, a cossack hat of crocheted black wool, was embroidered all over in tiny sequin hearts and stones in bright Russian colors. With a black gown with touches of blue, Mrs. Patterson wore a pale blue satin sailor with fronds of clipped blue ostrich plumes swirled around its brim, pinwheel fashion. Greeting friends at the doorway of the dining room, Mrs. Arthur M. Wirtz wore a handsome corsage of yellow-tipped white orchids pinned to a basic black dress, and her dark hair was upswept beneath a romantic little hat of Victorian black plumes. In contrast, Mrs. Edward A. Leight chose spring colors—a mint green crepe dress and a chapeau that was a mound of white lilacs and white roses, swathed in green dotted veiling. At a near-by table Fitzroy Davis, who is here for a month's "rest cure" between working on the motion picture script of his novel, "Quicksilver," and departing for an eastern lecture tour, sipped his tea with a party of friends which included Mrs. Richard D. Nugent; her mother, Mrs. Sellar Bullard of Santa Barbara, Cal.; Mrs. James Slattery, a former Chicagoan now living in New York; Mrs. Paul Butler, and Mrs. Harold C. Pynchon. Lt. and Mrs. Slattery arrived hours late from New York the other day on their way to Lt. Slattery's new navy post on the west coast. Slightly flustered, but looking pretty as a picture in a trim black frock with scalloped vee neck line, Mrs. Slattery greeted old friends who stayed on and on at a party the Nugents were giving to welcome their tardy guests. Heralding the spring that is soon to come [every one hopes] was Mrs. Edwin M. Sims Jr.'s fetching tiny white pillbox and the white ruffled collar on the dark dress she wore to the Nugents'. An unusual and stunning dress was worn by Mrs. Douglas Huntress, a "winter" white one of jersey, cut with full sleeves and full skirt, and ornamented by a splash of gold sequins in a geometric design.

Nurses' Group Will Hear Role of Psychiatry

Miss D. Thompson.

The crying need for nurses in the armed services has lent impetus to plans that the 1st district of the Illinois State Nurses association is making for a meeting scheduled at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the Chicago Historical society, North av. at Clark st. Since hopeful eyes are turned to the senior nurse cadet in the present recruitment campaign, the district has invited all such students in nursing schools of Lake, Cook, and Du Page counties to the assembly with the thought of interesting them in volunteering to serve our military men.

The program of psychiatry in military camps and hospitals will provide the theme for the conference, which was arranged under the direction of Miss La Verna Balzer and which will be conducted by Miss Dorthea Thompson, 1st district president. Miss Balzer is director of nurses at the Ravenswood hospital.

Capt. Charles O. Sturdevant of the Gardiner General hospital will discuss psychiatry in the United States armed forces, and Lt. Barbara Chesley will tell of psychiatric aspects of nursing care at the Vaughan General hospital where she is stationed. There also is to be a showing of the movie, "Psychiatry in Action," depicting the story of care provided psychiatric patients in England.

On Friday night, Grant hospital will give a Valentine dancing party and floor show to benefit the hospital's Nurses' Alumnae association and school of nursing. Service men from Navy pier and the naval reserve midshipmen's training school of Northwestern university, as well as students from the Illinois medical school, are among the many guests invited to the holiday fete, which is to be held in the Nurses auditorium at 536 Webster av.

At 12:15 o'clock tomorrow, Elmira Bears Wickenden, executive secretary of the National Nursing Council for War Service, will speak at the annual meeting and luncheon of the Central Council for Nursing Education. The assembly is being held in conjunction with the annual Congress of Medical Education, and is scheduled in the Grand ballroom of the Palmer House. Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland is in charge of arrangements, and in the absence of Mrs. Chester A. Cook, council president, Mrs. Charles H. Wacker will preside.

Club Women to Hold Joint All-Day Meet

By Kathryn Loring.

Woman's eagerness to see that this topsy-turvy world is set to rights again when war has ended is mirrored clearly in the countless hours feminine groups have been devoting of late to study and discussion of post-war peace proposals. Along these patriotic lines, a particularly ambitious all-day planning conference—open both to interested women and men of the Chicago area—is being arranged under joint sponsorship of 34 prominent women's organizations.

The Red Lacquer room of the Palmer House will provide the setting for the assembly, at which attention will be focused on the immediate problem of how women may share with men responsibilities of post-war planning and which is expected to draw some 900 persons in attendance. Appropriately enough, George Washington's birthday has been chosen as the date.

The Chicago Altrusa club of executive and professional women first introduced the idea of holding such a conclave in Chicago. It is to be patterned after a conference conducted last June in the White House at Washington, D. C., which was devoted to the theme, "How Women May Share in Post-War Policy Making."

• • •

In rallying support of other Chicago women's organizations, Mrs. Stella Ford Walker, Altrusa president and general chairman for the meeting, explained: "This is not a movement to substitute woman power for man power. It is a serious and patriotic endeavor to assure having woman power at its best, by the side of man power, brought squarely and effectively to bear upon the peace time problems." At the Feb. 22 conference Mrs. Walker is expecting a continuing committee or council to be appointed to carry on indefinitely the program adopted.

When Chicago Altrusa brought Miss Charl Ormond Williams of Washington to Chicago last fall to assist in drawing up blueprints for the project, Miss Williams cautioned representatives of the various interested groups that women need not necessarily aim at serving in top governmental offices and posts, that constructive influence may be felt just as surely thru coöperative effort expended in community affairs. Definite adherence to suggestions of Miss Williams, who presided at the White House conference and who is chairman of a committee appointed to compile a roster of women adjudged qualified for national and international commissions, are reflected in the Feb. 22 assembly theme.

• • •

Among prominent women leaders whom Mrs. Martin Kent Northam, program chairman, is bringing to the lecture platform during the sessions, which are to continue from the 9. o'clock morning hour until 4:15 o'clock, are Mrs. La Fell Dickinson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Mary V. White, who heads the Illinois State Women's Trade Union league; Mrs. Raymond Sayre, vice president of the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau; Mrs. Vivian Carter Johnson of the national branch office of the Girl Scouts, and Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, Illinois state legislator. Speaker at a special luncheon session in the Crystal room of the hotel will be Dr. Carroll L. Birch, vice president of the American Medical Women's association, who will dwell on woman's role in the post-war medical field.

Figuring conspicuously on the program will be the open discussion periods following both morning and afternoon talks, and arrangements have been made to broadcast interviews with keynote speakers from 2 until 2:30 o'clock, with Mrs. Josephine Wetzler at the microphone. Advance registration both for the conference and the luncheon may be made thru the conference finance chairman, Miss Florence M. Meves, in room 700 at 120 S. La Salle st.

• • •

Other organizations participating with Altrusa in plans for the meeting are Chicago units of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women, American Association of University Women, American Legion auxiliary, American Medical Women's association, Associated Women of American Farm bureau, Association of Bank Women, Business and Professional Women's club, Quota club, Girl Scouts, Pilot club, Soroptimist club, Medical Technologists, Women's Advertising club, Women's Trade Union league, Young Women's Christian association, and the Women's Overseas Service league.

Also the Chicago and Cook County Women's organizations, Chicago Dietetic association, Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, Illinois League of Women Voters, Illinois Occupational Therapy association, Illinois chapter of the Special Libraries association, Woman's City club, Chicago Woman's club, Women's Bar Association of Illinois, Zonta International, and the Chicago loop, Evanston, Oak Park, and south side clubs of Zonta.

The Chicago Woman's club will mark its 69th anniversary next Saturday with an all-day entertainment program in the clubrooms for a group of service men who have been guests at one time or another in the home of Mrs. Frank H. White, general chairman for the party. Mrs. White's custom of opening her home every week-end to uniformed men has earned for her the affectionate title of "Mother" White among her numerous guests, and when plans for the anniversary fete were disclosed, the men gallantly offered their services in assisting with arrangements for the event. Clubrooms will be opened at 10:30 o'clock, and the president, Mrs. Henry Barrett Chamberlain, will be assisted in receiving by members of her board. There will be gift and food tables and a fortune telling booth conducted thruout the day. Following noon luncheon, cards and other entertainment are scheduled, and tea will be served at 3 o'clock. The club will have Jean Thomas, author of "Traipsin' Woman," "Blue Ridge Country," and other stories of rural America as guest speaker at a 2 o'clock meeting Wednesday.

The Woman's City club long has attempted to interest Chicagoans in voting machines, and on Wednesday night members and guests will gather in the clubrooms to view demonstrations of a mechanical ballot recorder of the latest model. War time priorities have caused the group to abandon temporarily active campaigning for use of the machines, but enthusiasm of the program and publicity committees in sponsoring the exhibit indicates that immediately priorities are lifted, the movement again will be vigorously supported.

Proceeds from the party will be divided among the charitable organizations to which the club contributes.

Park Ridge School for Girls Sends Out Appeals for Funds

Mrs. Griswold A. Price, recently elected president of the Park Ridge school for girls; Mrs. M. W. Welch, chairman of its Valentine fund drive, and Mrs. Guy C. Kiddoo, are mailing out appeals for funds this week in the form of Valentines which tell the story of "Sally", a typical girl in the school. Prospective contributors will learn, perhaps for the first time, that approximately 100 dependent girls live in homelike surroundings on the school's 15 acre campus, and receive an education and special training to make themselves useful citizens. Repairs to several buildings and other items of necessary expense in the past year have increased the budget and made it urgent to raise additional funds. The war has increased the demand upon the school to acceptance of young girls from broken homes.

Mrs. Griswold A. Price. [Moffett Photo.]

Other officers of the school include Mrs. Burt J. Denman, Mrs. William H. Emery, Mrs. Herbert B. Mulford, Mrs. Ralph C. Denton, and Mrs. Henry B. Freeman, vice presidents; Mrs. Herbert J. Watt, recording secretary; Mrs. Draper Dayton, correspondent secretary, and Lt. [j. g.] John N. Ott Jr., treasurer. Lt. Ott returns to this post now that he is stationed again in Chicago.

Clubs to Hear Lincoln Lore During Week

Lincoln's birthday anniversary, always an inspiration for club program chairmen, is proving no exception this year. Promising of particular interest during the coming week are talks by two Chicago writers—Otto Eisenschiml and Bernadine Bailey—whose hobby of delving into Lincoln lore has distinguished them in the field.

Miss Bernadine Bailey.

Miss Bailey, author of the book, "Lincoln's Other Mother," and of magazine articles concerning the beloved President's life and background, will tell of her experiences in collecting material for her narratives at a meeting of the Friends of American Writers at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday in the Cordon club. Reared near Lincoln's boyhood home, Miss Bailey's contacts since childhood with old settlers of the community have proved her chief source of information.

Mr. Eisenschiml's talk on "A Few Lesser Known Facts About Lincoln" will be given at 1:45 o'clock tomorrow before Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women in the council quarters. The fact that his father fought in the famous battle of Shiloh gave Mr. Eisenschiml, a successful business man and chemist, his first incentive for collecting historical data.

• • •

Pilgrimages to battlefields eventually led to his present great interest in Lincolniana. One of his best known books is "Why Was Lincoln Murdered?" which he followed with a companion volume, "In the Shadow of Lincoln's Death."

The Friends of American Writers will augment the Wednesday program with their annual book sale, proceeds from which will go into the club's annual award fund. Yearly, the organization gives a substantial cash prize to the author of the middle west who, in the club's opinion, has produced the most outstanding book of the year. Mrs. Colin H. Higgins will preside at the meeting, and hostesses at the tea afterward will be Mrs. John L. Baker and Mrs. Charles Richardson.

The Musarts club of Chicago will hear about "The Women Lincoln Loved" at a 1 o'clock gathering Wednesday in the Woman's City clubrooms, 410 S. Michigan av. Mrs. Robert L. Huttner, program chairman, will be the speaker.

Lincoln's birthday holds a special significance for General Henry Dearborn chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution since it marks the chapter's own anniversary—this year its 31st. A 2 o'clock program is scheduled by the chapter tomorrow in the Cordon club, and will bring as speaker R. E. Pattison Kline, lecturer and author, who also will discuss the life of the Civil war president.

• • •

Anticipatory of Washington's birthday anniversary, Henry Purcell chapter of the D. A. R. will hold its annual Colonial luncheon at 1 o'clock Saturday in the English room of Marshall Field and company. Program interest, however, will be focused on current patriotic endeavors with emphasis on the chapter's assistance in national D. A. R. war service.

Last week the national D. A. R. announced plans for three new war projects, for which the national president, Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, reports funds already are pouring into the treasury. At a cost of $60,000 the society expects to install a wired radio program distribution system in the Mayo General army hospital at Galesburg, Ill. Every man in the hospital, with from 2,000 to 2,500 bed capacity, will be provided with head phones beside his cot, and the system also will have loud speakers for general entertainment. Mobile X-ray units, constructed so that they may be taken ashore, are to be provided for six new hospital ships at a cost of $15,000 each, and portable X-ray units, at a cost of $900 each, are to be installed on seven hospital ships now in service, and also provided for the six new ships.

GENTLY, NOW...

You mist-ify your bareness

Important in the story of the gentle look is the chapter on evening. And this, perhaps, the gentlest chapter of all. For, though the look is bare, it is altogether feminine. Misted. Net covering bared shoulders. Or a scarf about them, a scarf filmy, almost intangible. It is sleeves, mere ledges, but then, pale gloves pulled high. It is pink lipstick. It is the gentle look . : . the same you achieve, by day, with a pink-veiled hat. With a circlet-waisted, broad-of-shoulder suit. With a flared-cape coat. A look both smart and soft . . . by night, as by day. The look we recommend for spring . . the look you know, by that token, is right.

GENTLE, the dress you wear of an April evening. Bare-shouldered, then covered with near-transparent net. As in this gown of blue net, black lace. $39.95

GENTLE, tiny-looking, your waist. An illusion achieved by the contrast of a fitted black lace bodice and a full, full skirt. By the extended, net shoulder line

GENTLE, your cosmetics, your hair. Your lipstick, your favorite, but always, pink. And your hair beautifully groomed. Up or down, but every hair in place.

New Phoenix Hotel Is Open for Business

PHOENIX, ARIZ. The season, to coin a phrase, is at its height here in the valley of the sun. February's two regulation rainy days came in January this year. And now Old Sol keeps the mercury well above 70 during the day.

The valley's latest and greatest, Paradise inn, was unveiled a week ago today. Built during the past six months out of noncritical materials, the new inn is a unique structure hereabouts. A spread-out, one unit structure, it boasts the capacious comfort of a first class ocean liner. And is slightly reminiscent of one, with its storied porches and verandas looking out across Paradise valley.

The inn's current capacity of 40 guests will by next year be enhanced by the addition of ranch style bungalows, to be built back of the inn against stately Camelback mountain. The facilities for feeding and entertaining the guests already are in service and being enjoyed by the capacity group of initial guests who moved in on opening day recently.

The center of the dining room is under a movable glass roof which slides back at noon to let the sun in. Blue and yellow canopies slide on wires beneath the movable roof, attached to the wires by hundreds of harness rings, procured at local saddleries in the absence of such fittings at hotel supply houses. Entrees are served on huge fluted "tortilla" plates, hand molded and specially baked in lovely desert colors. Mammoth picture windows give the diner a clear view of Paradise valley and of Four Peaks and the Superstitions over 50 miles away.

Game rooms, comfortable furnished lounges, two tap rooms, outdoor swimming pool, tennis, badminton, and shuffle board courts, all within easy access and integrated into the inn plan, testify to the architectural skill and resort experience of Manager Bob Evans.

• • •

Son of Mrs. Jesse Benton Evans, the artist formerly of Chicago, Bob Evans was trained as an architect and worked in that capacity when he first came to the southwest. A score of years ago he built the Jokake inn, which he managed until last year. Now he combines his architectural and resort experience in what he describes as the perfect southwestern resort, and the 400 visitors at his open house last Sunday were loud in their praises of his success, admittedly abetted in large measure by his wife.

Tennis matches, organized by the inn's pro, Louis Volpe Jr. of Chicago, and a tastefully served tea were high points on the open house program. Arizona Chicagoans at the occasion included the Frank Octigans, who dropped over from their Scottsdale citrus ranch; Richard Searles, who drove over from his Indian Bend ranch; Mrs. William Benton, who is in her home near Jokake and will be rejoined by Mr. Benton next week; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johnson; Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Ravenscroft, and Mrs. Walter Baldwin of Highland Park. Mrs. Chester W. Chapin of Highland Park and her sister-in-law, Miss Annette Chapin, also stopped by at the inn on their way to a birthday fiesta at the Burridge Butler home. Mr. Butler, of Chicago and Hinsdale, has been here for the last two months.

Mr. and Mrs. George N. Diederich of Golf are staying at the Paradise inn and won the shuffle board tourney last week. Also there are Mr. and Mrs. William C. Engel of Wilmette and the Howard Fentons of Lake Forest. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Russell of Chicago arrived on Wednesday and are scheduled to stay several weeks. Mr. Russell is an avid golfer and regularly plays at the Biltmore and at the Phoenix Country club. Mrs. Russell is a tennis fan, having won tournament trophies at the Chikaming Country club at Lakeside, Mich., a few years back.

• • •

Topping a busy February social program at the Camelback inn this week was the putting tournament, leading contestants in which included several Chicagoans: Jerry Griffin; George C. Williams of Evanston who with Mrs. Williams, is a recent arrival; the Foster Beamsleys of Kenilworth, and Mr. and Mrs. August D. Grote of River Forest.

Other Chicagoans enjoying the Camelback's far famed hospitality and fine cuisine include Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ingersoll of Winnetka; Mrs. Henry E. Cutler and daughter, Andrew L. Shirey, of Winnetka; Mr. and Mrs. John F. Ryan and their son, John Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. John Lyle Vette with their daughter, Mrs. Robert C. Borwell, and granddaughter, Elsie Borwell.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Dean McWethy, formerly of Aurora, have recently arrived at the popular inn. They have four sons in the service, all of them overseas.

How science makes possible a younger face and throat

For a more youthful, more lovely face and throat, try ENDOCREME, the 7-year-tested scientific face cream. With most women, between 22 and 70, it achieves results heretofore thought impossible. This is because ENDOCREME helps improve the skin itself, not merely its outward appearance. The reason is ACTIVOL. Only ENDOCREME contains this laboratory achievement. ACTIVOL . . . the scientific counterpart to a natural, skin-vitalizing substance . . . is actually absorbed beneath the skin's surface, there to work its many benefits. The skin tends to become fresher, firmer, smoother, softer, radiant with more youthful charm. ENDOCREME today is bestowing its blessing upon thousands. Why don't you try it! How better can you invest your cosmetic dollars? Many report exceptional improvement in only 30 days.

Miami Beach Performs Its War Service

MIAMI BEACH, FLA. The exclusive Surf club, scene of lavish parties in pre-war days, has played its part in the war effort in more ways than one. Two years ago, of course, its only "members and guests" were personnel of the army air forces, for the spacious club and cabanas served for a year as barracks and mess hall. Since the club won its honorable discharge and returned to civilian life, the Red Cross work room has reopened, and many members have reported there regularly since the project was launched even before "Pearl Harbor." And now members have found still another way to contribute to the changing war picture.

Chicagoan Mrs. Cleaveland B. Putnam is one of the leaders. Serving with her as co-chairman is Mrs. Robert O. Bacon of New York and Newport. They head the committee of hostesses who entertain 50 service men each Tuesday at the club. Donations by Surf members support the program. Some of the service men are getting their second view of the club, for many trained here two years ago are now back as returnees attached to convalescent hospitals and ground and air forces redistribution centers at Miami Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Poor are at the North Shore for the remainder of the season. It is Mr. Poor's first visit to Miami Beach in three years. They are frequently seen at the Bath club, of which Mr. Poor was one of the founders, and president for 14 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. McCulloch are occupying their recently purchased home on La Gorce Island, and have as house guests Mr. and Mrs. Star Rogers of New York and Texas. Miss Clara Winn and sister, Mrs. John Kirchberg, are at the Broadmoor for the season, and are frequent visitors at the Surf club.

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Igoe of Chicago, who are at the Seaway, entertained at the Surf club Thursday night party recently, guests including their niece, Mrs. James Doody of Chicago, and Lt. Doody, U. S. N. R., who is studying here, also Judge and Mrs. John McSweeney of Chicago, State Sen. Raymond O'Keefe, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Butler of River Forest, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Gallagher of Winnetka.

Mrs. William A. Doyle of Chicago is spending the winter at the new Surf, and will be joined later by her daughter, Mrs. William G. Budinger, and Maj. Budinger of Glen View. Mr. and Mrs. Sherman J. Sexton of Chicago are at the Green Heron for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Ernest Guyton of Chicago are in their winter home near the Surf club, of which they are members. Near-by are their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hofman, also of Chicago, and young son, Harvey Jr., who have taken an apartment for the season.

Splendid Cough Relief Is Easily Mixed at Home

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.

To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen. Once tried, you'll never be without it.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is amazing. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you sleep. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

WHY BE FAT?

By Edith Weigle.

Mexico is still a land of violent contrasts: of sky-pointing, snowy peaks and deep valleys; of dry, arid plains and lush, green tropical regions. There is great wealth, and ever present, abject poverty.

Not so long ago two great painters told their country's history in murals that brought them fame around the world. All art lovers know the work of Diego Rivera and José Orozco. Known in this country, too, are Dr. Atl, Miguel Covarrubias, Roberto Montegro, and José Guadalupe Posada.

As yet, however, little publicity has been given to the group of younger Mexican painters, some of them still in their twenties, who show every indication of meriting the word "great." The work of at least one of them can already be compared to that of the titan Michelangelo.

• • •

Of young Guillermo Meza, MacKinley Helm in "Modern Mexican Painters" says: "It may appear that my enthusiasm for him has escaped the limits of control. I cannot help it. It is not often that a man is present at the emergence from whatever mysterious prelife, of a fresh, original and authentic character into the world of art. It does not often happen that a man can take another by the hand and say, 'This is my friend. He is going to be great.'"

We, too, felt that Meza had the potential qualities of a genius when we saw the first example of his work to be exhibited in Chicago. At that time substituting for the Tribune art critic, Eleanor Jewett, who was on sick leave, we ran a photograph of Meza's contribution to the 20th International Exhibition of Water Colors at the Art institute in 1941.

It was a small picture called "The Bathers," but it was remarkable for its perspective, its color and light, and its draftsmanship.

In Mexico City last December we asked Miss Ines Amor at her gallery at Calle Milan 18 to show us the current canvases of young Meza. She explained that it was almost impossible to keep a representative collection on hand, as most are sold even before they are finished.

• • •

Entirely self-taught, Meza is experimenting all the time with media and methods. He works furiously 10 hours a day.

He grew up in very humble surroundings. His father was a tailor, and for a while he was apprenticed to him. He never had any money. He was a cargador [porter or redcap] for a while. But even as a young boy he had a terrific urge to draw.

He showed some of his first efforts to Rivera, who encouraged him to go on by himself, and who introduced him to Ines Amor and her gallery. That was in 1939. She was at once impressed by his genius, as was Mr. Helm, then living in Mexico City and acquiring paintings for his collection and material for his book.

From that time on Meza could follow his bent. His work has been growing in stature ever since. It now has a power, a timeless quality and a beauty that are unique.

• • •

His subjects are widely varied. His most recent painting is a large picture, a study of five figures, called simply "The Washerwomen." They form a sort of rhythmic circle and are done in whites, blues, and yellows on gray. There is a subdued light over all that creates a feeling of mystery.

In an entirely different mood is a still life of airy, white Mexican flowers, little scarlet tomatoes and beets, all depicted in a manner as gay and spontaneous as the delicate sunlight that fills the canvas. In another medium is one of a series of studies done for a folio on the art of the dance. Each of the group represents a single figure, fantastic, and full of a vibrant, flamelike vigor.

Meza tried to capture on paper a breathless instant of whirling motion. He saw the movement of the dancer's arms as the flash of wings, and so depicts them as arms turning into the pinions of a bird.

• • •

He evidences this love of the fantastic again and again in his work. In the collection of Miss Katharine Ordway of New York City is a study of a woman, done in 1940. The artist has superimposed the eye of an animal, its horn and ears over the face of a lovely woman. He sees the beast in the beauty!

In contrast was a painting of a single figure, looking out to sea, done with all the quiet beauty and serenity of the ancient Greeks. This work is owned by Mrs. Charles Dillingham of Honolulu.

Fred Davis of Mexico City, collector and connoisseur, owns a fine portrait of a nude male figure. There is about all of Meza's painting an unswerving certainty of idea and a mastery of technique which, coupled with his originality and his imaginative quality place him even now in the top ranks of Mexico's painters.

Local Fashion Industry Holds Spring Show

By Rea Seeger.

Chicago designers and manufacturers, members of the flourishing Chicago Fashion Industries, again are presenting their spring and summer collections for the benefit of buyers from all over Chicagoland. With a special market week turned over to these visiting buyers, a double header fashion show featuring a roundup of representative models from many houses, the interest of all American shoppers again is stimulated with news and fashion pictures of the spring fashions to come.

The world famed Merchandise Mart is the center of interest, for in it are some of the top flight designers' swank showrooms, and in the future even more of the Chicago designers and manufacturers will have their own showrooms and workrooms.

This season buyers are swarming all over the place, not only appraising the various collections but giving orders that, according to experts, break all existing records. All the collections are exceptional, featuring clever new fashion ideas, new colors, and all available materials.

• • •

Chicago fashions are the equal of any produced in other sections of the country. They are streamlined American originals, cut, seamed, and fashioned for the wardrobe of the average American woman and the life she lives. There are simple wash dresses designed for the heat of summer that have the same chic of a more expensive silk or rayon model. There are swank sports and play suits for a complete summer under the sun, and there are sleek, smart town clothes of rayon, cotton, or wool that are the last word in sophisticated simplicity, each a distinctive model to flatter every one who wears them.

Prints, the last remaining few linens, all the washable colorfast cottons, piques, waffle weaves and ribbed textures, seersuckers, ginghams, and fast vanishing chambrays are featured. Equally interesting are the all-white summer fashions made of men's shirting or ribbed, fine crinkled seersucker. Others of cotton with a linen weave effect boast embroidered motifs and are used for jerkin type tops with slim black or navy skirts. Entire dresses of white have either embroidered patterns or a fine fluted frill down the front with a lace edge.

• • •

Plain gingham dresses and two-piece suits are plentiful, as are the gray and white and brown and white seersucker suits and dresses, especially priced for career girls. Simple, tailored one piece dresses also are of these effective cottons. The rayons are bright, sturdy, and wearable, for they have been treated to all the trick processes, assuring a nonwrinkled surface, nonsagging seams, and a perfect fit.

Suits and cape outfits of dress, plus a dashing, short swinging cape, come in smart, snappy black, navy, or brown and white checks of all sizes. Dress parade ensembles of wool and printed rayon; sleek, fitted jacket suits in fine wool, and all the newest models of spring coats make a super collection from the Chicago market.

Sketched are originals from the Chicago market, each from a well known manufacturer. They represent only four members of the Chicago Fashions Industries. Other collections have the same bright, new appeal. For further information call Superior 0200.

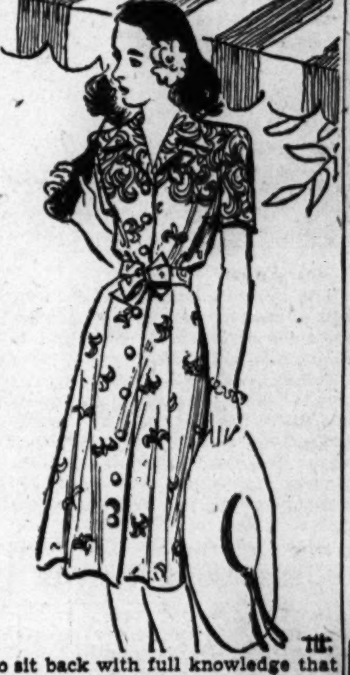
Now that summer print dresses are unpacked for those going to warm climates, the stay-at-homes are able to take advantage of the opportunity to acquire their hot weather wardrobes now. It's fun to sit back with full knowledge that you are well equipped to meet heat waves.



This good looking border print coat dress of spun rayon buttons down the front. It has a smooth vee neckline, broad shoulders, a material belt which ties with a bow in the front, and a sleek, well fitting gored skirt. Feathers and flowers form the design across the shoulders, with airy feathers floating down the rest of the dress. It is available in sizes from 9 to 15 and in lime and raspberry with white and gray print. Aqua and gray backgrounds have gold and white print.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 no trump	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of spades.

The advantage of playing 26 cards as a unit is so great that when a partnership has reached a point in the bidding within one trick of game, it usually pays to gamble it out on the theory that the "invisible trick" will be developed in the play. In this respect the declarer has a distinct advantage over the defenders, each of whom has in sight only one-half of the partnership assets. Where, however, the defenders succeed in developing good teamwork, and each attempts to visualize the other's holding, much of the defenders' disadvantage can be overcome.

The bidding of today's hand was short and to the point. South's no trump bid was standard, tho minimum, and North's three honor tricks justify his raise to three no trump. Note that he does not show any suits. One of the most common errors in bidding is the promiscuous showing of all sorts of suits when partner opens with a no trump. The reason generally assigned is, "Partner, if I showed my clubs I thought I would encourage you to go on with the no trump." The surest way to encourage partner to go on with the no trump is to raise it. This procedure has the added advantage of offering the defense less information upon which to base the opening lead. When partner opens with no trump, don't show suits unless you are especially anxious to play the hand at that suit. Remember that good suits take tricks at no trump.

West opened the queen of spades, which was taken in dummy with the ace. A small diamond was led and, had East thoughtlessly played low, the death knell would have sounded for West's spades. West could win with the ace and continue the spades, but declarer would hold up one round and now, when East was in with the king of diamonds, he would have none of his partner's suit to return.

East, however, realized that it was vital to establish the spade suit before partner's entry, if any, were extracted from him, and rushed right in with the king of diamonds, and cleared the spades. Since hearts failed to break, there was no way for declarer to obtain his ninth trick. East's play of the king of diamonds may, on the surface, appear daring. In fact, it is not so. If South has the ace and queen of diamonds, it is probable that the king will not win in any event, and declarer most likely will fulfill contract regardless of the defense. There is only a slight chance that the play will lose.

Lady of the House

A Lot of Mending.

The basket was so full I wondered where to begin. Would it be worth while to do all those holes in the socks once more? They were soft and evenly knit and really deserved another lease on life, however short.

What about this shirt? I could turn the collar but the cuffs were not wide enough to turn in the frayed edges without leaving Joe Pete's hands dangling like a neglected stepchild's in hand-me-downs. Since I am not expert in applying folds to bewhiskered cuffs, that must go into "salvage."

A suit of underwear has a lacy effect that suggests a wearing or two in milder days, but is not adequate for near zero weather. I itch to cut it into nice cleaning rags—until I recall the coarse, grayish garments I saw in the shops recently.

As I sort, discard, cut, and stitch, it suddenly occurs to me what an appalling lot of mending will have to be done—today, tomorrow, and all the tomorrows of many years to come—and how much of it women must do! Broken homes, torn bodies, hurt minds, bewildered spirits; great cities reduced to rubble, little towns blasted off the face of the earth; churches and schools burned to blackened ruin; ravaged fields, gardens and forests denuded of all beauty—a whole world tattered and torn.

I pick up another shirt, and as I see that, with the ragged parts sheared away, there is still enough sturdy cloth for a small garment, I begin to see a broken world slowly mended and made new. Useless and outmoded things discarded; new ones in their place. Crowded, grimy cities reaching out for green fields and clean air; bodies and minds restored by patience and love; churches and schools drawn closer to nature and true living; happy homes reëstablished; producing fields, growing forests, happy peoples.

It isn't a dream world, but—there's a lot of mending to do.

Honoring Lincoln's birthday Florence Denison feels it might not be amiss—just this once—to say a few words for—

Mary Todd Lincoln.

Across a tragic page of history
She passed, in bitterness and brooding fear.
Haughty and arrogant in her crinoline.
Within her tortured, bitter soul appear
Doubt and distress and desolate despair
Clouding a life that promised to be fair.
Yet the orbit of her obdurate will
Propinquity, ambition, love, or fate,
Drew with resistless power the soul of one
Destined to stand forever with the great.

Especially interested in our bit of Chicagoana [Jan. 7], Muriel Atkinson [who wrote words and music for "Private First Class," and has three sons overseas] gives us—

Bughouse Square.

Just boats adrift in a troubled sea,
Grasping at truths that seem to be.
Frustrated plans, beclouded goals,
Frenzied cravings of jetsom'd souls.
Strange ideas are fostered there.
Ah yes, you've guessed, it's Bughouse square.

Furtive plot, fantastic plans
Dreams of unrest from far-off lands.
Unable to live by thought or creed;
Goaded by ignorance, fear, and need.
Look up! Look up! in Bughouse square.

'Tis Christmas and the square is white
No strident voices pierce the night
But softly thru' the falling snow
The old stone church sends out its glow
And music from the Master's pen, brings
Peace on earth, good will to men.

Millions of women, using what is at hand, have contrived clever shopping bags and unique ways of bringing home the groceries. Here comes Rosetta O'Connor with her—

Little Cart.

Little pull car on two wheels,
You and I know how it feels
To roll along each busy street
And gladly stop when friends we meet.

Little cart, you bear the load
Of groceries, meats, as down the road
We go in line, you in the rear,
And I in front, with not a fear.

And when at least we reach home-stretch,
And in the house the rations fetch,
I look with love on your dear form
Which helps in sunshine and in storm.

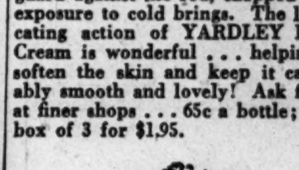
LD-LAX
of Battle Creek fame...

Here's a sketch of that helpful product developed at the famous Battle Creek Sanitarium—you know the one I've been advising as so wonderful when faulty elimination difficulties put a "crimp" in your looks, your vitality, and your good feeling! Name of it is LD-LAX and it's perfectly safe and sane . . . a bland combination of vegetable bulk, lactose, and dextrins that has a soothing and massage-like effect. Non-habit forming and containing NO irritating drugs. Why not try it? Ask for it at Marshall Field & Co., Pantry, Ninth Floor; or send a dime to Nancy Sasser, 271 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y., for a liberal trial sample.

Fashion leaves a lady terribly vulnerable to winter winds and cold, in three spots . . . that little strip of wrist between the coziness of her gloves and the warm comfort of her coat sleeve, and the bony parts of her ankle and shin. So watch these spots, particularly during February, and come to their rescue with YARDLEY Hand Cream, patting this pale pink liquid cream into your skin to guard against the red, chapped look exposure to cold brings. The lubricating action of YARDLEY Hand Cream is wonderful . . . helping to soften the skin and keep it caressably smooth and lovely! Ask for it at finer shops . . . 65c a bottle; or a box of 3 for $1.95.



If you haven't tried that beauty recipe I've so often reported as especially helpful for people whose skins have a tendency toward embarrassing blackheads and pimples from external causes, you're missing a big help! All you have to do is ask your Druggist for a cake of RESINOL Soap and a jar of RESINOL Ointment. Wash with mild, pure RESINOL Soap, and then apply the soothing Ointment. You'll be amazed at what comfort this medicated ointment brings to inflamed and itchy spots . . . at how it helps to loosen blackheads. RESINOL Ointment has other uses, too . . . it's so comforting in cases of chafing, chapping, small burns, and for the itching of dry eczema or simple rashes. Cost is low . . . the help given GREAT!

The darts of Dan Cupid are NOT for the young alone . . . but make certain that his target is usually radiantly young in appearance! That's why I know you'll want to use Bonne Bell "PLUS 30" Cream that's so desirable for women after 30 . . . URGENT when the forty-line is past! It contains natural estrogenic hormones which help replenish important hormone substances in the skin that begin to diminish when women are over 30. Cost is $3 for a 30-day supply . . . use a thimbleful on face and throat every night and your skin will FEEL younger and firmer within 30 days or less! Ask for Bonne Bell "PLUS 30" Cream at The Fair or the Boston Store . . . it's DEPENDABLE!

Ten-to-one it's happened to you . . . for it has to 'most every hostess! And how embarrassing when your favorite guest ruins one of your linen or upholstery treasures by unwittingly dropping a still-burning match! But never you mind,—matters will be different in a short time! Yes,—when the RONSON Company have taken care of our government's huge military orders for RONSON Pocket Lighters, they'll be making those stunning RONSON Table Lighters for us again . . . as necessary to "good" living as pepper and salt on the dining table, and as friendly a touch in the living room as a handshake! In the meantime, use RONSON top-quality Fuel, Flints and Wicks to conserve lighters you have of any make.

Skimp-Skipping?

Are you a "skimp-skipper" with your teeth every once in a while? If so, Valentine's Day has probably caught you at a disadvantage . . . for there's nothing that can ruin a lovely smile more than teeth which are not brushed at least twice a day. So no matter how busy you are, make it a rule never to skimp on your toothbrushing time and don't let any emergency make you skip it entirely. Do, however, make it a rule to use a dentifrice that does a real job every second's brushing you give your teeth. That's why I recommend LISTERINE TOOTH POWDER to you . . . containing high-speed energy ingredients that instantly surge into "whirl-pool" action without loss of time. The attractive, new, improved container is a time-saver, too . . . the special Prolon plastic "red-top" is shaped to make exact pouring easy so that you save precious powder as well as precious seconds. So why not ask your Druggist for LISTERINE TOOTH POWDER this week? Ask for the large Double Size; it saves you money! Compare its price with other well known brands.

Amolin CREAM

If you'll think back a few years . . . you'll realize that the increased use of a dependable deodorant has most certainly made the world a pleasanter place to live in! But I said DEPENDABLE . . . for there's nothing so sad as to be betrayed by the deodorant protection you've put faith in! That's why I again endorse AMOLIN Deodorant Cream for the trust you can place in it . . . it won't let you down, for this pleasant cream deodorant helps prevent perspiration odors from forming! AMOLIN vanishes quickly after you rub it under arms . . . and it won't spoil your dresses. Ask your Druggist for AMOLIN Cream . . . the DEPENDABLE perspiration-odor defense!

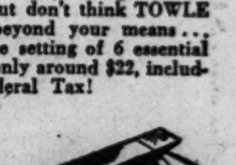
Ask for it at leading Department and Grocery Stores . . . only 25c a bottle!

Permanent Possessions!

"I Remember Mama" is fast becoming one of the most popular plays on Broadway . . . which shows that the dramatization of home memories has fully as much appeal as the Great White Way's "glitter" plays. By the same token, the selection of PERMANENT possessions for the home is immeasurably important . . . and the finest in SOLID SILVER is ever a good investment. Take those TOWLE Sterling Patterns, for instance . . . exquisitely designed, true to craft traditions that were begun in 1690. They bring the ideals of permanence, beauty and grace into any home. But don't think TOWLE Sterling is beyond your means . . . a whole place setting of 6 essential pieces costs only around $22, including 20% Federal Tax!



Here's one of the most attractive gift items I know . . . right in tune with the Valentine's Day theme of hearts and flowers! It's a miniature chest of 5 precious fragrances from HERB FARM . . . cool, tingling toiletwater to keep a lovely lady flower-fresh and sweet! The Quintessence Set costs only $1.25 (plus taxes) and includes Night Scented Stock, Green Moss, Royal Purple, White Phlox and Lilac. Ask for HERB FARM'S "Quintessence" at Marshall Field's.

Maybe you don't know it,—but ugly little cigarette nuisances can truly ruin your charm! For instance,—how can a girl look her neatest and prettiest when crumbs from her cigarette paper make a permanent snowflake on her subtly rouged lips? Or when dark tobacco crumbs spoil the perfection of her pearly white teeth? These are sufficient reasons for choosing VICEROY Cigarettes . . . for the VICEROY filter tip checks tobacco disturbances by keeping those tobacco particles IN the cigarette where they belong. More than this,—the filter tip checks resins, tars and other throat irritants, so that the smoke from the VICEROY blend of domestic and Turkish tobaccos comes through sweet, mild and clean! Patterns by Clotilde

Basic in spring wardrobes, these three fashions are easy to make with these simple patterns. One model is tailored, the second moderately dressy, and the third makes a blouse for the tailored Easter suit you're whipping up for Cissy, in case she doesn't have a smart one left from last year which needs a new blouse.

The jumper uses scalloping details for "something new" on the handsome wide shoulders and on the campacious pockets. The V neckline of the jumper top allows a bow tied blouse neckline to soften the lines of the general ensemble. The jumper may be of woolen, cotton, or crepe, and the blouse of crepe or cotton. Color and fabric contrasts have a holiday in this twosome.

The daytime frock, flattering to overweight figures, uses shirring cleverly in the bodice, keeps the shoulders broad, and streamlines the skirt with paneling. Dainty prints are definitely in order for this spring fashion.

Cissy's blouse takes to lace or ruffling in the Gay Nineties manner around the little girl collar and down the front closing. Sleeves may be either long or short. The same pattern goes strictly tailored, omitting the frills and converting the neckline.

Style No. 2831 is designed for sizes 12 to 46. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch fabric for jumper; blouse, 2⅜ yards.

Save Nutrients of Greens Thru Fast Cookery

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The winter winds may blow, but when you find dandelion greens at your grocer's as I did last week, you know that spring is on its way.

Dandelions aren't the only kind of spring greenery to be found in Chicago markets. There are mustard, collards, turnip tops, and of course, spinach.

Cooking greens is easy, but we must be careful not to overdo it or we'll spoil the bright color which makes these leaves so appetizing, and waste much of the precious nutrients.

The dandelion greens on the market now are big brothers to the ones we'll be digging from our yards when spring really is here. They're a cultivated variety, easier to clean because the leaves are large.

There's a general rule to be followed in cooking any kind of greens: Steam greens, by cooking them in only the water which clings to the leaves after washing, keeping the kettle tightly covered. Cook them until wilted and tender, no longer. Serve immediately, with any desired seasonings. And do not pour off any of the cooking liquid. There won't be much, but what there is will contain some of the minerals and vitamins of the green, and these should go down "the little red lane" with the leaves themselves.

Spinach with Mustard Greens.

An excellent combination of greens is equal parts spinach and mustard, cooked if possible with a little salt pork, or ham or bacon fat. Combine the well washed greens, put them into a heavy covered kettle with just the water left from washing, or a very little more, and three or four tablespoons of drippings, with a few fine bits of ham, bacon, or pork. Steam tightly covered not more than 20 minutes. Spinach alone will cook in less time.

Whenever you prepare any kind of greens it is well to hold out some of the leaves for the salad bowl. Fresh, crisp dandelion and spinach are especially good in a mixed salad.

Green leaves for salad never should be chopped or broken much in advance of serving time, for the cut and broken surfaces promote loss of food value.

Hot Bacon Dressing for Greens.

4 slices bacon, fried crisp and crumbled
2 green onions, minced
¼ cup lemon juice or vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne

Spinach with Rosemary.
[Serves four.]

½ teaspoon dried rosemary
2 tablespoons margarine
½ small onion, minced
Salt, pepper
1½ pounds spinach

Pour boiling water over dried rosemary in tea strainer. Add dried herb to margarine and let stand in warm place while spinach cooks. Cook spinach [well washed] in only water which clings to leaves, for about 6 minutes, or until wilted. Stir in onion, seasonings, and rosemary in margarine. Serve at once.

Dandelion and other greens may be treated in the same manner. There are other herbs which may be added to greens in cooking or with the margarine or drippings poured over them. These need not be steeped. They include fresh or dried parsley, chives, chervil. A whiff of garlic often adds to the savor of mixed greens. Nutmeg is about the only spice which can do anything for them. Usually the simpler the dressing, the better for the flavor of the good greens themselves.

TURN IN WASTE FATS FOR POINTS AND PENNIES!

Thru the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Skin dry? Then it's oil you need, in quantity and quality, that will sooth and smooth and help replace the precious natural moisture that exposure and the passing of time—inevitably deplete.

The woman with dry skin is not only annoyed by it because its flakiness and roughness mar her make-up. There's a deeper resentment against it, a feeling of desperation born of the knowledge that her complexion is growing old faster than she does. She knows skin that lacks oil is skin that is withering, even if only infinitesmally, from day to day, and the knowledge of that is distasteful, whether she is in her 30s or her 60s.

We certainly haven't reached the stage where a little pill or a shot in the arm will replace all the natural, precious skin oil that vanishes in varying degrees as one gets older. The best we've arrived at is represented by the fine scientific creams, applied externally, that help make up for the deficiency we almost all must cope with as time marches on.

Lately we've seen some remarkable results achieved by the use of one cream that claims—and it is most interesting that its claim remains unchallenged—to be absorbed by the skin. This is a blend of oils on which a great deal of research has been done; the aim of its makers was to reproduce in the oils certain vital substances in the ratio found in the skin tissues. It would take some one of far more scientific knowledge than we boast to say whether this has been done or whether, if it were done, it accomplished any great purpose in a cosmetic.

• • •

All we know is that for dry, crinkling skin these oils, blended into a cream of beautiful texture and interesting scent, do a remarkable soothing and smoothing job. The cream is to be used about twice a week by the woman whose skin is just a little dry, daily by the woman whose skin is tissue-thin and devoid of moisture. And, according to the makers, it should be left on from 20 to 40 minutes to accomplish its greatest good for the parched epidermis.

This is not an inexpensive cream, but it's an efficient and good one for the woman tormented by skin dryness, and it is certainly well worth a try if her skin condition is stubborn and of long standing.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

It pays to renovate a varnished floor at the first sign of wear, and little preparatory work is needed to re-varnish a floor if the old finish is not allowed to deteriorate to the point where it has worn thru to the bare wood. . . . A little ammonia or other strong cleaning agent can be added to the soap and water which must be applied to the floor with a stiff brush. . . . In this way wood can be well cleaned and cracks thoroly scrubbed. . . . Your paint dealer will have all the materials needed for such renovation. . . . A floor can be varnished any day in winter when the house is well heated. . . . We have prepared a leaflet on proper preparation of a wood floor for a new varnish coat and proper method to follow in application of the varnish.

If you wish this leaflet, please send stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Owners' Editor, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

For Younger Beauty ...

OILS OF THE WILDERNESS

MISS DENNEY'S technicians announce these scientific facts

1 For Beauty, your skin must have certain vital substances, called LIPOIDS.
2 LIPOIDS are essential to both young and mature skin.
3 Your skin can absorb LIPOIDS.

It is a correct scientific statement to say that OILS OF THE WILDERNESS can be absorbed by the skin.

OILS OF THE WILDERNESS is prominently displayed now in selected Cosmetic Departments.

[Have you some household help that lightens labor or conserves on materials? Is there some comfort you could enjoy? We will be glad to pass on your ideas to our readers. Address Louise Bargelt, The Chicago Tribune.]

Ethel H., Chicago—I have learned how to protect rolls of gummed paper so they won't adhere together in a solid mass and be made practically non-usable. I melt a little paraffin and coat the sides of the roll with it. This keeps moisture in the air from attacking the gummed paper, and yet the roll can be unwound when needed.

Mrs. Fred W., Racine, Wis.—When a cork falls to the bottom of a bottle and won't shake out, I pour a little ammonia into the bottle. This ammonia will "eat" away a part of the cork and in a couple of days or so I can shake out what's left of the cork.

It's A Woman's Right To Change Her Will

Has there been a change in the status of your family lately — a birth or marriage, perhaps? Or, if you have a son in the armed service, does your present estate plan provide adequately for his post-war financial security? And what about the investment clauses in your Will—are they sufficiently flexible to meet both current and future economic conditions?

It is often sound practice for a woman to change her mind—at least when it comes to Will revision and review.* In these uncertain times, new events are apt to make an estate provision obsolete. Any plan should be checked regularly with your attorney and trust officer.

Exercising your right to revise your Will today may mean much to your family, financially, later. We suggest that you visit this Bank for a talk with one of the officers of our Trust Department, without obligation. He will be glad to discuss the business aspects of your present estate situation with you, and may be able to offer constructive suggestions.

* The same reasoning applies to a man.
